Eden Urges New Plan

LONDON—Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, urges Hitler to make counterproposals to four power Locarno plan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 21.—How to frame most impressively Germany's protest against the proposals of the four Locarno powers for settlement of the Rhineland conflict, and whether or not Germany will submit counterproposals to keep the ball of negotiations rolling in Europe, was the subject of an extraordinary conference of German leaders tonight. It will be continued tomorrow. Reichsfuehrer Hitler summoned Joachim von Ribbentrop, his personal diplomatic envoy, from London to Berlin to advise the conference.

Gen. Werner von Blomberg, war minister; Admiral Erich H. A. Raeder, chief of staf of the navy; Konstantin von Neurath, foreign minister, and Friedrich Gaus, his legal adviser, participated in the meeting, but there was no doubt that Hitler will be the one to make the final decision.

Public Backs Hitler.

To judge by the demonstration staged in his honor this week-end there is little doubt that Germany is willing to abide by the Fuehrer's decision, be it for "complete isolation," which he has threatened, or for peace.

Hitler's decision will depend largely upon the replies which Von Ribbentrop brought to questions which the fuehrer fired at him in London for an hour over the telephone this noon.

While Von Ribbentrop was flying to Berlin, officials and diplomats in the German capital see-sawed between dark pessimism, reminiscent of the days when they learned the contents of the Versailles treaty, and fervent hopes that negotiations would be continued. Toward evening the optimistic side prevailed, though German officials frankly admitted that signs were ominous. For instance, the tank regiment of Wuensdorf, near Berlin, entrained for a city close to the Rhineland.

Seen as Defiant Gesture.

Some observers interpreted this as a gesture of defiance of the four power proposal that Germany send no more troops into the Rhineland, permit a force of British and Italian troops to police a 12½ mile German zone on the French and Belgian frontiers, and submit to a ruling by the world court on whether the Franco-Russian mutual assistance treaty violated the Locarno pact.

For the first time since the Nazis came to power the German press has been instructed to publish extracts of comment in foreign papers. This, Nazi leaders said, is to show "the foreign lack of understanding of the German cause." The feeling that Germany is being "persecuted by the world" again is being fanned systematically.

The clever handling of this feeling greatly helped Hitler to win the power he now holds in Germany, and he and his lieutenants are now trying to develop it into a steadily increasing feeling of self-confidence and power.

Push "Election" Campaign.

This is clearly evident in the campaign for the March 29 reichstag "election." The German people are requested to "vote" for Hitler, the new reichstag and "freedom and peace" by marking a cross on a ballot which lists only the names of the fuehrer, Rudolf Hess, deputy leader of the Nazi party; Wilhelm Frick, home minister; Gen. Herman Wilhelm Goering, air minister, and Paul Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister. There is no place for "no" and no choice of candidates.

Frick today completed a list of 1,035 candidates from among whom he will pick reichstag members according to the number of persons who voted for Hitler. It is expected that close to 700 candidates will get seats, with each 60,000 votes calling for one member of parliament.

BORAH LASHES OLD GUARD AND NEW DEAL HERE

Opens Campaign for Primary Votes.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho launched his Illinois campaign for the Republican nomination for President last night with an onslaught on the old leadership of the G. O. P. in Illinois and the nation, which in past campaigns, he declared, "did not respond to the humanitarian demands of the people."

In his attack on the old guard, Borah asserted that ten million voters were driven out of the Republican party by leaders who "sacrificed the party" for their own aggrandizement, and that the ten million will not come back to the old fold if the old leadership controls at the Cleveland convention in June. Borah said he had gotten into the race with the object of "rebuilding, rehabilitating and reinspiring" the party, and that he would not get out of the running "unless they throw me out."

The 10 Million Who Left.

His address was delivered at the Chicago Civic Opera house.

"During the last campaign," said Borah, "one million Republican voters in Illinois and more than ten million Republican voters in the nation went over to the Democratic party. These ten million had been reared under traditional party lines and were loyal in their sentiments as Republicans. Why did they go, and how can we get them back?

"We cannot get the ten million back by putting into power those who drove them out. And if you'll look at your leadership in Illinois you'll recognize faces of some of those who drove them out. If those men sit in the front row at Cleveland and dominate the convention, that ten million will never come back and more will join them."

Spikes Rumors of Bolting.

Borah, taking up rumors that he might bolt the convention if unsuccessful as a candidate, reminded his audience that he remained regular in 1912, the Bull Moose year.

"They have circulated these rumors here in Chicago and elsewhere that 'Borah might bolt,'" he said. "But I'm the only candidate now running who has any chance of winning, who has never bolted the party."

This was interpreted by the audience as inferentially a dig at Frank Knox, who is Borah's opponent in the Illinois preferential presidential primaries April 14, and who followed Theodore Roosevelt in the Bull Moose bolt of 1912. It also included Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas and others who whooped it up for "Teddy" those days.

Resumes "Absolute Freedom."

"I have no plan or purpose to bolt the Cleveland convention," continued Borah. "But I'm going to reserve the absolute freedom to look over their candidate and their platform."

Turning to the New Dealers, the Idaho senator dwelt upon the attacks on the Supreme court and the "disposition to grow restless against the established principles of government." When safeguards of the constitution are broken down, he said, it is "easy to step from the arena of individual liberty into that of supreme, arbitrary dictation." Greatest of all issues at present he held to be that of preserving the constitution and the courts as the refuge of free citizens against usurpation.

Lashes High Court's Critics.

Senator Borah said he had agreed with the Democratic party on more than one occasion. He said he supported its viewpoint of certain issues when he felt those issues were in the best interests of the American people. Then he lashed out vehemently at those who criticized the Supreme court and asked for changes in the constitution.

"In every great emergency, political or economic, we naturally grow restless against the established principles of government and some decide we must have radical changes," he said. "Ordinarily the fault lies not in the principles of government, but in the application and utilization of those principles.

"Our government is sufficient and efficient to render all services necessary to the American people. The

2 GOVERNMENTS AID BOY IN 10,000 MILE TRIP TO BEAT DEATH

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—Through coöperation of the American and Australian governments, 3-year-old Kelvin Rodgers will sail from Melbourne on April 20 for the 10,000-mile trip to Philadelphia to have a nail in his right lung removed.

The shipping board announced tonight free passage for the boy and his mother had been arranged on the government owned American Pioneer line's motorship Jeff Davis, due in New York on June 5.

Australian specialists have had the boy under treatment more than a year, but have been unable to remove the nail because of lack of special surgical equipment. Dr. Chevalier Jackson of Temple university hospital will perform the operation. Hospitalization and maintenance of the mother will be provided by the university hospital.

Kelvin is one of four children of a motor mechanic earning $20 a week, whose funds have been exhausted by the long medical battle against death unless the nail is removed soon.

Trunk Yields Millions, if It Can Be Cashed

Bay City, Mich., March 21.—[Special.]—There is a great to-do in Bay City tonight, and all over the question of whether the government owes a lumber heir here $55,147,000 in cash, or whether he merely has found some old family relics.

While rummaging through files of the Pitts Lumber company, which he inherited from his uncle, aunt, and mother, and which long has been defunct, Samuel P. Cranage, 72 years old, delved into an old tin-cornered trunk of the Civil war period. Great was his amazement to find five pieces of finely engraved paper—unquestionably government documents of some sort—four with a face value of 40 million dollars and the fifth with a face value of 15 million, 147 thousand dollars.

Bankers Disagree on Value.

The papers are yellowed with age, and now almost too dim to read. Bankers disagree as to whether the papers are government bonds or warehouse receipts for gold.

The four "bonds" for $40,000,000 were issued by an act of congress under date of May 1, 1871, according to their text. The fifth document purports to be a debenture in favor of Morgan Drexel & Co., Jay Cook & Co., or assignees. Its date is Sept. 9, 1873—just 11 days prior to the collapse of Jay Cooke's banking firm on "Black Friday"—the day which ushered in the panic of 1873.

Warmed by Hope; Chilled by Dread.

Mr. Cranage awaits, with alternate hope and dread, some official word from the treasury department at Washington in answer to his inquiry. And from Washington comes word that there are but two men in the entire government service capable of rendering expert opinion on the value of the "find." One of these gentlemen is in Atlanta, Ga.; the other is in Philadelphia, Pa.

"Can't do anything until Monday," says the telegram which Mr. Cranage turns over in alternately warm and chilly hands.

Infected Blister Causes an Operation on Cary Grant

PWA SENDS CHLORIDE OF LIME TO DISTRICT WITHOUT ANY FLOOD

White Plains, N. Y., March 21.—[Special.]—Westchester county officials were only mildly surprised today when they received word from the Public Works administration state offices in Albany that tons of chloride of lime were being rushed to Westchester for use in disinfecting flooded areas.

Westchester has no flood condition to speak of and none which even remotely could necessitate wholesale use of lime. In an earlier day allotment of such emergency supplies to combat a nonexistent trouble would have caused much mystification, but officials took today's announcement almost in their stride.

They had, in fact, half expected that Westchester, with its placid streams in their normal banks, would receive flood relief. Only last fall the county received an unexpected and unsolicited Works Progress administration allocation of $600,000 for malaria control projects. There hadn't been a native case of malaria in the county for years.

WAITERS WAR ON STIFF SHIRTS AND OPERA COSTUMES

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

COPENHAGEN, March 21.—Danish waiters have declared war on the stiff shirt and starched collar and on costumes that were at one time associated only with grand opera and fancy dress balls. They are demanding more comfort and dignity and less color in their working apparel.

Leaders of the waiters' union have begun negotiations with the principal restaurant proprietors of the city to get an agreement on a new kind of uniform.

The stiff shirt and collar they find uncomfortable in any weather and absurd on a hot day. They point out besides that the dinner jacket and the even more objectionable tails make it difficult to distinguish an attendant from a mere diner.

Pope Quits Vatican May 12 to Open Building in Rome

VATICAN CITY, March 21.—(AP)—Vatican prelates said tonight Pope Pius plans to leave the Vatican May 12 to inaugurate the new administration building of the Vatican, called the "Palace of Congregations," situated in the old section of Rome. The new building takes its name from the fact that executive committees of the Roman Catholic church are called "congregations."

Plan 2 Moves to Stay Death of Hauptmann

Trenton, N. J., March 21.—[Special.]—Two moves will be made next week to save Bruno Richard Hauptmann from death in the electric chair the night of March 31.

Defense Lawyer C. Lloyd Fisher, an authoritative source has disclosed, will ask for a new trial. Failing in that direction, Fisher will seek mercy from the court of pardons for the man convicted of kidnaping and killing the Lindbergh baby.

Unless Hauptmann wins one of the moves, or obtains an executive or judicial stay of execution, he will walk to the chair a few minutes after Charles Zied, Philadelphia gangster, is put to death.

Fear New Condon Flight.

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman has said repeatedly he has no plans to grant Hauptmann a second reprieve. He said if anything of a sensational nature should develop he would request Attorney General David T. Wilentz and Fisher to ask Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard to stay execution.

Fear that Dr. John F. [Jafsie] Condon may flee from home once more with the approach of Hauptmann's new execution date was manifested by Gov. Hoffman.

The governor's anxiety over the Bronx educator's slightest movements was revealed when a private investigator, presumably reporting to Hoffman, advised that Jafsie had evaded him and boarded a subway train.

Question Condon's Identification.

Fisher will base his application for a new trial on information uncovered by Gov. Hoffman since he became interested in the case. Of major importance, Fisher said, will be Hauptmann's statement that he frequented City island, the Bronx, through all of the summer of 1932, at a time when Condon used the island.

Fisher will make the point that Condon, who identified Hauptmann at Flemington as the man to whom he paid the $50,000 ransom on the night of April 2, 1932, had daily opportunities to see Hauptmann on the island, yet did not recognize him.

Condon had a real estate office, Fisher said, near the boathouse which Hauptmann used.

Counsel for the convicted man has confirmed a report that the governor was checking evidence purporting to show that the prosecution suppressed certain important Jafsie evidence.

Frederick Hahn, who on and prior to March 1, 1932, operated a lunch room in the vicinity of Hauptmann's Bronx residence, was one of the unproduced witnesses involved in this connection.

Before the Flemington trial, Attorney General Wilentz's aids insisted Hahn would be called to testify that he saw gold certificates hidden in Bruno's radio cabinet within a few months of the time the $50,000 ransom was paid.

Feared Cross-Quiz, Is Claim.

The reason Hahn, presumably a key prosecution witness, wasn't called, according to information now expected to aid Bruno, is that he would have been cross-examined on the report that Condon and Hauptmann had been observed in the restaurant on the very same evenings.

Hauptmann's lawyers contend that if such was the case—and if Jafsie actually sat at the same card table in Hahn's lunchroom with Hauptmann, as now reported—Jafsie should never have experienced any difficulty in identifying him or in giving a perfect description to the police. On this basis they now are prepared to at-

221,500 LEFT HOMELESS BY HAVOC IN EAST

Find 169 Dead; Loss 271 Millions.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(U. P.)—The United States weather bureau tonight issued northwest storms warnings along the Atlantic coast from the Delaware breakwater to Block Island off Connecticut. The disturbance is moving northeastward over New England and will be followed by rapidly rising pressure and strong northwest winds, probably of gale force by Sunday morning.

Floods at a Glance

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Total dead in 13 states—169.
Total homeless—221,500.
Total damage—$271,500,000.

The flood situation by sections:

OHIO VALLEY.

Blizzard intensifies confusion among thousands of homeless in eastern Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia: Pittsburgh still in darkness, but public utilities slowly being restored to normalcy; danger of high waters believed past in Pittsburgh area.

Flood crest expected at Cincinnati Monday noon. At Portsmouth, O., Sunday.

NEW ENGLAND.

Industry in Connecticut and Merrimac river valleys at standstill; rivers receding slowly, but new rains menace; 1,500 national guardsmen patrol Hartford, hit by worst disaster in its 300 year history.

NEW YORK.

Finger lakes inundate 300 summer homes and cottages in central New York; snow and slush hamper relief; department of health reports no signs of epidemic.

ELSEWHERE.

Delaware, Potomac and other streams which caused damage early last week recede. Streams in parts of North Carolina expected to reach flood crest today or tomorrow.

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

The unruly rivers roared fresh threats at people and property last night.

Behind them, in the 13 states through which they course, were 169 dead—a figure that was increased only by two since Friday. The energetic heroism of thousands of relief workers had much to do with that.

Already suffering communities in western Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia were buried under snow from five to twelve inches deep and rain was falling in the eastern part of the state. New England also has additional rains.

The immediate effect of the storm in Pennsylvania was to hamper relief work, but it was impossible to tell what effect melting snow would have on receding rivers. Cold added to the suffering of thousands driven from their homes or marooned there without heat.

Heroism Saves Thousands.

Behind them, too, were 221,500 homeless men, women, and children. Even that figure was admittedly conservative.

The property damage was at least 270 million dollars. There was little doubt but that it would rise much higher. If the loss to wage earners and to retailers is considered, together with the eventual cost of relief and rehabilitation, the money cost may exceed a billion dollars.

Receding at Pittsburgh.

The state which suffered most during the week of unprecedented flood—Pennsylvania—appeared last night to be past the worst. The waters of the Monongahela and Allegheny, which converge at Pittsburgh to form the Ohio, were falling.

But, downstream points became more and more alarmed. Flood stage of the Ohio river at Cincinnati is 52 feet. The river was at 53.8 at 11 p. m. last night and rising. It is expected to reach a crest of 59 feet tomorrow.

Still further downstream at Evansville, Ind., the Ohio was slightly more than one foot under flood stage of 35 feet.

New England continued its weary struggle against the flood, with more rain adding to the menace.

The Connecticut river was leveling off. Officials in the Connecticut valley were hopeful that they had seen the worst. They believed that even new rains would have negligible effect, because there were reports that the waters were receding upstream.

The Merrimac, which carried much misery and damage on its flood crest during the week, was receding, but slowly.

Epidemics menaced. There was scarlet fever at Southbridge, Mass., and at Amherst. All of the cities worst hit by the waters were alert to the menace to health.

There was martial law in dozens of places, not only in New England but in other flood struck states. Looters were promptly dealt with.

Industry throughout the Connecticut and Merrimac valleys was at a standstill. A dam in the Quinebaug river near Danielson, Conn., caused great uneasiness as the waters poured over it; and the people of Jewett City and Wauregan, below, were alarmed.

Many Cities Without Power.

Many cities from Connecticut to Maine were without power. The night was a night of darkness. Communication companies struggled unceasingly to undo the damage done to their lines.

Hartford, among all New England cities, has suffered most. The waters stand many feet deep in some places. Hundreds have been driven from their homes. More than 1,000 National Guardsmen were patroling the street last night, with 500 more expected. The Red Cross was caring for 2,500 persons. The damage in Hartford alone was estimated at 10 million dollars in the worst calamity the city has ever known in its 300 years of existence.

In New York state the six large Finger lakes, in the central part of the state, reached record flood levels. Three hundred summer homes and cottages were inundated. Greater damage was predicted. The waters were rising last night.

5½ Tons of Soil Taken from Valley Each Second

Amherst, Mass., March 21.—(AP)—Massachusetts State college agronomists estimated today the upper Connecticut valley was losing soil at the rate of five and a half tons a second. Enough to cover 20 acres seven inches deep every hour. Much northern farmland probably would be ruined, they added, but the broader valleys of Massachusetts and Connecticut probably would have deposits of rich soil as the flood subsides.

Robber Who Returns Money Must Have Mental Test

Judge J. M. Braude of the Municipal court ordered yesterday that Bernard Wilson, 19 years old, 1131 Ainslie street, be examined by the court psychiatrist. Last Wednesday Wilson held up Miss Callie Borah, clerk in a candy shop at 4554 North Clark street, and robbed her of $8. Later he returned to the store, returned half the money, explained it was more than he needed to pay a debt, and asked that the police be called.

Flood Isolated Father Hears Wife Has Twins

Milton, Pa., March 21.—(AP)—Charles Lontz, school teacher in Milton High school, understands he is the father of twins, but he can't confirm it. He heard over the radio that Mrs. Lontz gave birth to twins at the Williamsport hospital, where she was taken just before the flood waters isolated that city, 28 miles from Milton.

New York, March 21.—(AP)—Offices of Transcontinental and Western Air Lines announced today 5,000 pounds of food and serum was to be taken by air transport from Camden, N. J., to Pittsburgh today.

'HIGH WATER' IS ANNUAL EVENT IN OHIO VALLEY

Lowland Homes Prepared for Spring Flood.

Cincinnati, O., March 21.—[Special.]—Finding some cheer in reports that the Ohio river at the headwaters in Pennsylvania was falling, residents of Cincinnati and northern Kentucky towns immediately across the river were waiting tonight for the crest of the flood expected to arrive some time Monday.

Already the Ohio has spread into the lowland areas on both sides of the river with the gauge reading 53.8 feet, a rise of 5.4 feet in 24 hours, the greatest between Parkersburg, W. Va., and Cairo. Fifty-two feet is the official flood stage here, but areas now under water usually are each spring and thus far the rise is considered by most lowland residents merely as high water.

Expect 59 Foot Crest.

Farther to the east, from 100 to 150 miles up the river the river has reached considerably higher stages, climbing to 60 feet at some points, but here where the valley is wider and there is more opportunity for the stream to flatten out, a crest of 59 feet is the official prediction of W. C. Devereaux, government meteorologist.

Lowland areas in Cincinnati are occupied for the most part by factories and warehouses. People who reside in these districts do not comprise a considerable number and even these escape the ripping, smashing force of the river and are affected largely by infiltration of backwaters. This is the case particularly with Lunken airport, a 900 acre lowland tract located on low ground a short distance from the river, but now protected by a dyke to withstand more than 60 feet of water.

Coney Island race track and the amusement park on the river bank a few miles east of the airport were under water tonight as the river left its banks for the thirtieth time in 53 years.

To a large part of the residents of four Kentucky towns on the other side of the river, however, high water is a serious situation and a flood of 60 feet or more is a catastrophe. They have been in floods before, 1884, 1913, and again three years ago when the river went to 63.6 feet, but there is much suffering and considerable loss.

Move at Last Minute.

Many of these people own their meager homes. All they have in the world is represented by a small, modestly furnished house. When the flood warning is given they realize what it means to them, but they stay until the last minute before moving their furnishings to higher ground or to the second floor.

Most houses in the low areas of Newport, Covington, Bellevue and Dayton, Ky., are prepared for the flood emergency. Lower floors of the houses are equipped with trap doors or removable sections that are lifted as the water begins filling cellars.

This permits the water to rush into the rooms from below, but it prevents pressure from buckling the floors or floating the house off the foundation. Windows are opened to permit the water easy entry and to equalize pressure within and without. Thus is prevented the smashing of glass.

Evidence Gone by Summer.

When the flood recedes and houses again may be entered owners troop back, begin shoveling tons of mud out of their houses and off their premises. Hoses are played on the walls, inside and out, brushes remove the mud from walls and floors, houses are dried out and life is resumed. When walls and woodwork are thoroughly dry paper and paint is applied and by summer every trace of the flood has vanished. The people then sit back to await another spring and another flood.

Today the Ohio river from Marietta to Cincinnati seemed an endless lake. From the surrounding hills everywhere was water up and down the valley. Moving with its irresistible force the river's crest swept into Huntington on the West Virginia side. Here 57 feet was predicted. Merchants had time to remove their stocks and 2,500 residents of the low area were safely out of their homes.

Ironton will be next to feel the crest, estimated at 56 feet, but Ironton is a little higher and only a small section will be flooded. By midnight rivermen expect 60 feet of water at Ashland, the thriving industrial city on the Kentucky side of the river. This stage will send water over much of the business section of the city.

Portsmouth is looking for 59 feet of water with no concern since a 60 foot flood wall has been constructed to protect the city as a result of experience suffered in 1913.

Maysville, Ky., where the valley is narrower, is preparing for several feet of water in the streets of the business section, but in this narrow town, which spreads along the river for nearly a mile, most residences are located safely on high ground, never yet touched by the rampaging Ohio.

Augusta Deeply Concerned.

Most concern is felt at Augusta, Ky., a few miles below Maysville, where warning has been given to expect a crest of 65 feet. This stage would cover half the town of 1,800 residents.

Farther up in the Ohio valley where earlier in the week 17 persons lost their lives and uncounted millions of damage was caused by water, the river was receding rapidly today, although in the panhandle of West Virginia a wet snow was falling and what effect this would have upon the Ohio river only could be guessed.

In West Virginia from 300,000 to 500,000 persons were homeless today. State officials began a survey of the needs for repairs and other assistance. On Wheeling Island where 10,000 were driven from their homes it still was impossible to ascertain how many houses have been ruined completely or carried away, but it was believed a careful check of the damage could be made by Monday.

Louisville in Path.

Force of the flood will begin to be felt in Kentucky and Indiana towns below Cincinnati by the middle of the week. Moving at the present rate the crest will reach Louisville about Wednesday.

Without additional heavy rains the river will move out into the Mississippi with little more than the usual spring "high water" against which precaution has been taken and by next Saturday Cairo at the mouth of the Ohio, should have 47 feet of water, 7 feet over flood stage, but 13 feet less than the danger mark against which levees protect the city.

Shushing Old Timers

Old timers in Pittsburgh, Pa., who boast about the flood of 1907 were silenced last week when former high water marks were submerged. C. F. Goettman, department store official, points to the ten foot line which marks the stage of last week's flood. Below is plate marking level of 1907 flood, only 29 inches from sidewalk.

TROOPS RULING HARTFORD; CITY IS IN DARKNESS

River Is Falling Slowly, Officers Report.

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

Hartford, Conn. March 21.—(AP)—Khaki clad National Guardsmen, their numbers augmented by fresh troops, took virtual control of Hartford tonight with orders to be especially vigilant against vandals in the darkened, flooded area.

Determined to maintain order at any cost during the trying period of rehabilitation, Brig. Gen. William F. Ladd, Connecticut National Guard, asserted:

"We've got to do more extensive patroling. We will keep particular watch for looting due to threats made by hoodlums."

Reënforcements Arrive.

Reënforcements began arriving from armories in New Britain, Meriden and Bristol where the cheerful news spread through the semi-paralyzed and harassed city that for the first time in three days of unprecedented flood destruction the Connecticut river had begun to drop slowly.

Tonight, relief and rehabilitation agencies faced these problems among others:

Restoration of electric power for homes, streets and industries.

Care of the steadily increasing number of homeless, estimated at more than 5,000.

Repair of damage along the river area which veterans of the last previous flood—that of 1927—said would approximate $10,000,000.

Prevention of food and fuel shortage, and spread of disease.

Weather Is Clearing.

Boston, Mass., March 21.—(AP)—Clearing weather over large areas gave some promise of surcease from New England's worst flood tonight, but through the lower reaches of two of her largest and most populous river valleys water still raged high.

At Hartford, Conn., on the Connecticut river, and at Lowell, Haverhill and Lawrence, Mass., on the Merrimack, scenes of indescribable devastation met the eye on every side.

In Maine, the Saco raced across the state at the highest level in its history although other rivers had started to recede.

In Massachusetts, aside from the damage which river water continued to wreak, two important focal points of danger remained.

One was at the 65 foot Miller's river dam near the Montague-Erving line, just above where the streams adds its waters to those of the Connecticut.

The other was at Webster lake.

DEATH CHAMBER IS FLOODED; SLAYER TO GET NEW REPRIEVE

Wethersfield, Conn., March 21.—(AP)—Swirling flood waters brought promise today of a reprieve for John Siemborski, convicted slayer of a New Haven policeman. He is under sentence to be hanged March 24.

If the reprieve is granted it will be the 28 year old youth's fourth since he was sentenced to die by hanging at the state prison in Wethersfield.

Prison officials notified the office of Gov. Wilbur L. Cross today that the flood waters were 18 inches deep in the execution chamber. The governor was expected to act soon.

Dust Flying in Oklahoma; Report Wheat Is Damaged

Guymon, Okla., March 21.—(AP)—Flying dust reduced visibility to less than a city block in the Oklahoma Panhandle today. The dust began rolling in at Guymon this morning, increasing in intensity until streets were coated. Beaver and Boise City also suffered.

"This is just another dust storm," said County Agent Bill Baker of Cimarron county. "The wheat is being damaged. We have to have moisture."

FLOOD STRICKEN EAST PREPARING FOR RESTORATION

Federal Aid Is Sought by States, Cities.

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 21.—The eastern states pressed swiftly for reconstruction of flood-wrecked property on a vast scale today, aided by President Roosevelt's $43,000,000 allocation to the WPA for flood repairs and replacements in stricken areas.

Incomplete tabulation showed that states and cities already were seeking federal funds totaling $43,100,000.

The status of reconstruction by regions:

PENNSYLVANIA.

Gov. Earle asked the federal government for $10,000,000 flood-reconstruction appropriation. Heat, gas, and light still crippled in many eastern Pennsylvania sections. Workmen digging the mud out of houses in several towns.

Johnstown seeks $10,000,000 fund for own needs.

Tons of wreckage being removed from Pittsburgh; business firms arrange immediate repairs for ruined structures; water and power systems expected to be repaired within forty-eight hours.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Officials plan to ask congress for $100,000 to repair parks; 700 men cleaning up the waterfront; dikes to be leveled beginning Monday.

CONNECTICUT.

More than 2,000 WPA workers sent into flooded areas to help strengthen dikes and bridges, and for rehabilitation work as cities and towns direct. Method of financing rehabilitation not arranged. State highway department working on plans to restore roads.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Governor asks $8,000,000 federal appropriation for flood relief, and $6,000,000 bond issue for reconstruction of roads and bridges. Food, clothes, and medicine being provided from $750,000 voted today. Force of 20,000 to 30,000 WPA men now fighting flood ready to turn to reconstruction.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Governor and council to meet Monday to consider appointment of emergency council to direct reconstruction work.

NEW YORK.

Immediate expense of reconstruction estimated at $5,000,000. Will be financed partly by $2,000,000 flood fund of upstate WPA, and in Binghamton area by $55,000 Red Cross money, $26,000 private contributions, and $116,000 WPA fund. State expects to spend up to $500,000 repairing roads and bridges. A force of 5,000 men repairing highways and moving flood fugitives back into homes.

OHIO.

Senator A. V. Donahey of Ohio asserts congress should provide at least $10,000,000 to aid flood victims in Ohio and other states. Rehabilitation plans for Ohio river valley not definite. Mills, mines, potteries between East Liverpool and Bellaire estimate ten days needed for cleaning out débris before computation of damage.

POTOMAC VALLEY.

Cleanup starts, preliminary to reconstruction; $5,000,000 sought from federal funds; $1,500,000 flood sufferers' appropriation, and $3,200,000 for roads and bridges pending in Maryland state legislature.

PENNSYLVANIA ROAD RESTORES PASSENGER RUNS ON OWN TRACKS

All the regular passenger trains of the Pennsylvania railroad resumed service yesterday, according to Vice President H. E. Newcomet, and will make their runs to and from all eastern points on Pennsylvania tracks.

Mr. Newcomet said that no bridges on the east-west main line of the road had been washed out and that there was only one complete washout of the tracks in the worst flood of the present generation in the Johnstown and Pittsburgh districts. During the worst of the flood period the Pennsylvania trains were rerouted, but Mr. Newcomet asserted that work crews had repaired all damage so that safe operation is assured.

From eastern points came reports that telegraph and telephone service in the Pennsylvania areas that suffered from the high water was much improved, but that conditions in New England, particularly north of Portland, Me., were growing worse.

SNOW AND COLD HAMPER RELIEF IN PITTSBURGH

Flood Refugees Facing Pneumonia Threat.

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

Pittsburgh, Pa. March 21.—(AP)—Heavy snows buried the prostrated cities and towns of western Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia today while an army of relief workers fought to restore order along the trail of the devastating flood waters that claimed at least 100 lives and caused damage estimated in the hundreds of millions.

The latest siege of the elements—a blizzard that swept the area with snow from 5 to 12 inches deep—intensified the confusion among the homeless thousands, but brought a day of hope that it might stem the threats of fire and disease, except pneumonia, to those suffering from exposure.

Utilities Nearing Normal.

Utilities in the steel metropolis slowly were returning to a semblance of normalcy and engineers hoped to restore lighting facilities and relieve the acute shortage of drinking water. Pittsburgh still is in darkness.

The desolation remained frightful in scores of communities along the valleys of the Ohio, Monongahela, and Allegheny rivers as Red Cross workers and other rescuers dug through heavy débris ever fearful new victims might be found to add to the staggering toll.

Western Pennsylvania's death total stood tonight at 83, including 56 in Pittsburgh. The number of lives lost in the area around Wheeling, W. Va., rose to 18 with the recovery of three more unidentified bodies in a demolished structure on Wheeling Island, in the middle of the Ohio river, where many residents refused, even at the crest of the flood, to embark in rescue boats.

Hundreds in Hospitals.

Hundreds of injured lay in hospitals. Thousands will huddle Sunday in churches, schools, public buildings, and makeshift relief headquarters. Other thousands of idlers roamed the streets of the flood besieged towns, several of which were patroled by National Guardsmen to prevent pillaging of wrecked buildings.

Chaos yielded on most fronts. The snow demoralized trafic, but thousands of WPA workers attacked the tons of débris in the flood racked buildings to start the wheels of rehabilitation turning. The department of health in Pittsburgh moved to meet the sanitation problem and announced enough typhoid antitoxin on hand to immunize 400,000 persons. Serum and food were on the way from other cities.

Six thousand WPA workers took up the job of clearing the streets of devastated Johnstown.

Rain Followed by Cold.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 21.—(AP)—Angry nature, her smashing flood waters partly withdrawn, sent storms and cold over eastern-central Pennsylvania tonight, adding new misery to the death and damage wrought by surging rivers.

All-day rains and lowering temperature in most of the stricken zones, where at least 32 are dead, were followed by a threat of snow and sleet over the week-end, halting any hopes of reconstruction and hampering activities for the relief of the widespread suffering.

In communities patroled by the military to guard against looting or activities which may result in spread of disease, refugees returned to take stock of the ravages left by the rampant Susquehanna and Juniata rivers through the heart of the Keystone state.

NEW FLOOD FEAR SENDS JOHNSTOWN RESIDENTS FLEEING IN TERROR

As soon as residents of Johnstown, Pa., had flocked back to business district after worst of flood waters had receded, an erroneous report was spread of breaking of Quemahoning dam. The inhabitants fled in panic and within an hour the riverside area was deserted. Collapse of a smaller barrier gave rise to report that the Quemahoning had burst. State troopers then urged people to stay out of danger zone lest dam give way later. [Universal Newsreel Photo.]

VIVID PICTURE OF FLOOD TOLD IN BOY'S DIARY

[Copyright: 1936: By the United Press.]

Wheeling, W. Va. March 21.—[U.P.]—James Sample, 14 year old high school freshman, was trapped with his mother, Mrs. Louise Sample, in the second floor of their home on flood ravaged Wheeling Island for three days and nights.

He kept a diary until just before he and his mother were rescued today. The death, destruction, and desolation spread by the torrent are vividly related in his account. The diary follows:

"Water raised to barely flood stage. Wednesday rose to 48.5 feet in few hours. Everybody is moving, getting ready for the worst flood in the history of the Ohio valley. We have to move to second floor. The people at Yenke's went to town. We are using their apartment.

"Thursday, 20 minutes till 7. Water in first floor. No electricity. Water rising fast. Water everywhere except hill. Very cold. Snows part of time, then rains, then stops. Houses are floating down water. There goes the tabernacle—about 7:30 [7:30 a. m. Thursday] toward back river.

"The building [tabernacle] is nothing but broken wood. It is pulling wires down—snapped a telephone pole off—sparks and noises coming from wires, our back steps are going. The water is about 55 feet. Breakfast over—all gas was shut off—no more heat. Barns, homes, garages, barrels, tanks, barges, dirt—all kind of mess coming down.

"The water sounds like a high wind blowing past. God help every one that needs it. Birds are without food. Our big furniture is in the water downstairs. There is no communication on the island.

"On Wednesday any one and every one was in each other's homes and stores packing up. A large amount of damage is done. Our front porch is being torn apart.

"Mother is so nervous and crying—afraid the house will go. As I look out the window, water is covering first floors.

"Five more houses are coming down. A boat just picked up two boys, two dogs, one man, about 12:00. Ate, still plenty cold.

"Another large green house just went down the river. Leiners next door are getting out. A land plane just flew over.

"The water seems to be at a standstill. Maybe everything will be O. K. That plane flew back over. Next door people all out. The electricity is on. Some trees smashed the roof off a house up street. Electricity is off again. They brought us a blow torch to cook with. Pretty cold. We are still sticking. We have to. No matter how much money we would have it wouldn't do us much good.

"We found an electric coffee urn up here before electricity went off—had salmon and onion sandwiches and coffee. Hope this water goes down soon.

"It is getting dark—7:00.

"We seem to be the only ones up here. It is pretty dark now. I went to bed as soon as it was too dark to see. It was real spooky in the dark, with weird noises.

"Got up at 7:30 Friday. The water had receded below our first floor. Looked out the window, saw porches, garages gone and trees pushed down. Began cleaning out downstairs; mud about half foot thick on floors and everything."

STABBED TO DEATH IN QUARREL.

Eugene Judge, 28 years old, 3704 Cottage Grove avenue, was stabbed to death early yesterday by Gus Moore, 40 years old, 3807 Rhodes avenue, during a quarrel in a drug store at 3640 Cottage Grove avenue. Both are colored.

ADDS 25 MILLION FOR FLOOD AID IN STRICKEN AREAS

Roosevelt Delays Journey South Third Time.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 21.—Special.—President Roosevelt this afternoon allocated 25 million dollars to the Works Progress administration for the repair or replacement of publicly owned utilities or property destroyed or damaged by the floods.

The 25 million allocation, which is in addition to an emergency allotment of $18,411,633 made Feb. 29, will be apportioned to the stricken states as needed. The previous allotment was made in anticipation of flood conditions.

Today's authorization was made as Mr. Roosevelt postponed for the third time his fishing trip in Florida waters to continue personal direction of rehabilitation of flood areas. He now expects to get away from Washington tomorrow afternoon.

Dern Tells of Problems.

The sum was asked by Secretary of War Dern, chairman of the national emergency flood relief committee, to combat the spread of disease in the flood areas. Dern told the President that the chief problem now is one of rehabilitation and guarding against disease.

Before making the allocation Mr. Roosevelt discussed the problem with WPA Administrator Hopkins. Hopkins estimated 250,000 men will be on the projects by Monday and that this work would be given the right of way.

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that, with the exception of food and clothing being furnished by the surplus relief corporation, direct relief needs will be met by the Red Cross and local welfare agencies. WPA funds generally, he said, would be spent in reëstablishing public improvements.

Feels Funds Are Ample.

The White House made it clear that the President feels there are sufficient relief, public works, Red Cross, and other funds available to meet the situation without any special congressional appropriation at this time. Several proposals for appropriations up to 50 million dollars have been advanced in congress.

Secretary Dern reported that the situation generally has improved, except in New England and Pennsylvania and in Kentucky where the worst is yet to come.

"We have many reports of people being stranded in New England and in Kentucky and the army is moving families from the path of flood waters," Dern said. "Elsewhere the waters are going down and the more serious matters are now rehabilitation, relief, and disease control."

Going Direct to Florida.

If he leaves the White House tomorrow, Mr. Roosevelt will go direct to Winter Park, Fla., to receive an honorary degree at Rollins college Monday morning. This afternoon he will board the presidential yacht Potomac somewhere near Fort Lauderdale. He cut a one day visit to Warm Springs, Ga., from the schedule, but hopes to visit the infantile paralysis resort he founded on his return to Washington.

SNOWSTORM HITS FLOODED PITTSBURGH

REP. SATTERFIELD IS GRANDFATHER OF MORE TWINS

Salt Lake City, Utah, March 21.—(AP)—Idaho State Representative A. Y. Satterfield is a "double grandfather" for the second time in a month. Mrs. William Boyatt, a daughter, gave birth to twin sons in a Pocatello hospital yesterday. A month ago, Mrs. R. S. Satterfield of Salt Lake City, wife of the representative's son, presented her husband with a boy and a girl. Satterfield also has a brother, two sisters, and another daughter who are parents of twins.

FLOOD PHOTOS GO OVER WIRES; PORTABLE USED

New York, March 21.—(AP)—Flood pictures were sent today from the heart of Pittsburgh over the wirephoto network of the Associated Press by use of portable transmitting equipment. It was the first field demonstration of the recently developed machine.

The laboratory model of the transmitter was flown to Pittsburgh from New York, accompanied by Harold Carlson and J. C. Barnes of the Associated Press research and development laboratories. In Pittsburgh the equipment was set up, linked to the network, and Associated Press staf photographers this morning began feeding pictures into the wirephoto circuits through it.

The portable equipment transmits a picture 4 by 5 inches, which is received at regular wirephoto stations as an 8 by 10 inch picture.

The photographers and technicians worked under almost impossible conditions. Electric lights and power were not available, and candles and automobile storage batteries had to be used.

FIRE DESTROYS PEORIA CHURCH, SHRINE TEMPLE

Peoria, Ill., March 21.—(AP)—Fire tonight destroyed the historic First Congregational church and the adjoining Mohammed Shrine temple with a total loss, Fire Chief Ben Butler estimated, of between $250,000 and $300,000.

Police investigated the possibility that the fire might have been incendiary. Albert Sewell, church janitor, and Louis Gibson, a resident in the neighborhood, both said they saw a young man stagger from a rear exit an hour before the church fire was discovered.

Two men, both of whom Chief Butler said had been drinking, were seized for questioning by police.

Chief Butler said the church, built in 1881, was destroyed, while the rear part of the temple, erected at a cost of $150,000, was in ruins.

Sherif Marcus Olson of Peoria county, a member of the Masonic order, saved that organization's records, which were kept in the temple.

WATCHMAN SEIZES BURGLAR.

Norman O'Grady, 24 years old, 2841 Dickens avenue, was captured by a private watchman early yesterday after he had broken into a meat market at 2820 Armitage avenue.

Red Cross Here Renews Plea for Cash to Aid Flood Area

James T. Nicholson, manager of the Chicago chapter of the Red Cross, renewed yesterday his plea for coöperation in raising the city's quota of $225,000 toward the national Red Cross goal of $3,000,000 to aid eastern flood victims.

Mr. Nicholson reported that at noon yesterday only $10,972.24 in general contributions had been received, aside from donations of $25,000 by the International Harvester company and of $16,000 of Swift & Co. He said Detroit had raised $45,000.

"Since the first call for help went out," said Mr. Nicholson, "the number of homeless and those under our care has more than doubled. Before Monday the number will probably reach 300,000. We need money, not clothing or provisions.

Where to Send the Money.

"Contributions should be made out to the Red Cross Relief Fund, and sent to the American Red Cross, Chicago chapter, 616 South Michigan, or to the local Red Cross chairman if you are in the suburbs."

Most of the contributions, he said, have come from the people least able to afford to help. But these small checks will not be enough. Mr. Nicholson asked for generous coöperation by large corporations and business houses, if Chicago's to reach its $225,000.

Added impetus was given the drive yesterday, Mr. Nicholson declared, by voluntary collections of employés' groups in civic, service, business, industrial, and governmental organizations. The Rotary club donated $500.

Small Pay but Big Gifts.

In one little State street store a girl clerk placed a donation box on her desk as the employés received their small weekly pay envelopes. When she opened the box there were four new $5 bills in it.

Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes yesterday forwarded to Washington $225 raised by employés of his office. Gov. Horner joined in appealing to the citizens of Illinois to contribute liberally.

In the last few days Chicago milk dealers have sent seven cars of milk to Boston for distribution through New England.

Packing Houses on the Job.

Chicago packing houses adopted emergency measures to supply meats for the stricken flood districts.

When the first news of the flood went out from Johnstown and Pittsburgh last Tuesday night Swift & Co. had about twenty refrigerator cars and two dozen trucks bound for eastern cities from its Chicago and western packing plants. They carried more than a million pounds of fresh beef and pork, smoked meats, poultry, butter, eggs and other food products. All were located en route by the company, stopped and diverted immediately to Pittsburgh and other flooded cities nearby.

At the same time caravans totaling more than twenty additional trucks were rushed from Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland under police escort to the stricken area.

MOTHERS' CLUBS TO EXHIBIT.

BRITAIN URGES COMPROMISE IN LOCARNO CRISIS

May Put Neutral Troops in France Also.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 21.—Joachim von Ribbentrop, special ambassador of Reichsfuehrer Hitler to the league of nations council meetings which considered the situation arising from Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland in defiance of the Versailles and Locarno treaties, flew to Berlin today to consult with the Fuehrer and advise him of the last week's events here.

COL. JOSEPH BECK.

Hitler's reply to the proposals of the four Locarno powers—Great Britain, France, Belgium, and Italy—for a solution of the conflict is not expected before Monday, and possibly later.

Von Ribbentrop, before leaving, conferred with Col. Joseph Beck, Polish foreign minister, and other diplomats. He declined to say when he would return to London and he refused to discuss Hitler's reply, merely remarking: "We must hope for the best."

Ethiopian Problem Up Next.

Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, who had expected to remain in London over the week-end for possible discussions with Von Ribbentrop, left for Chequers to be a guest of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin. Eden will return to London tomorrow afternoon.

Other diplomatic talks were going on tonight among delegates of the powers represented on the league council. Most of the French delegation is remaining in London over the week-end. Pierre-Etienne Flandin, French foreign minister, is expected to return Monday for a session of the sanctions committee of 13 [the league council minus Italy] on Italo-Ethiopian peace proposals.

Germany's reply to the Locarno proposals is expected to be negative, but to leave the door open for further negotiations. Hitler may make some counter proposals. It is expected he will reject the proposal for a 12½ mile zone inside the German border to be policed by British and Italian troops. It is understood that Germany was not expected to accept this proposal and that the French are willing to listen to counter proposals on the subject, as well as on the submission of the Franco-soviet mutual assistance treaty to the world court for a ruling as to whether it violated the Locarno pact.

British Public Aroused.

The international zone proposal is all the more likely to be abandoned due to rising political opposition to the idea in London. Many sections of public opinion in Great Britain oppose the proposed military agreement to become effective if Germany refuses outright to accept the proposed terms and discontinues the talks.

Foreign Secretary Eden urged Von Ribbentrop before the latter left for Berlin to prevail on Hitler to submit counter proposals. Eden emphasized that the four power proposals were not intended to be final.

The storm of anger in the German press over the proposals is expected here, it was said, to be only a part of the ups and downs to occur before negotiations get fairly under way.

If the league council's discussions are held up next week through delay of the German reply, it is expected the council members, who are also members of the league's committee of 13, will spend their time examining proposals for peace in East Africa.

The Portuguese minister saw Eden today about the project to redistribute Portuguese and other African colonies to appease Hitler's land hunger. The government of the Union of South Africa has joined with the Portuguese in resistance to this project, it was learned. The South African minister in Paris recently went to Lisbon to confer on a common line of defense. The Portuguese and South Africans threaten to call a pan-African congress to discuss the mandate problem.

BIG VICTORY CLAIMED FOR ETHIOPIAN TROOPS LED BY HAILE SELASSIE

ADDIS ABABA, March 21.—[U. P.]—A sweeping victory by Ethiopian warriors over Italian troops on the northern front north of Amba Alaji was claimed today in reports received here. Emperor Haile Selassie was reported to have participated actively in the fight.

A communique said 27 women and children were among the casualties in an Italian gas and bomb attack from the air on Yerga Alem, near the northern front, and that the Norwegian ambulance in the vicinity was protesting to Geneva against the "inhuman act."

Protests Italian "Atrocities."

LONDON, March 21.—(AP)—Wolde Mariam, Ethiopian minister at Paris, sent two notes to the league of nations today protesting against alleged Italian atrocities in Ethiopia, such as gas bombings, and urging the continued application of sanctions against Italy.

GERMAN POLICE ARREST SON OF PRINCE OF PLESS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 21.—Count Bolko von Hochberg, son of Prince Henry of Pless and the famous British born Maria Theresa Cornwallis-West, who was a favorite in the court of former Kaiser Wilhelm II., has been detained by the GSP [secret police] in Berlin since yesterday. The 26 year old count, has been trying to get into the movies as an actor.

Count Bolko has been involved in several romances, the most spectacular of which was with Princess Ileana, the daughter of Queen Marie of Rumania. Ileana is now the Archduchess Anton of Austria. Rumanian court dignitaries broke Bolko's engagement to Ileana by exposing details of a scandal near the Castle Pless in which the count was compromised and narrowly escaped legal punishment.

The Pless family is just recovering from the shock of the marriage of Count Alexander Hochberg, elder brother of Bolko, to his own stepmother. Prince Henry of Pless divorced his first wife after 31 years of marriage. In 1925 he married a Spanish-Dutch aristocrat, Senorita Clotilde de Silvay, 26 years old. She was 37 years younger than her husband. They were divorced shortly afterward and Count Alexander married his stepmother. Prince Henry's divorce was recognized only yesterday by a court in Poland where he lives on one of his many estates.

Police See Divorcee Leap Into Lake and Save Her

A woman who identified herself as Mrs. Irene Terrio, 24 years old, a divorcee registered at the Saratoga hotel, was rescued by two park policemen yesterday after she took off her coat and dress and leaped into the lake at Monroe street.

FRANCE DRAFTS SANCTIONS PLAN TO USE ON NAZIS

PARIS, March 21.—(AP)—France may seek sanctions against Germany, officials indicated, if Reichsfuehrer Hitler rejects the Locarno treaty signers' new plan to keep his soldiers away from the Rhine.

Hitler's defiant refusal to "abandon one inch" of Germany's "rights" in his speech at Hamburg yesterday was taken by French officials as a warning that peace will be difficult.

Cabinet Discusses Defense.

The cabinet discussed France's air defense today along with the diplomatic moves to counteract the German troops' reoccupation of the demilitarized Rhineland. It heard from the air minister, Marcel Deat, the condition of the French flying forces.

Pierre-Etienne Flandin, French foreign minister, declined to discuss his government's line of action after the cabinet meeting.

"We have no right to assume Germany will refuse," Flandin said.

Officials, however, said a program of sanctions was being prepared as pressure on Germany because they doubted Hitler would accept the proposal of a new demilitarized zone, policed by British and Italian soldiers, pending a new conference of the Locarno powers.

Hope to Persuade Britain.

Officials admitted that Great Britain probably would be averse to sanctions, but said they thought the British might be persuaded to try them.

Flandin was prepared for a struggle to keep Britain, Belgium and Italy in a united front with France against German efforts to drive them apart. The four Locarno powers are agreed on a virtual military alliance if the reichsfuehrer fails to accept their proposals for a new Rhineland settlement.

STRANGLES SELF TO DEATH.

Albert Stepan, 58 years old, 3233 Parnell avenue, committed suicide yesterday by strangling with a piece of rope in his bedroom.

WIFE FORGIVES PREACHER WHO FLED WITH GIRL

Creston, Ia., March 21.—(AP)—Perry Eugene Griffin's wife forgave him today for running away with her sister and turning robber, something the young preacher said he doubted "the Lord will do."

Griffin, 24, former Adonis, Mo., pastor, and his wife's sister, Marge Copeland, 21, are held in jail at Harrisonville, Mo., charged with highway robbery.

Mrs. Griffin, mother of three children, the eldest less than 6, was busy with a dishpan at the farm home of her father, Sherman Copeland, near here.

"I forgive him," she said. "I'll take him back—if they'll ever let him come back. We'll go away somewhere and start over again."

Griffin offered to trade a plea of guilty to a charge of highway robbery for Miss Copeland's freedom, but Justice Frank E. Bybee told him "no trade is possible." So Griffin and Miss Copeland pleaded "innocent."

GERMAN PRINCE SAILS FOR U. S. THIS WEEK TO ENJOY VACATION

BERLIN, March 21.—(AP)—Prince Louis Ferdinand of Prussia, second son of the former crown prince and future head of the Hohenzollern family, booked passage today on the S. S. Bremen, sailing March 26 for New York.

"I am going on a vacation trips," he said. "I want to visit my many American friends again. The German Airways company, where I now am regularly employed, has kindly given me a leave."

The prince said his trip did not have the slightest political significance.

QUIZZED IN WINDOW BREAKING.

Jerry Costigan, 35 years, 6934 South Morgan street, was arrested yesterday by the Englewood police for questioning on the breaking of a window in a jewelry store at 6414 South Halsted street.

WATSON DROPS FIGHT; WILL SEND GIRLS TO SCHOOL

Josiah S. Watson, former Joliet school teacher, who has kept two of his daughters out of public school in defiance of a court order, dropped his fight yesterday. Watson was called into court under the state truancy law and was ordered to return the girls, Frances, 9 years old, and Esther, 7, to their classes. He was threatened with contempt action for failure to obey the order. In a letter to County Judge George N. Blatt of Joliet yesterday, Watson said the girls would go back to school tomorrow.

He had charged that the public school system stunted the children intellectually. Since January Watson and his wife, also a former school teacher, taught their children in regular classes conducted in their home at 1920 2d avenue.

After receiving the former teacher's letter yesterday, Judge Blatt indicated the contempt proceedings would be dropped.

BORAH LASHES OLD GUARD AND NEW DEAL HERE

Launches Campaign for Primary Votes.

powers we have, if properly used, are sufficient to remove the errors of which we complain."

Reviews Blows at Constitution.

The senator reviewed the history of attacks on the courts and on the constitution to drive home his point that these institutions are necessary for a continuance of the liberty of the people.

"Suppose congress should pass a law," he asked, "curtailing the freedom of speech—and if there is anything a dictator hates it is free speech—and you should be sent to jail? How would you get out? Only by an appeal to that Supreme tribunal which protects the humble citizen."

His stand for neutrality and for disentanglement from foreign quarrels was as adamant as it has been throughout his career.

"No one can see, even for a fortnight ahead, what is going to happen on the continent of Europe. It is my contention that whatever happens, not a single American boy should be sent to the slaughterhouse on the fields of Europe. Let us be neutral, remain neutral and attend to our affairs at home."

War Breeds Dictators.

"We were told the last war would make the world safe for democracy. Now the world is full of dictators. We are told now that we may have to fight to make the wold safe for peace. The only way to have peace is to practice peace and friendship toward all nations—and if they do not want them we'll have to do the best we can."

He swept from this subject into a bitter attack on European nations for their failure to pay their war debts to the United States. He asserted that the debt, if collected, would pay our national debt, or would pay triple the amount of all the farm mortgages in the United States. He said a nation that cannot pay its debts is an unsafe nation with which to make a peace treaty.

"All revolutions of the last 300 years have started from overtaxation," said Senator Borah in his discussion of the present tax problem. "We don't have revolutions, as such, in this country, but we do have political revolutions—and I'd like to see one of that character. It has reached the point where 61 per cent of all our taxes have been transferred to those least able to pay."

Rips Into Corporations.

In a flood of old fashioned oratory the senator tore into monopolistic corporations and industries which he said had fixed the price upon almost every article purchased by a consumer.

"For forty years," he said, "both political parties have promised again and again to destroy monopoly and take away the power of corporations to fix prices. For 40 years that pledge has been broken, time and time again. The question of monopoly is only a question of courage to destroy it. But so long as the political parties get money from corporations and industry they will never have the courage to turn upon their friend who furnished the money"!

Senator Borah said the depression was caused because monopolistic powers had created a hollow economic shell in which, even during 1929, 50 per cent of the American people were unable to buy the necessities of life because of the power of monopoly to fix prices and thus destroy purchasing power.

In his discussion of the farm problem he said he had supported, and would continue to support, any conceivable plan which might be of benefit to the farmers. He paraded his partiality to the Frazier-Lemke bill, even though, he said, he did not agree with it in its entirety.

Senator Borah paused during his address to answer questions from the audience. Some one asked him his stand on the Townsend plan.

"I have been an advocate of old age pensions for many years," he answered. "When the security bill was before the senate I moved to double the amount. My proposal was defeated. I favor an old age pension of about $60 per month because I think it is a fair amount for the pensioned."

Senator Borah then resumed his appeal to throw out the "old guard."

"When I see the party of Lincoln, whose body lies in your great state, the party which struck the shackles from the slaves, demoralized, practically without influence in national affairs, practically without a voice, I say the time has come to change leadership.

"Some people say I'm not a good enough Republican. But I am a good enough Republican to fight as long as I have the power against the domination of the party by those men who brought it to ruin. I propose to oppose those men as long as I have voice or physical power to do so."

$148,500 VERDICT IS WON BY VICTIMS OF GAS BLAST ON BOAT

Detroit, Mich., March 21.—[U.P.]—Circuit Judge Lester S. Moll today ruled that the Carbide & Carbon Chemicals corporation of New York must pay damages of $148,500 to three persons injured last July 3 in the explosion of gas used for cooking on a motorboat.

The court upheld a judgment for $100,000 in the case of Alva L. Grinnell, owner of the boat; $36,000 for his wife, Ida, and awarded $12,500 to James B. Shepard, a visitor to the craft.

Testimony was offered by Grinnell that he had expended $25,000 for medical care for himself and wife. He is compelled to wear braces as a result of the accident, and Mrs. Grinnell still uses a cane.

The defendant corporation had charged the explosion was caused by leakage of gasoline used as fuel.

INSIST TAKING OF FINGERPRINTS IS RIGHT OF U. S.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—Government lawyers said today they had as much right to fingerprint a suspected criminal as to take his name and address.

They had not decided whether to appeal a ruling by a federal judge in Oklahoma that persons could not be fingerprinted against their will.

Judge Edgar S. Faught and District Attorney William C. Lewis at Oklahoma City ordered that no fingerprints be taken of Carl Giles, former Oklahoma relief director. He was indicted on charges of irregular handling of relief funds. They said they could find no statute to authorize fingerprinting.

Government lawyers said such action was "common law right of the government, part of the process of identifying a man."

The federal lawyers said the government's right to fingerprint suspects was upheld by a federal Circuit court in a prohibition case, in New York, after the lower court had held that, lacking a statute, fingerprinting subjected a "possible miscreant" to "unnecessary indignity."

NINE GIVE BOND IN FRAUD PLOT ON U. S. PROJECT

Used Inferior Pipe and Lumber, Is Charge.

Fort Worth, Tex., March 21.—(AP)—Nine men were under bond today on federal charges of conspiracy to defraud and using inferior pipe and lumber in construction of Dalworthington Gardens, a federal subsistence homestead colony near Arlington, Tex.

Ten indictments were returned by a federal grand jury after an investigation of the project. Those providing $1,000 bonds are O. R. Reece, C. H. Hanson, W. R. Fuller, J. M. Webb, John T. Orr, F. A. Mote, W. J. Poland, H. F. Kuehne, and B. L. Spencer.

Kuehne of Austin was the architect and Mote of Dallas was the contractor. The others were employés on the project.

Dead Man on Pay Roll.

Orr, Spencer, Reece, and another person are charged with attempting to swindle the government by buying inferior used water pipe. Orr, Reece, Mote, and Kuehne were charged with using lumber inferior to that called for in specifications.

Using false pay rolls and paying out $36 on three occasions when no work was done by the party receiving the money was charged against Fuller, Hanson, Reece, and Webb.

Conspiracy to defraud the government by having the name of C. S. Poland, a dead man, placed on the pay roll was charged against W. J. Poland and Reece.

Legion Post Makes Inquiry.

Dalworthington Gardens was begun, not as a relief movement, but to help provide homes for the man who already had an income. Eighty houses were built and offered for sale with from three to seven acres. It was intended for the owner to retain his employment but to use the plot of ground to increase his income and help pay for the home.

Under the operating plan, the houses were to be purchased at cost. Interest at 3 per cent is charged in buying a home and the purchaser has 30 years to complete payment.

Recently a Fort Worth American Legion post investigated the project because a number of ex-soldiers were planning to buy homes there, using their bonus as first payment. The post reported that a man would have to have an income of at least $125 a month in order to live at the gardens.

Begun by Interior Department.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—Assistants to Rexford G. Tugwell today said an investigation of construction of Dalworthington homesteads, near Arlington, Tex., was begun by the interior department before the project was transferred to the Resettlement administration.

The investigation was referred to the justice department by the interior department, with approval of the Resettlement administration.

RIVAL CROWDS HEAR BUNDESEN AND GOV. HORNER

Speak Only a Block Apart in Two Towns.

BY PERCY WOOD.

Gov. Horner and Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Democratic opponents for governor, collided twice yesterday during their campaign tour through 11 towns in the Chicago milkshed.

Both at Woodstock and at Belvidere the meetings were held simultaneously, one block apart, while competing loud speakers blared "Happy Days Are Here Again" from the Bundesen camp, while the Horner sound wagon screeched "On, Wisconsin" for no apparent reason. In both places the governor's audiences were larger than his opponent's, but Bundesen supporters declared "state payrollers" accounted for the difference.

The candidates made no verbal cognizance of each other's proximity. However, personalities were not lacking. Gov. Horner declared that Dr. Bundesen had aided Wisconsin instead of Illinois milk producers, while the Chicago health board head told his audiences that he had aided them materially, and gave instances.

Repeats Slap at Kelly.

The governor also repeated his customary slam at Mayor Kelly, whom he called a dictator.

Then the groups went their separate ways, the governor to Elgin and Elmhurst, Dr. Bundesen to Harvard, Libertyville, and Waukegan.

The Horner cry against Mayor Kelly was answered, in behalf of the organization slate, by State Treasurer John Stelle, candidate for lieutenant governor, who declared that Mr. Horner has made an abrupt about face since 1932, when he was industriously engaged in defending the late Mayor Cermak from just the sort of attacks he is now making upon Mayor Kelly.

Stelle declared that at that time Gov. Horner took the position that his primary opponents, Michael L. Igoe and Bruce A. Campbell, had no business running without the state central committee's indorsement.

"Shoe on Other Foot."

"The shoe is on the other foot this time," said Stelle, "for it is Horner who failed to receive the committee's backing, because he was weak and couldn't be reëlected in November.

"Once more I ask the governor," said Stelle, "will you support the Democratic state ticket in November?"

John C. Martin, organization choice for state treasurer, which post he held from 1932 to 1934, picked up the same theme by telling the Bundesen audience that "the issue in this primary is whether the Democratic voters shall retain the system of slate indorsements by the state central committee?"

Martin argued that the system should be retained because "it has been our best guarantee of success in state elections." He added that the system has made posible equal representation for downstate and Cook county on past tickets.

Dr. Bundesenn told the dairy farmers: "Both you and I are vitally interested in the products of your farms. I believe in milk as one of the greatest of all health building foods. You are interested in it from the economic standpoint. The question that has been asked me most frequently is: 'What is Chicago trying to do with us in the milk shed through its milk ordinance?'

"The answer is that because of our standards, Chicago now has the lowest general and baby death rate of any large city in the world and Illinois farmers are now producing 66 per cent of the Chicago supply.

"Under these standards in the long run, the dairy farmers of the state will be the principal beneficiaries because they can comply and the out of state chiselers who produce an inferior quality are shut out of the rich Chicago market.

Not for Rest of State.

"We are doing our utmost to increase milk consumption, which not only helps the farmer but makes for strong bodies in city dwellers."

If he is elected governor, Dr. Bundesen said, no attempt will be made to make the Chicago standards state law.

"We believe that they are good standards," he said, "but we will not force them upon the rest of Illinois. Each community will decide for itself."

Gov. Horner reviewed his administration and declared that "every promise I made, large or small, I have kept."

"I didn't pledge the millennium," he said, "but I did promise to reduce taxes and I have done so; there is now no state tax on real estate and there won't be as long as Henry Horner is governor."

LANDON SUPPORTERS SEEK MISSOURI'S 30 VOTES AT CLEVELAND

Kansas City, Mo., March 21.—(AP)—The campaign of Gov. Alf M. Landon for the Republican presidential nomination took a more definite form tonight while supporters of the Kansan watched closely Missouri's selection of a Cleveland delegation with 30 votes.

The 18 votes of Kansas and Oklahoma's 21 already are pledged to Landon. New Mexico, having six votes, indorsed him in its state convention. Republican leaders, including Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, have announced for Landon in New Jersey, which has 32 votes.

Half a dozen preliminary precinct and county meetings in Missouri have indorsed Landon, but on Monday six district delegates will be chosen at St. Louis and two at Hermann, Mo. The district selection of a total of 24 delegates will continue until the choosing April 27 in state convention of an additional six delegates at large.

Landon for President ticket qualified today in the secretary of state's office for first place on the Republican ballot in the May 5 presidential preference primary. Ross G. 32 INJURED WHEN INTERSTATE BUS SKIDS OFF ROAD

Driver Blinded by Lights, Hits an Icy Spot.

Thirty-five persons narrowly escaped death or serious injury early today when a Northland Greyhound Lines motor bus bound from Minneapolis to Chicago ran off Green Bay road one mile north of Lake Bluff. However, all but three suffered some injuries.

The driver, Carl D. Berquist, 34 years old, 10039 Aberdeen street, said he was traveling about 40 miles an hour when he was momentarily blinded by the lights of an approaching automobile. At the same time, he said, the bus struck a patch of road covered with snow, ice and water and skidded off the highway. It snapped off a telephone pole, plunged down a nine foot embankment, and then plowed through a field for 35 feet to crash into a tree.

32 Suffer Injuries.

All the passengers were thrown violently forward, and all suffered cuts, bruises, and other minor injuries except the driver and two children, Omer Cousineau, 16 months old, and his brother, Lionel, 6 months old, of Laurier, Manitoba, Canada, who were protected by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alec Cousineau, and other passengers as the bus lurched to a stop.

North Chicago police and Lake county deputy sherifs took the injured persons to a gasoline filling station one mile south of North Chicago, and physicians were summoned to give first aid.

The passengers from Chicago included:

W. J. Noble, 46 years old, 1022 North Dearborn street; Miss Colita Feit, 23 years old, a nurse at the Cook county hospital; Alexander Schwartz, 45 years old, 1122 Argyle street, and Kenneth Clary, 1115 East Marquette road.

Whippo, 116 East Pennsylvania avenue; Theodore Konopinski, 210 North Johnson street, and Loren Hatfield, 516 East South street.

Among others injured are William C. Wolff, 40, of Dundee, Ill., and Aloysuis Collins, 27, of 94? North 13th street, Milwaukee.

Mrs. Jessie Bortz, 76 years old, 1441 Clifton Park avenue, died in the Mount Sinai hospital last night of injuries incurred March 12 when she was struck at 16th street and Central Park avenue by an automobile driven by H. Epstein, 31 years old, 1640 South Springfield avenue.

5 Boys Injured.

Five small boys, three of them brothers who were the victims of a hit and run motorist, were injured yesterday by automobiles.

The brothers, Clifford White Jr., 6 years old, 5353 South Mobile avenue, and Richard, 4, and Robert 3, started across the street hand in hand in front of 6312 Archer avenue on their way to a candy store when a machine hit them, then sped away. Clifford and Richard were taken to the County hospital in a serious condition. Police were seeking the driver from a description furnished by witnesses.

Adam Novosad, 5 years old, 7609 60th street, Argo, was injured seriously when struck by a truck near his home. Joseph Durka, 40 years old, 6119 Archer avenue, Argo, the driver, told police the boy ran in front of the machine.

Jack Foley, 3 years old, 2843 West 64th street, suffered a possible skull fracture when struck by an automobile in front of his home. George W. Fetzner, 6428 South Maplewood avenue, the driver, said the child ran from behind a parked car into his machine.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday, 208 persons had been killed in automobile accidents in Cook county since Jan. 1. In the same period 173 were killed and 3,117 were injured within the Chicago city limits.

"Rookie" Policemen Rout Bandits in Gun Battle

Policemen Lawrence Larke and William Larkin, of the West North avenue station, both new on the force, exchanged gunfire early today with two men they sought to question as they sat in an unlighted automobile in an alley behind 2215 Iowa street. The men fled on foot after the shooting, abandoning the automobile, which had been stolen several hours earlier from Frank Walters, 1028 Monticello avenue. It was the second car the robbers had stolen during the evening.

GIRL IS SILENT; BOYS TELL HOW SHE SAVED THEM

St. Paul, Minn., March 21.—(AP)—Betty Birks, 11, did not wish to be a heroine at the expense of her two boy friends. So for a week it was not known she had saved Thomas Mahoney, 14, and his brother, Bobby, 11, after they broke through ice on a pond while skiing on a golf course. Bobby went in first, Tommy broke through trying to save him.

Then Betty crawled out on the ice, grabbed the skiis of each and pulled them to safety. The boys told. Betty would not. The fathers of the three children are United States army officers at Fort Snelling.

BROOKS ENJOYS DECIDED LEAD IN GOVERNOR RACE

Survey Shows G. O. P. Field Is Narrowing.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Reports received yesterday from regular correspondents of THE TRIBUNE throughout Illinois were that the Republican governorship nomination is a fight between Wayland Brooks and Len Small, with Brooks far out in the lead.

A correspondent here and there mentioned some other candidate—usually in the candidate's home territory—as cutting some figure, but the sum total of all the replies to instructions for accurate estimates of the situation was that the only downstater in the race is the Kankakee man and those that compared his present and his former strength said he is far from being the Small of past campaigns.

The correspondents, almost without exception whether writing from northern or central Illinois or from the southern section of the state known as Little Egypt, gave Brooks a decisive lead.

Big Lead and Three Weeks to Go.

These reports, taken with the situation in Cook county as shown by straw votes, canvasses and other tests showed Brooks miles ahead slightly more than three weeks before the primary of April 14.

The information in the downstate reports, which came from all the principal cities in Illinois outside Cook county, was supplemented by information gleaned from downstate newspapers. In this field the most significant comment encountered was an editorial in the Egyptian Republican, published at Herrin by Hal W. Trovillion, recognized for years as Small's ace in southern Illinois.

"Down in the very tip of Egypt—the "Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth congressional districts," read this editorial, "Brooks and Small are far in the lead of all the other candidates. It appears that Small has much of his old following but not all of it.

Adds to Standing Opposition.

"Brooks, on the other hand, has caught up largely the former governor's old standing opposition and added to it a large portion of young men of his own age and under. To this following Brooks appears to have added whatever is available in the party of the world war veterans.

"At this distance from the primary date, it can safely be said that no other candidates are yet crowding Brooks and Small in their run here in Egypt.

"Traveling out of these districts north and entering the 22d and 23d districts—the East St. Louis and Mount Vernon districts, respectively—Carlstrom enters the picture, with spots discernible here and there for Oglesby, whose absence from active politics so long finds many of his old friends absorbed into other factions that have come on since his day.

Two New Faces Downstate.

"Here and there we find Kuhn and Caldwell, the latter least known but whose hurried visits through Egypt recently left a good impression for him with all whom he met. Both are new faces in statewide politics and have their admirers from the group that has been crying for newcomers on the ticket.

"In the organized labor field, especially where the Progressive Miners' union holds sway, George Dowell, the only real 'downstate' man in the running, finds a following. The remaining candidates, Gunning of Princeton, is not known at all in Egypt—a fine gentleman, however."

Extracts from the reports sent in by correspondents of THE TRIBUNE follow:

MURPHYSBORO—"Brooks entered here on the crest of a wave of popularity."

MOUNT VERNON—"The organization here seems to favor Brooks and the prediction is made he will sweep the [Jefferson] county. Small has many loyal friends here and there is reason to believe that with proper effort he may run second. That is the prospect at this time. Other candidates will hardly command a large vote."

HARRISBURG—"It looks as though Brooks and Small will get the votes in this district."

EAST ST. LOUIS—"Small is expected to give Brooks a close race for a majority in this section. Other gubernatorial candidates are mere names on the ballot, with the possible exception of Dowell."

MARION—"Sentiment for Brooks is strong in this district but both Brooks and Carlstrom leaders are fearful the southern Illinois union labor belt will repeat its preference for Small."

First in Sterling Area.

STERLING—"Brooks, Caldwell and Small have the strength in the order named."

DECATUR—"Contest appears to be between Brooks and Small. Brooks appears to have a slight edge."

JACKSONVILLE—"Brooks is far in the lead in Morgan county and on the present setup will be returned an easy winner over his primary opponents. Former Gov. Small has the next largest show of strength among the primary aspirants."

KEWANEE—"Sentiment in the Thirty-seventh senatorial district apparently runs to Brooks and Gunning. There is some interest in behalf of Len Small, but close observers are not giving him over third place in the district at best. At this date Brooks appears to top the list."

SPRINGFIELD—"A recent roundup here of Brooks' supporters indicated much local enthusiasm for him. His was the greatest demonstration yet made by any of the state group."

ROCKFORD—"Brooks and Oscar E Carlstrom of Aledo will wage a close fight for the Rockford area vote. The outcome is doubtful at this time. Small will receive a certain share of votes. John Oglesby will probably be fourth."

"More Brooks Talk."

DANVILLE—"Brooks and Small appear to be leading although Caldwell has an organization working in Danville. One hears more Brooks talk on the streets than for any of the others."

BLOOMINGTON—"Brooks to beat Small with Oglesby polling a good vote. Brooks will score heavily here because he is well known in this farming district and because he has pledged to carry out the farm program of former Gov. Lowden. Republicans are nearer complete political harmony than in the last twenty years. Only the nomination of Small would cause any break in the Republican ranks."

GALESBURG—"Brooks is leading all other Republican candidates by far in Knox county."

FREEPORT—"Brooks appears to be leading and there is little doubt he will carry Stephenson county. Other candidates probably will rate about this way: Small, Carlstrom, Oglesby, Kuhn. . . ."

PEORIA—"Most prominently mentioned are Brooks and Small."

Reports of regular correspondents at other centers were all to the same effect—Brooks vs. Small with Brooks far ahead.

Fireman Gives Boy Blood; Hope of Recovery Rises

Four year old Jackie Jaramski, 1716 Washington boulevard, who is seriously ill in the County hospital with scarlet fever that followed an attack of pneumonia, was reported as having a "very good chance" of recovery last night following a blood transfusion. The blood was that of William Flemund, one of six firemen of Engine company 34 at 112 Curtis street, who volunteered to give their blood to save the child's life.

STATE RALLYING TO CONSTITUTION, GLENN REPORTS

Response to Campaign Speeches Hearty.

Returning to his headquarters in the Rookery from his third week of campaigning for the United States senatorship, Otis F. Glenn said yesterday that wherever he spoke downstate he found hearty support for his plea for the defense of the constitution.

"Thank God for the Supreme court of the United States"; he said was the response to his appeal that came to him daily from men and women who had heard him speak. In his opinion the demand that the constitution be protected from its enemies stirs Illinoisans more than any other campaign utterance.

Former Senator Glenn said that this observation has confirmed the conviction of years that the American people will not tolerate attacks upon the Supreme court. It also reminded him of his maiden speech in the senate.

"While I was serving in Washington a few years ago," he said, "bitter, vitriolic attack raged against confirmation of the appointment of Charles Evans Hughes as chief justice of the Supreme court.

"He was bitterly assailed by some of the most experienced and ablest debaters in the senate. Hour after hour the assaults upon him continued. Although I had been in the senate but a few months, I felt impelled to do what I could in defense of this great man who had been governor of his state, president of the American Bar association, associate justice of the Supreme court, and the presidential nominee of the Republican party.

Preserver of Government.

"Today I am not ashamed that I did what I could. It is generally recognized now that the Supreme court, by its courageous and intelligent exercise of constitutional duty and authority, has preserved our form of government against the most insidious efforts to undermine it.

"By its decisions it has maintained the fundamental principle that there are three coördinate branches of government, and has prevented the executive branch from swallowing up the other two.

"It has maintained the sovereignty of the various states against attempts to move such authority to the seat of government at Washington, and it has done this under the able leadership of Charles Evans Hughes as chief justice.

"Therefore I feel that my effort in leading the fight for Charles Evans Hughes, who was confirmed by a vote of 52 to 26 in the senate, has served the nation well.

"If I am nominated at the April primary and elected to the senate in November I shall advocate the continuance without impairment of the authority and the power of the Supreme court of the United States."

"Surprised" at Fraud Plank.

Another downstate campaigner who returned to Chicago, Charles W. Hadley of DuPage county, candidate for attorney general, expressed surprise to find that one of his opponents—Thomas V. Sullivan, although he did not name him—has been campaigning on a pledge to end vote frauds.

"I am sure it is not expected that the attorney general of this state shall become a detective seeking opportunities and excuses to carry on investigations for his own personal aggrandizement," he said. "In case the law enforcing agencies shall fail to enforce the laws of the state and the interests of the public justify intervention by the attorney general of the state, there will be no hesitancy on my part as attorney general in acting promptly and energetically."

EXPERTS FAVOR AIRSHIPS FOR TRAVEL, DEFENSE

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—Government construction of a fleet of commercial lighter-than-air craft and replacement of the ill-fated Akron and Macon with new airships for joint army and navy use was recommended to a senate air safety committee today by aviation experts.

Among the witnesses was Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, who survived the crash of the Shenandoah. He called the Zeppelin type of craft as a necessary part of the air transportation and of defense.

He was supported by the testimony of S. A. Knowles of the Goodyear Zeppelin corporation of Akron, O., and a statement by Paul W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company.

TREND TOWARD DICTATORSHIP IS ELECTION ISSUE

Controversy Is Becoming More Heated.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—The controversy over the trend toward a dictatorship under the régime of the New Deal is becoming more and more heated. It bids fair to be an important issue in the presidential election.

Critics of the Roosevelt administration contend that the tendencies toward dictatorship have been observable from the time the President took office have been multiplying ever since and recently have flowered luxuriantly in the methods adopted by the Black committee to intimidate anti-New Dealers.

The New Dealers retort that such charges are nonsense; that nothing is more alien to the minds of the President and his chief lieutenants than anything smacking of dictatorship or the practice of terrorization inseparable therefrom.

Court Decisions Cited.

Thereupon the anti-New Dealers cite the decisions of the Supreme court in New Deal cases in the last year as substantiation of their accusation. Mr. Roosevelt's disposition to dictatorship, they assert, was conclusively established in the case of William E. Humphrey, whom the President summarily removed from the federal trade commission because "I do not feel that your mind and my mind go along together."

After being removed Mr. Humphrey died and the executor of his estate brought suit in the Court of Claims for his salary from his removal to his death. On May, 27, 1935, the Supreme court held that the President had exceeded his powers in removing Mr. Humphrey. On Nov. 12, 1935, the Court of Claims awarded judgment for $3,043 in favor of the Humphrey estate.

In its unanimous opinion the court said that congress constitutionally created quasi-judicial agencies to "act in discharge of their duties independently of executive control" and properly forbade removal of the commissioners except for cause. "For it is quite evident," said the court, "that one who holds his office only during the pleasure of another cannot be depended upon to maintain an attitude of independence against the latter's will."

Sees "Coercive Influence."

Inasmuch as the first step in the development of a dictatorship is invariably the appropriation of legislative and judicial powers by the executive the court pertinently observed that "the power of removal here claimed for the President" represents a "coercive influence" which "threatens the independence of a commission . . . created by congress as a means of carrying into operation legislative and judicial powers."

Almost every New Deal measure sent to Capitol hill by the President and his brain trust has provided for the delegation of vast legislative and other powers to the executive. Under such delegations of power Mr. Roosevelt took a long step toward the achievement of a dictatorship. He was enabled to do so by an obedient congress overwhelmingly Democratic and he was checked only by the Supreme court.

"Hot Oil" Case Recalled.

In the "hot oil" case the court declared unconstitutional the unfettered delegation to the President of the power to regulate shipments of oil. "If section 9 [c] were held valid," said the court, "it would be idle to pretend that anything would be left of limitations upon the power of the congress to delegate its lawmaking function. . . . Instead of performing its lawmaking function the congress could at will, and as to such subjects as it chooses, transfer that function to the President or other officer or to an administrative body. The question is not of the intrinsic importance of the particular statute before us, but of the constitutional processes of legislation which are an essential part of our system of government."

This decision, handed down on Jan. 7, 1935, was the first check encountered by the President in developing the New Deal dictatorship. But others were to follow.

In the NRA the New Deal sought to set up a dictatorship over industry. The Supreme court held the legislation unconstitutional, declaring that "congress cannot delegate legislative powers to the President to exercise an unfettered discretion to make whatever laws he thinks may be needed or advisable for the rehabilitation and expansion of trade and industry."

In knocking out the AAA the court pointed out the far reaching implications of this attempted dictatorship over agriculture.

"If the act before us," said the court, "is a proper exercise of the federal taxing power, evidently the regulation of all industry throughout the United States may be accomplished by similar exercise of the same power. It would be possible to exact money from one branch of an industry and pay it to another branch in every field of activity which lies within the province of the states.

"The mere threat of such a procedure might well induce the surrender of rights and the compliance with federal regulation as the price of continuance in business."

Amendment Proposed.

President Roosevelt on numerous occasions has betrayed his resentment of the Supreme court decisions that checked his exercise of autocratic powers. In his famous "horse and buggy" comment on the decision that knocked out the NRA the President suggested that the decision could be overcome by constitutional amendment or by other means, by which he was supposed to refer to legislation depriving the courts of the power to pass on the constitutionality of laws enacted by congress.

The public reaction to this suggestion was so unfavorable that the President never returned to the theme.

Receives Little Encouragement.

After the AAA decision Senator George W. Norris [Rad., Neb.] proposed legislation to curb the Supreme court. By anti-New Dealers the proposal was hailed as a move for the recovery of dictatorial powers of which the President had been shorn by the Supreme court. It received so little public encouragement that though numerous bills to curb the courts were pending Mr. Roosevelt counseled the Democratic leaders to keep them in the pigeon hole.

Thus the dictatorship issue is being soft pedaled by the New Dealers pending the presidential election. They are not likely to press for the clothing of the President with further autocratic power unless Mr. Roosevelt should be reëlected with a Democratic congress to support him.

SOLDIER ON BUS SEES GIRL, BUT LITTLE SCENERY

Other Passengers Feast on Arkansas' Charms.

Philip Kinsley is making a bus trip from Chicago to the Pacific coast. He is progressing by easy stages, meeting the people in the small towns and cities en route, and describing what he sees and hears. This is the third article of Mr. Kinsley's interesting series.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Texarkana, Ark., March 21.—[Special.]—The soldier on leave was getting ideas. The pretty girl on the seat ahead of him had been talking to him all day. What he had seen from a bus window of the Arkansas mountain country could be put under a postage stamp. A straight little nose profile and a pair of laughing eyes had got in the way. It was now dusk and the bus was nearing a city of gay lights called Texarkana.

The girl with the gray eyes was not so young.

"I had to get married or be an old maid," she told the soldier, stretching out on two seats, with her dainty feet sticking into the aile. She had a hole in the heel of one stocking.

"Guess I'll get married myself some time," said the soldier.

Too Young to Marry.

"O, don't hurry—it's no picnic. You're young yet. I'm so sleepy."

"Want to come around and put your head in my lap?" said the soldier hopefully. There was a vacant seat beside him.

"O, I could never go to sleep then." So she kept on talking. She showed the soldier pictures of herself, her brother, her kid sister, and discoursed on the peculiarities of each and of her husband. He was traveling abroad, she said. He had wanted her to go as his secretary, but she had rather travel alone.

"I get so tired I don't ever want to remember the towns I go through," she said. "I need a week of shut-eye, I've got the dust of four states in my hair, but I've had a bath every day."

Tells of Her Adventures.

She smiled brilliantly and rambled on about her adventures at the Mardi Gras in New Orleans.

"I was with a fellow and he got drunk," she said. "So I got drunk, too. I would have climbed a tree if any one had asked me."

It was here the soldier got ideas. One could see them churning upward in his skull.

"Say, honey," he said, "suppose you and me get off at Tex and have a little celebration; we could stay all night."

"No, thanks," said the girl wearily. "I feel tough, but I'm not that tough."

After that the conversation languished.

Things Soldier Missed.

Now, let us retrace this journey and see a few things that the girl with the gray eyes and soldier missed. Our world is made up of our perceptions. A bus trip such as this should be interrupted at times in order to get the companionship of the wind and the sun, birds, and trees. They are all in spring mood now.

It is a cold bright morning on the road out of Fayetteville. Tracks in the mud are frozen, but it was not a hard enough freeze to hurt the peach buds. War in Europe was of small consequence beside this fact. The birds are very gay this morning. The roadside lark has a song of six notes, the last three ascending as if on wings. There is the track of a barefoot boy, leading into the white farm house on the hill. The track of a horse. An empty whisky bottle tossed from some wild car. The crossroads storekeeper says 15 persons have been killed on this highway since he moved there. Thus progress takes its toll.

Hills Like Brown Billows.

The hills ahead are like giant brown ocean billows. The upthrust of green cannot be seen except on close inspection.

Six miles out at Greenland, the store and gas station offers a place to rest and chat.

"I'm plumb out of drinks," said the storekeeper. "Help yourself to the water bucket." He talks about the peaches and the big dam the government is building near Mountainberg for a water supply for Fort Smith.

"It's in the Boston mountains on ahead," he said. "Highest place in the world, I reckon." He tosses a piece of oak into the stove and sits down on a rope seated chair to talk. There are interruptions. A mountain man and his sons come in to sell him some "cookin' wood." He sends them to the barber. A little girl wants a 5 cent school pad. A man wants to borrow a hammer. Potatoes come in from the Red river. Trade for an hour is gas for one car and 21 cents in the store. Eggs are 15 cents a dozen.

Cigars 2 for 5 Cents.

"Don't carry butter," he says. "Most of the folks around here has their own cows." He has a 2x4 hooked rug, with pink roses, made by "the women folk." Price two dollars. Cigars are two for five cents.

At the next town, where the bus carries one in a few minutes for 40 cents, is a storekeeper of another sort, a truculent looking fellow with squint eyes. His store is a little of groceries, hardware and living equipment. A woman and three children sit around the stove, the woman at a sewing machine. There is an untidy family bed in one corner of the store. A boy with foppish looking clothes comes in for an aspirin.

"He was down at Fort Smith and got drunk and put in jail," explains a neighbor. Cheese sandwich and buttermilk here for ten cents. The littlest girl wants one too and gets it.

From here the road winds still higher, showing range after range of misty blue hills around each bend. Far below a blue stream wanders through a brown valley. The bells of grazing cattle are heard in the pine wood slopes.

"Tom-tom-eenz," a woman's voice comes through the clear air from a farmhouse in the valley. "Bring me a load of wood." Two little boys come out of a trail carrying a sack. They are going to see their "grandpap," who is sick.

The mountain homes are usually of unlovely and haphazard architecture, but along this summit something new is found. Hands of wealth and taste have reached up from the hot country to transform one hillside into a place of human beauty.

Sight Terraced Garden.

Near a tumble-down deserted store the hillside rocks have taken form of a terraced garden. From the last wall rises a stone house of irregular shape, lightened with wooden gables and shingles. It is what Frank Lloyd Wright pleaded for at the woman's congress, "organic architecture," something that belongs, not just a house.

There are other country homes and resorts farther on, particularly Nob Hill ranch. These were all built by what the natives call "furriners," from Dallas and Louisiana.

Toward evening Mountainberg lake, a $1,700,000 project, comes into view. The waters of Clear creek are backing up the valley into a lake now 35 feet deep. This will give Fort Smith on the Arkansas and Poteau rivers in the flatlands a fine water supply for generations. The government has purchased 850,000 acres in this Ozark national forest, and it is proposed to extend this from this highway east to Batesville, a strip 24 miles deep across the state, a total of 2,400,000 acres. The cost has been 750 millions. Last year the receipts were $169,000, from the sale of white oak which is used for whisky barrel staves.

There are a dozen sunsets on view as the bus goes down the hills to Fort Smith. The first sprays of dogwood are seen on lower slopes.

Fort Smith greets visitors with the injunction to "go to church." All across the countryside the little white church is a familiar institution, but here there are 45 churches, costing $2,500,000.

"Sure I go to church," says the freckle face newsboy in front of the main street hotel. "I'm going to hear the preachin' soon as I sell these papers," he adds. "What church do you go to?" "Holiness."

"What did the preacher tell you last night?"

"He told about old Ezekiel. He went down a valley and saw some dry bones and told them to live and they did."

"Do you believe that?"

"Sure, It's in Bible."

"Sure, don't you? It's in the Bible."

"Well, the Bible says eat, drink and be merry, doesn't it?"

"That don't mean beer and stuff. That gets the devil in you."

"Does God help you to sell papers?"

"Sure."

Fort Smith has 129 factories, seven gas fields, and billions of tons of unmined coal. Its main street is a busy scene and plenty of liquor bars have sprung up despite the churches. In one new bar the attraction is an endurance piano player, a fat, tired looking man who smokes a cigaret and pounds away on a piano in the window. He started at noon the day before this one and is supposed to go for 60 hours. Gaping crowds surround him and the bar does a rushing business. Fried catfish from the White river is a great delicacy here.

South of Fort Smith toward the Pateau mountains the bus window shows a flat scene with little evidence of prosperity.

"The land is wore out," a farmer explains.

Women in sunbonnets appear. The peach trees are in bloom. Sugar Loaf mountain rises on the east, its shoulder running into Oklahoma.

Farmers and laborers are picked up all along this road to go to Waldron for the Saturday horse sale and other doings. The minimum fare is 15 cents, but a 7½ mile ride is possible on that. One sun burned man in lether coat with a large heart painted on the back stopped the bus. He entered in a vague, undecided manner and started to sit down.

"Fifteen cents," said the driver. The bus was 3 miles out.

"Fifteen cents," repeated the laborer. "Well, I guess I can walk that." He got out amid the laughter of the others.

"Trying to make up his mind and couldn't find it," said one man.

Pines Thick and Green.

The pines are thick, bright green, and of lordly height along this Ouachita forest way. An acre in tomatoes will make a living for a family says a farmer. There is lots of room on this frontier for the little man, deer roam this forest, bobcat, and fox. In a clearing a woman is doing her washing at the creek side, fire under her big kettle. The government has a timber improvement demenstration under way, and the forest here is as clean as a front parlor.

At Mena, 9:50 o'clock. Rest stop here.

"Where is the restroom," the proprietor of the drug store is asked.

"Right out the back door."

South of here farmers were plowing a rich country for cotton planting.

The sky is overcast now and the green temple of the pines is melodious with the songs of the "daughters of music." There are trills, whistles all around. The wind is an undertone of soft music sweeping over the pines like the sound of surf on a distant ocean.

At Potter a general store offers sausage and crackers and well water for lunch. Horses are hitched to the rail beside the store and the blacksmith in the rear is clanking merrily. This store is a litter that would drive an efficiency expert mad. But the proprietor says he can put his hand on anything in the dark.

"I've been working twenty-six years at ten to fourteen hours a day," he says, "and never had a vacation.

"I had Delco lights here and I decided to sell the light plant and then I would have to quit at dark."

An old woman and two children enter. She is bent and seamed, wearing a nondescript long garment like a sack. She might be the tobacco road mother who got lost in the woods. Her eyes are black and shrewd as she bargains with the storekeeper over the $9.36 work relief check she has, how much to apply to long overdue accounts and how much goods he will let her have. The children look longingly at the wonders of the candy counter. She was told she would have to pay up before she could get more groceries.

Better Off than Ever.

"These people," said the proprietor after she had left laden with flour and other groceries, "are better off now than they have ever been. I told her she better pay up or her husband might lose his job. The government don't make these jobs to go spreeing around with."

He spoke of Commonwealth college, which is about nine miles from his store.

"I don't see how they get by there," he said. "There's not a farmer there. Put one of them fellows on a farm and he would starve slap-bang to death. They are all furriners and it is said they get Rooshun money. I guess they don't like it. They are all radicals. When they had trouble in the Kentucky mines the head man here put a bunch in a car and they started out lickety-brindle for Kentucky. A tobacco salesman told me they got a real beating up down there. Kate O'Hara started the college and then a fellow took it that Roosevelt put in the brain trust. That's one reason I never took much stock in the brain trust. They got 50 or 75 fellows up there on a 500 acre farm and the professors work with the rest in overalls.

"That ain't a bad idea."

A few miles from Potter is a pine-clad hillside which gives a view over the range and shelter from dust of the road. Here is a place to lie down on the pine carpet and listen to the voices of the forest until they send you to sleep.

Plenty of room along here for settlers. There is only one good farm between Mena and Hatfield. The rest are pine clearings with a little meadow. Land may be bought at about $8 an acre.

"Lookin' for a home place," says a farmer passing by. "It's been too drouthy here, that's the trouble. A man needs a little income to back him up. If it's a good year he can make enough off that little patch there to feed his family—cabbage—onions—potatoes—all goes good. People shouldn't try to farm too much. But this is rich land."

Rich land and hardly a soul in sight. This deserted cabin, with chimney built of mud and wood, looks out upon a near range of green hills and blue ranges beyond.

At De Queen, supper time, men with broad hats and spurs get into the bus. The waitress throws a tough ham sandwich at the traveler and charges 20 cents. Life is getting more expensive. The ride from here to Texarkana is in the dark. The soldier and the girl with gray eyes take the place of the hills. There is another couple spooning in the back seat. When the lights come on the towns they straighten up and try to look innocent. The close up would reveal a country man and a full blown farm woman. They get off at Texarkana, but the soldier and the girl go on, the soldier's ideas have evaporated in sleep.

INCOME TAX PAID THIS YEAR IS 28% OVER MARCH OF 1935

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—March income tax collections have amounted to $389,694,381 this year, representing a 28 per cent increase over $304,646,538 paid in last year, treasury officials announced today.

AUNT CALLS GIRL LIAR; FINED IN MORDOFF TRIAL

Daughter Aids Doctor's Sonny Boy Plea.

Mary Margaret Mordoff, 17 year old daughter of Dr. Gordon Mordoff, swore yesterday that her father hates her, and the girl's aunt, Mrs. Mary Fairchild, 503 Chestnut street, Winnetka, was fined $25 for calling the girl a liar over another part of her testimony. These were incidents in a lively session of the hearing before Judge Rudolph F. Desort in Superior court over the custody of Sonny Boy, a 3 year old love child.

At the close of the day's testimony Judge Desort adjourned the hearing until tomorrow. He is expected then to decide whether the child is the son of Mrs. Margaret Mann Fletcher of Evanston or of Dr. Mordoff, Wilmette physician. Dr. Mordoff testified yesterday. Neither Sonny Boy nor Mrs. Fletcher's husband, Ray Alfred Fletcher, whom she married a week ago, was in court.

Mrs. Fletcher contends that the baby was born to her while she was single. Dr. Mordoff disputes this claim, asserting Sonny Boy is the son of his wife, Mrs. Madge Mordoff, who died last February.

Upholds Father's Claim.

Speaking with apparent candor, Miss Mordoff denounced her father for his treatment of her, and then supported his claim that he is the father of Sonny Boy.

Questioned by Attorney Harry X. Cole, who called her as a witness for Dr. Mordoff, Mary Margaret told of a conversation with her mother early in August, 1932, in which Mrs. Mordoff revealed she was expecting a baby.

When her mother returned from her family home in Minneapolis, where she had gone for the birth, Mary Margaret said, the baby was not with her. Later she saw her parents preparing announcements of the baby's birth and saw Christmas cards her father sent from "the four and one-half Mordoffs," the "one half" referring to the newborn baby. Dr. Mordoff also has a son, 21 years old. Shortly after this, the girl testified, the baby appeared in their home.

Attorney Benjamin Davis, as a friend of the court, then took up the questioning of Mary Margaret.

Hated for Aiding Mother.

Q.—You told me that your father hates you, why is that? A.—He hated me for siding with mother when she filed a suit for separate maintenance in August, 1934. Shortly after this was filed my father told me I was not his daughter, that I was adopted. It hurt me deeply.

Q.—Did he tell you other things about your status in the family?

Attorney Cole leaped to his feet, objecting. He declared any such revelations would be an unfair embarrassment for the girl. Judge Desort overruled him, explaining that the court should learn fully of the Mordoff home life. Miss Mordoff continued:

"Several months later he said it made no difference if I was a foster daughter, that he would put me through school, and that no one would ever know."

Recalls "Cutting Remarks."

Q.—But what had he said? A.—In January of this year he said he wanted to examine Sonny Boy. He made some cutting remarks, and he made some to me. I told him he didn't take care of any of us, that mother did. He told me what I was saying was filthy rot, and that I was living off charity. But mother said I wasn't at all, that I took care of the baby while she was sick.

Miss Mordoff then mentioned that after her mother had filed the separate maintenance suit, Dr. Mordoff paid her $9 a week for suport, but placed all of the furniture in storage.

Baby Only One She Loves.

Q.—Do you have a real affection for Sonny Boy? A.—He's the only person in the world I love now.

Q.—Would your mother want Dr. Mordoff to raise the boy? A.—I don't know, but in my opinion she would not.

Q. [By Attorney Cole].—Do you think your father would love and educate Sonny Boy? A.—Yes, I do.

She was questioned about Mrs. Fairchild, a sister of Mrs. Mordoff, who testified for Mrs. Fletcher that Mrs. Mordoff told her Sonny Boy was not the doctor's child. Mary Margaret said she doubted if this had ever been said, because Mrs. Fairchild and Mrs. Mordoff were not close.

Leaving the witness stand, Mary Margaret passed the counsel table where Mrs. Fairchild was sitting.

"Mary Margaret, you're a liar," Mrs. Fairchild called to her.

"Who said that," retorted the girl, whirling about. Her crisp jaunty air wilted. She flung her black curls on her arms and burst into sobs. Judge Desort leaped up from his chair, and announced Mrs. Fairchild would pay a $25 fine or go to jail for contempt.

Attorney Cole and Attorney Edwin Robson, counsel for Mrs. Fletcher, both asked Judge Desort to reconsider, but he refused. He said he would not assess the fine, however, until after the hearing is concluded, and allowed Mrs. Fairchild her freedom on her own recognizance.

Doctor Tells of Wife's Trip.

In his testimony Dr. Mordoff told of his wife's first intimation that she would become a mother in January, 1932, eight months before the supposed birth of Sonny Boy. He told of her trip to Minneapolis and the arrival of Sonny Boy at their home.

Under questioning by Attorney Davis as to a trip he made to Minneapolis soon after the trial started, to confirm the baby's birth, Dr. Mordoff said he had been unable to find either a birth or death certificate, and that the doctor who officiated at the boy's birth died last fall.

Dr. Mordoff admitted having "little arguments" with his wife, several times having the police call at his home. He and his wife always loved each other, the physician said, but he left home a year ago after a fist fight with his 21 year old son.

John Quinn of Wilmette, a brother of Mrs. Mordoff, called as a witness by Attorney Robson, testified he accompanied her here from Minneapolis after the supposed birth. His sister visited three orphanages seeking a baby for adoption, Quinn related, but was unsuccessful because the signature of her husband was necessary.

She took Sonny Boy into her home, Quinn continued, as a paying proposition, but later grew so attached to him she wanted to adopt him.

TILDEN CAPTURES 1ST PLACE AGAIN IN R.O.T.C. DRILL

The squad from Tilden High school yesterday was awarded first place in the annual drill contest of the Chicago public high school R. O. T. C. units, held in the 131st Infantry armory. Twenty-seven schools were represented.

Tilden's victory was its second straight, the squad scoring 888 out of possible 1,000 points. Sullivan High school, which has had an R. O. T. C. unit only a year, was second with 865, and Roosevelt High was third with 864. Scoring was based on neatness, drill, and proficiency in the manual of arms.

Among those who watched the drill were Mayor Kelly, who presented a plaque to the winners; James B. McCahey, president of the board of education; Maj. Gen. Frank McCoy, commandant of the 6th Corps area; Maj. Frank L. Beals, assistant superintendent of schools, and Col. William F. Morrison, in charge of the high school R. O. T. C. units.

HUNT MINISTER WITH WRIT FOR ALIMONY DELAY

Judge Philip J. Finnegan in the Circuit court yesterday issued a writ for the arrest of Corydon F. Battershell, 55 years old, a former Baptist minister, when he failed to appear in court on a charge of being $10,820 in arrears in alimony and support money to his former wife, Mrs. Gladys Stanley, 1540 East 65th place, and their two children.

Battershell was arrested last January on a similar writ after he had been sought for 11 years by his divorced wife. At that time the former minister was allowed his freedom on his own bond and the hearing was continued when he paid $150 on the arrearage and promised further payments.

In court yesterday Battershell's attorney exhibited a letter written by his client from New Philadelphia, O., in which Battershell said he was forced to leave Chicago to get work.

WOMAN CRITIC HOPES FOR FILM OF WHOLE OPERA

Lady Mabel Dunn, noted London music critic, arrived in Chicago yesterday fresh from a "mission" to Hollywood. That mission, she explained in the apartment of her Chicago hostess, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, is to "bring a complete opera into the movies."

The way having been paved by Grace Moore and others, the next move, says Lady Dunn, is the production of "Faust" or "Carmen," sung, however, in English. "It's a form of musical snobbery to give opera in a language the people cannot understand," she said.

Lady Dunn, who is the wife of Sir John Henry Dunn, was formerly married to Harold W. Letton of Chicago, whom she divorced in Florida in 1932. She will speak before the Alliance Francaise and Le Cercle Francais at 4 p. m. tomorrow at the Casino club.

DAUGHTER, PALS DEFEND TOUHY IN MAIL THEFT

He Was in Oak Park Then, She Swears.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 21.—[Special.]—Double barreled defense was offered today for Tommy Touhy, charged by the government with being implicated in a robbery here Jan. 3, 1933. The case is based on a $78,000 mail holdup at the station of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railway. Government witnesses had placed Touhy at a machine gun as one of the eight men in the robbery.

Daughter Offers His Alibi.

Eleanor Touhy, 21, daughter of Tommy Touhy, swore that during January and February, 1933 he was in the family home at Oak Park, Ill. Dr. Julius Auerbach testified that he treated Touhy during November and December of 1932 for a progressive paralysis. Touhy now is an invalid in a wheel chair. Dr. Auerbach is a member of the staff of the Lutheran Memorial hospital at Chicago.

The second part of the defense was contained in affidavits taken from Tommy's pals, "Silent Tim" Ryan and Frank McKee. They were not present in court here before a federal judge, because officials would not let them leave the prison on the island of Alcatraz in San Francisco Bay where they are serving time for the robbery. Robert V. Rensch, Touhy's counsel had questioned them there in the presence of a prison official. Both men denied that Touhy had anything to do either in planning or carrying out the robbery. McKee swore that in 1932 Touhy had trembled when he walked because of a disease from which he suffered.

Acquittal Plea Denied.

The defense started its case today, the government closing yesterday after the presentation of 39 witnesses, who had connected Touhy with the planning and performance of the robbery. The defense then lost its motion to have the judge direct a verdict of acquittal. So the jury must decide whether Touhy, tottering with increasing paralysis, was at his home in Oak Park or pointing a machine gun while engaged robbing the U. S. mails on Jan. 3, 1933.

FOUND DEAD IN AUTO TEN DAYS AFTER HE VANISHES FROM HOME

Samuel J. Tibbitts, 38 years old, disappeared on March 10 from his home at 1409 West 82d street. Two days later his wife reported his absence to the Gresham police. Last night Tibbitts was found dead in the front seat of his automobile in a garage he had rented on March 10 at 8120 Loomis street. A physician said Tibbitts had been dead for three days, but was unable to determine whether his death was caused by automobile exhaust fumes or was the result of a heart attack. Police said the car's ignition was turned on, but there was gasoline left in the tank. The garage door was slightly open.

Tibbitts was a supervising collector for the Prudential Life Insurance company. His employers told the police his accounts were in good order, and Mrs. Tibbitts said she knew of no reason for her husband to commit suicide. She also was unable to account for his whereabouts from March 10 until his death.

ASK INJUNCTIONS TO KEEP NAMES OF 4 OFF BALLOT

Injunction suit to restrain County Clerk Michael J. Flynn and state officials from placing the names of four Republican candidates for the state legislature on the April 14 primary ballots were filed in the Circuit court yesterday. One was on behalf of Walter A. Maslowski, 3008 West 41st place, who charged as a taxpayer that there is no Stanley Ronkowski, 354 Root street, for whom a nominating petition was filed in the Fourth senatorial district.

The three other bills were filed on behalf of Frank Metke, 3324 Wall street, also a taxpayer. They charged forged petitions were filed in the Ninth senatorial district on behalf of the candidacies of John Janowski, 3215 Cermak road; Joseph Sikora, 4330 South Paulina street, and J. Sokorsky, 2300 South Whipple street, who are running for representative.

FUGITIVE FROM PATROL WAGON SHOT, RETAKEN

Bullets flew on South Wabash avenue yesterday as policemen pursued Joseph Capler, 30 years old, 626 West Madison street, an ex-convict, after he escaped from a patrol wagon at the rear of the central station, 11th and State streets.

Wounded in the calf of his right leg, Capler was captured as he fumbled with the latch of a door of the Union bus depot at Roosevelt road and Wabash avenue.

Capler had been arrested at Randolph street and Michigan avenue for begging. When the door of the patrol wagon was opened at the station, he leaped out and fled across a vacant lot to Wabash avenue. Policemen Robert Burns and Stanley Kaczmarek each fired several shots at him.

Chevrolet's high-compression valve-in-head engine gives economy without equal!

FOR ECONOMICAL CHEVROLET TRANSPORTATION

The Chevrolet engine is the most economical automobile engine produced today, because (1) it is a six-cylinder engine, and (2) it is a valve-in-head six-cylinder engine.

Every test proves it's more economical . . . Every Chevrolet owner knows it's more economical . . . And every person will readily understand these simple A-B-C reasons why it is more economical

Its six cylinders use less gas and oil—in fact, use the least gas and oil—because six cylinders are the most economical combination used in modern automobiles.

Its valve-in-head design cuts gasoline consumption still lower because there is less loss of heat through the walls of the combustion chamber in valve-in-head engines, and the Chevrolet engine gives maximum heat (or power) saving.

Most important of all, Chevrolet's more efficient cooling system, pressure stream oiling and the greater accessibility of all working parts result in more dependable operation, over a longer period of time, with the lowest maintenance costs. Thus, Chevrolet's valve-in-head engine —only one of its kind in Chevrolet's price range—gives economy without equal.

HEARING ON LAKE SHORE RAILS SET FOR TOMORROW

Parks' New Drive Tops 1936 Projects.

BY HAL FOUST.

The Illinois commerce commission tomorrow will hear testimony on the petition of the Chicago Park district for the removal of the Chicago Surface lines tracks along Lake Shore drive between Chicago avenue and Navy pier. This removal is prerequisite to the construction of a satisfactory motor trafic connection with the outer link bridge.

The park district's plans for the construction of a new outer drive from North avenue to Ohio street, to be completed before the opening of the bridge next year, is the outstanding item on a list of trafic improvements scheduled for this year. However, throughout the park system, many minor projects are under way that in the aggregate will contribute materially to the safety and convenience of automobile travel in the city.

Three Approaches Altered.

In Humboldt park the through trafic approach to the Thaddeus Kosciusko monument from the south is being straightened and three dangerous diagonal motor entrances are being removed, at California and North avenues, at California and Division street, and at Kedzie and North avenues. The Y intersection of the main north and south boulevard with the continuation of Cortez street is being corrected.

In Jackson park the intersection of the outer drive and 57th street is being simplified and a driveway is being converted into a parking area for the Museum of Science and Industry. Pedestrian bridges are contemplated for 58th street and 67th street beaches. Three driveway intersections within the park are being remapped.

Correct 51st Street Tangle.

In Washington park the complicated intersections of Drexel boulevard and 51st street and of South Park way and 51st street are being revamped. Winding byways in the north end of the park between South Park way and St. Lawrence avenue are being returned to lawn. A deadly crossing on the continuation of 56th street is to be eliminated by closing a side road.

In Garfield park work has been suspended on the widening of Jackson boulevard's extravagant semi-circle alignment while the park commissioners reconsider a plan to shorten the route a quarter of a mile with a straight alignment for the convenience of a trafic of 38,000 cars a day. The plaza at Washington boulevard and Homan avenue is being reduced.

In Douglas park the kink and narrow bridge in Marshall boulevard is being removed and the driveway carried in a wide fill over the old bed of the south branch of the Chicago river. The diagonal entrance at Roosevelt road and California avenue is being closed. The intersections of Marshall boulevard and 19th street and of Douglas boulevard and Albany avenue are being altered.

In Marquette park two dangerous diagonal entrances are being converted into parking areas—at California avenue and Marquette road and at California and 71st street.

Parking facilities for 4,000 cars are being provided at the new Montrose beach.

FOES OF CANAL FOR FLORIDA RECEIVE CELERY

While Free Board Awaits Its Senate Friends.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—Venturing further into the political field by summoning John Henry Kirby of Texas, head of the Anti-New Deal Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution, Senator Hugo L. Black's so-called lobby investigating committee was confronted today with a concrete case of lobbying.

Senator Black himself was one of those "approached," in the parlance of his snoopers, by the Florida hotel lobby, which is at war with the Florida celery lobby over the famous $200,000,000 Florida ship canal which President Roosevelt started with a $5,000,000 ante of relief money.

May Air Celery Scandal.

Although 73 senators were involved in the big celery and hotel lobby scandal, very little was said about it today, except by their grateful wives. However, much is expected to be heard about it on Monday, when a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Florida ship canal appropriation was rejected comes up for a vote.

A $12,000,000 appropriation for the canal, carried in an amendment to the war department bill offered by Senator Duncan U. Fletcher [Dem., Fla.] was rejected last Wednesday by a vote of 39 to 34.

Today it was learned that each of the thirty-nine senators who voted against the canal, with the exception of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.], received a large case of excellent celery from the central and south Florida water conservation committee. Senator Vandenberg, having being credited with the single handed defeat of the Florida canal scheme, received two cases.

Senator Vandenberg denied he received the celery, but added with a twinkle in his eye he was "not the head of the celery department" in the Vandenberg home. Other senators denied it outright, but a telephone call to Mrs. William E. Boran, wife of the distinguished senator from Idaho, brought the information that she received hers and that it was very fine, indeed.

Others Get No Celery.

The thirty-four senators who voted in favor of the canal appropriation received no celery, but they did receive a proposition from Robert Kloeppel, proprietor of the swank George Washington, Mayflower, and Flagler hotels in Jacksonville and the George Washington in West Palm Beach.

"Please assist and vote for the Florida canal appropriation," urged Mr. Kloeppel in a telegram to the senators. "Senator Fletcher is a grand old gentleman who knows the facts and wouldn't mislead any one. Canal under actual construction. Calamity if appropriation fails to go through. Means livelihood to thousands. Without doubt worthwhile project. Extend cordial invitation to be my guest any time you are in Florida."

Florida Hospitality.

Senator Black voted for the canal and received the invitation to make himself at home, on the house, any time he cares to put up at any of Mr. Kloeppel's hotels. So did Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach [Radical Dem., Wash.]. The other three members of the committee, Senator Ernest W. Gibson [Rep., Vt.], Senator Sherman Minton [Dem., Ind.], and Senator Lynn Frazier [Radical, N. D.], received celery.

It was learned also that when the canal comes up for a vote on Monday it will carry. Senator Bennett C. Clark [Dem., Mo.], who voted against the canal and received celery, is planning to switch and thus will be entitled to the hotel accommodations. Several other senators who were absent on the previous vote expect to be there Monday and vote for "poor old man Fletcher." It is understood that the senators are going to put over the canal merely as a gesture to Senator Fletcher, knowing that it will be thrown out in conference with the house of representatives.

Senator Black, who already has subpenaed telegrams of such non-lobbying, but anti-New Deal organizations as the Crusaders, the Sentinels of the Republic, and the American Liberty league, now has subpenaed all telegrams sent or received by John Henry Kirby, Houston, Tex., oil and lumber man, who is president of the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution.

Mr. Kirby's organization is strictly political in nature and has taken no interest in particular legislation as such. He is fighting the New Deal as a whole, throughout the traditionally Democratic south.

Takes Issue With Black.

New York, March 21.—[Special.]—Bainbridge Colby denied today he either has suppressed or destroyed any telegram which he received from, or sent to James A. Arnold, general manager of the American Taxpayers' league.

"A statement appears in the New York Times," Mr. Colby said, "this morning by Senator Black, which I quote:

"'Yesterday it was developed by the committee that in the case of the American Taxpayers' league every telegram which passed between Mr. Colby and James A. Arnold, general mantger of the league, has been destroyed,' said Senator Black.

"This statement is untrue. I do not suppress telegrams which I receive. I keep them in my files, as well as copies of those I send."

Mrs. Hammond is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Spencer Williamson, 1517 Dearborn parkway. She was a debutant in 1929 and her marriage to Hammond in 1931 a society event.

BARE TWO MOVES TO STAY DEATH OF HAUPTMANN

Hoffman Fears Condon Plans New Flight

tack Jafsie's testimony as chief prosecution witness.

Gov. Hoffman has said Condon ought to be questioned again more thoroughly than he was questioned by the state police and at the trial. One of the points the governor has hammered at since he became active in the case has been the written and oral statements made by Condon since the trial.

Condon Tells of $250,000 "Offer."

Condon at one time was quoted as saying he had been offered $250,000 to change his testimony. Another time he said he believed Hauptmann had accomplices, and again he said he knew the man who claims he built the kidnap ladder.

As late as 17 days before the trial the governor recently disclosed, Condon called at the Dade county jail in Miami, Fla., to see Samuel W. Garelick, convicted kidnaper, in an attempt to identify him as the collector of the ransom.

Garelick was quoted today as saying Condon told him "I'm not so sure we have the right man."

Fisher, who, like the governor, has sought to question Condon since the Bronx school teacher's return from Panama four days ago, did not receive a reply today to his request to Attorney General Wilentz that he arrange an interview.

Hauptmann's statement that Condon was a man he ought to have seen at City Island was described today by Gregory Coldman, who is acting as spokesman for Dr. Condon, as "an admission of guilt."

The defense contention, however, is that Hauptmann did not know Condon, and never communicated with him or collected the ransom. Condon, the defense charges, went to City island regularly, probably saw Hauptmann, did not recognize him, yet swore on the witness stand two and a half years later he was the man who collected the ransom.

CHINESE IS FOUND DEAD.

Wong Ho, 67 years old, was found dead of heart disease yesterday in his room in the rear of his laundry at 3538 Indiana avenue.

BEDFORD-JONES 2D LOVE THEFT TRIAL TO OPEN

Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan yesterday cleared his docket of all cases preparatory to the opening tomorrow of the second trial of the $200,000 alienation of affections suit of Mrs. Helen Bedford-Jones, first wife of H. Bedford-Jones, magazine writer, against Mrs. Mary Bernardin Bedford-Jones, his present wife.

The plaintiff was awarded $100,000 last year by a jury in Federal Judge William H. Holly's court, but Judge Holly set aside the verdict as contrary to the evidence.

Mrs. Helen Bedford-Jones lives in Evansville, Ind. Bedford-Jones and his second wife live in California. The suit was filed in federal court here because of the litigants' diversity of citizenship.

ZION PREPARES TABERNACLE FOR PASSION DRAMA

Play Will Open April 9 for 21 Showings.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

In preparation for the Passion Play, 21 performances of which will be given this year from April 9 to May 24, Shiloh tabernacle at Zion, Ill., has been remodeled with an arch 60 feet long and 23 feet wide.

JABEZ TAYLOR.

Dramatized by Elder Jabez Taylor of the Christian Catholic church, the Zion players and the choir will have ample room now to present competently the final scenes of the life of Christ which, in the opinion of critics who saw the initial presentation last year, is a distinct contribution to the field of religious dramatic art.

Reverent Mood Conveyed.

"Frankly, I went to Zion in a mood of skepticism," observed one among the 65,000 persons who saw the play last year, "feeling that probably this would be just another rather flat church play rendered by a group of well-meaning young people with plenty of enthusiasm but with little artistic ability. This mood, however, quickly gave way to one of reverence which was conveyed to the entire audience."

While no comparison with the decennial production at Ober-Ammergau can justly be made, those witnessing both Passion plays have noticed that in the Shiloh tabernacle, no less than in the Bavarian al fresco production, every individual imparts a reality to his performance which can only be accounted for as due to a deep conviction of the personality of Christ. In both cases the casts have been chosen because each member is believed to be a Christian, and the aim of each member, equally so in both presentations, is to emphasize the sacrifice of Jesus in his love for humanity.

Background Is Authentic.

The author-director, Jabez Taylor, recently visited Palestine in search of detail on costume and scenery. Because the physiography of the Holy Land and the characteristics of its inhabitants have not pertinently changed in the last two thousand years, Elder Taylor easily found copious illustration of everyday life which he has worked up from photographs and sketches into an authentic background for the 26 scenes of this year's Passion Play.

SUSPENDED MINISTER LOSES HIS APPEAL TO SYNOD OF NEW JERSEY

Elizabeth, N. J., March 21.—(AP)—The appeal of the Rev. J. Gresham Machen of Philadelphia from the decision of the presbytery of New Brunswick suspending him from the ministry on insubordination charges was denied today by the special judicial commission of the Presbyterian synod of New Jersey.

The commission had been considering the appeal for several weeks.

The decision, announced by the Rev. Dr. William G. Felmeth, secretary of the commission, denied each one of the twelve counts on which Dr. Machen based his appeal.

The commission upheld the right of the general assembly to order all ministers and ruling elders to resign from the independent board of Presbyterian foreign missions. Dr. Machen was convicted of insubordination because of his failure to resign from the board.

7TH CHICAGOLAND MUSIC FESTIVAL SET FOR AUG. 15

The seventh annual Chicagoland Music Festival, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in coöperation with newspapers, civic and social organizations throughout the country, will be held Saturday, Aug. 15, in Soldiers' field. More than 600,000 people have witnessed these pageants of song and it is expected that another 100,000 spectators will applaud the winners of this year's contests.

In addition to the usual contests for men, women, and mixed choruses, adult and juvenile bands, junior and juvenile drum corps, baton twirlers and vocalists, five more have been added. They are for violinists, cornetists, harmonica players, yodlers, and composers. Awards again will be gold, silver, and bronze medals.

Deadlines for entry will be announced later. A preliminary contest for choruses, vocalists, and instrumentalists residing in Cook county will be held prior to the festival Saturday. Details of these will appear later in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE's Metropolitan sections. The festival headquarters will be in room 1418 in Tribune Tower. The telephone number is Superior 0100. Persons wishing the festival brochure giving details of the various competitions may obtain it by writing to festival headquarters.

LAETARE MEDAL GOES THIS YEAR TO RICHARD REID

Notre Dame, Ind., March 21.—[Special.]—Richard Reid, editor, lawyer and educator of Augusta, Ga., today was named as the 54th recipient of the Laetare medal.

The Rev. John F. O'Hara, C. S. C., president of Notre Dame, in announcing the award, said it's "a recognition of Mr. Reid's distinction as a Catholic layman and his achievement in the field of journalism as editor of the Bulletin of the Catholic Laymen's Association of Georgia."

The medal is bestowed yearly on a Catholic layman. The recipient's name is announced on Laetare Sunday, the fourth Sunday of Lent, a day set aside by the church for rejoicing in anticipation of Easter.

That custom was inspired by the papal practice of bestowing the Golden Rose on a member of the Italian nobility on Laetare Sunday. The first Laetare medal was given to John Gilmary Shea, historian, in 1883, by the Very Rev. John F. Sorin, C. S. C., founder and first president of Notre Dame.

Mr. Reid has written for the Augusta Chronicle and the Augusta Herald. He is past president of the Exchange club of that city, a member of the national executive board of the national council of Catholic men, and active with the Boy Scouts of America.

"Once you drive a Hudson . . . no other Eight will do!"

"And here is a car that will STAY in style!"

EVERYWHERE, our local Hudson owners are telling friends how their Hudsons outperform anything on the road . . . in acceleration, power for hills and straightaways, effortless all-day travel.

The reason? Because this Hudson has more power than any other Eight within hundreds of dollars of its price . . . and the smoothest automobile motor built. No vibration at any speed . . . longer life for the car . . . less "wear" on the driver!

They are telling, too, how much more comfort there is, front seat or back, because this new Hudson Eight has more length, more rear seat room, leg room, head room, than any other popular Eight.

They are praising Hudson's exclusive new way of driving, too . . . with the Electric Hand. They find it so much easier, and safer, to shift gears at a finger flick, without taking their hands from the wheel. And at last, three front seat passengers can enjoy real comfort . . . with gear and brake levers gone, and front floor all clear.

Let us show you what other owners have found out about Hudson economy and long life. Then take your "Discovery Drive" in a Hudson Eight with the Electric Hand . . . and see for yourself why so many thousands are changing to Hudson this year.

LIBERTIES OF AN AMERICAN.

I.

Current attacks on the constitution and the courts have had the salutary effect of increasing public interest in the charter of American liberties. This is a good thing. We Americans have come to take the constitution and its protections for granted.

Even lawyers have become rusty in the knowledge and neglectful of the study of some of the guarantees of the rights of citizens. That study of some of these little used constitutional rights has been neglected by the lawyer and the layman alike does not mean that their importance has been lessened with the passing of centuries. It results from the fact that the mere existence of these guarantees, with the existence of a system of courts free to enforce them, has been in many cases sufficient protection against the necessity of invoking their protection.

To realize the full value of those protections it is frequently necessary to go outside our own constitutional era. Only by reviewing the practices of tyrants before such rights were won, or the current practices of dictators who have overthrown them, can we realize the full measure of our good fortune.

The men who drafted the constitution and the citizens who ratified it had a clearer sense of the value of the guarantees than we have today. They lived a hundred and fifty years closer than we do to the abuses against which those provisions guard us. So pressing in their day was the necessity for a clear statement of the rights of citizens that ratification of the constitution itself was not accomplished until provision had been made for the submission by the first congress of the first ten amendments, which we know as the bill of rights.

The protection of civil rights is not a collateral function of the constitution, but the very essence of the form of government set up under it. Ours is designed to be a government of free men. If those whom we choose to operate that government are ever permitted to infringe upon civil rights, and destroy the freedom of the men whom they govern, what then remains of constitutional government will become empty and meaningless.

It is a maxim that rights may sleep but do not die. It is equally true that oppression of those rights may slumber in the presence of guarantees which protect them. In the imprisonment without due process of law of the little New Jersey tailor, Nebbia, in the attempts upon freedom of the press through licensing under the NRA, in the violent disregard of the right against unreasonable search and seizure by Senator Black, and in numerous other activities of the New Deal we find ample cause for reviewing and maintaining the civil rights guaranteed by the constitution.

Accordingly, the rights of American citizens will be discussed in a series of editorials which will be published from time to time on this page under the caption "Liberties of an American."

THE FLORIDA SHIP CANAL.

The senate last week rejected the administration's request for a 12 million dollar appropriation for the so-called Florida ship canal. A motion to reconsider has been made and will be acted upon tomorrow. Great pressure is being exerted to induce senators to support the measure. It is believed that the question will be defeated by the votes of the two senators from Illinois, Mr. Lewis and Mr. Dieterich, neither of whom took part in the previous decision.

It is to be hoped that for the sake of their reputations Mr. Lewis and Mr. Dieterich will not yield to political pressure on this question. Congress never has authorized the construction of the Florida canal. The project was turned down by the PWA as unsound. It was started with a 5 million dollar grant of relief money, made by the President himself, without the consultation of congress and contrary to the findings of the government engineers who had looked into the matter under Mr. Ickes' direction. Spokesmen for shipping companies say they do not want the canal and would not use it if it were available, but if congress does appropriate the 12 million dollars the government will be committed to spending no less than 200 million dollars, a fifth of a billion, to complete it.

Obviously the project is worthless and obviously it ought to be abandoned. The only argument against abandonment is the political one. There has been a certain amount of discontent among Florida Democrats which Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley would like to allay. They are willing to sacrifice Illinois taxpayers for this noble end, but it is difficult to believe that Mr. Lewis and Mr. Dieterich will be equally willing.

It is also difficult to believe that the two senators from this state are unmindful of the fact that the request for purchase by the government of the sanitary canal has been coldly received by the administration. Our canal is a far more important link in the nation's waterways than the Florida canal can ever become. The drainage canal's usefulness to Chicago as a means of sewage disposal has been destroyed by action of the federal government itself. Nevertheless, when Illinois' representatives in congress requested federal purchase of the waterway they were rebuffed. If the Illinois senators now vote for the Florida ship canal a good many citizens will suspect that the senators approved of the treatment they received.

DISCONTENTED COWS.

1. Chicago bank stocks have been rising continuously during the last six months, largely as a result of buying by New Yorkers. Thousands of shares of the big loop banks have gone down east. Meanwhile, Chicago investors have also appreciated the advantages of bank stock ownership in a period of reviving business, but their money has gone heavily into the shares of the New York banks.

2. A report of the United States bureau of mines which has just come to hand discloses the origin of the coal which keeps the people of each state warm. Illinois, a leading bituminous producer, shipping coal all around the country, also receives coal from Alabama, Arkansas, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and from abroad. Not that the people of this state are funny that way. Pennsylvania, the nation's first coal producer, is a customer for coal from Kentucky, Ohio, Alabama, West Virginia, and foreign countries.

3. A former president of the Chicago Association of Commerce was buying a lamp in a New York department store. "Why can't I buy a fine lamp like that in Chicago?" he asked the department manager. Replied the manager: "You can. Our resident buyer saw the identical lamp in a Chicago store and bought a number like it for us from a Chicago manufacturer."

4. A milk company which has represented that its commodity came from contented cows, now uses as its radio theme song "Contentment." That is no doubt in keeping with a popular urban notion. Seen from a passing automobile, a herd of Holsteins gives the appearance of peace and satisfaction. But as any one who really understands cows is fully aware, there is a heart in turmoil beneath the calm exterior. Every daughter of a bull is thinking all the time of the merit of the unattainable grass in a neighboring meadow. The placid eye is no more a sign of contentment than is the high forehead an indicator of large intellectual powers. It is our good fortune that the bitterness arising from a cow's frustration does not affect the chemistry of its daily product.

Moral: Contempt for what is close to hand is a basic animal instinct; or, if you prefer, cows are so discontented they're almost human.

ANOTHER FRONTIER.

Not the least of the headaches for the interstate commerce commission in the federal motor carrier act is the mandate to establish metropolitan zones. Under the terms of the act trucks and buses operating in a "zone adjacent to and commercially a part of a metropolitan center" are not subject to federal regulation. Therefore the commission must establish the exact limits where Chicago's hinterland begins and ends. Hearings have been held and interested parties have submitted ideas that range from the city limits to a circle with a fifty mile radius.

Perhaps two persons may be found who will agree to an identical location, but even then there will be mental reservations to suit the peculiar conditions surrounding the distribution of specific commodities. Nevertheless a precise line of demarcation must be determined on each of the highways that radiate from Chicago. Enforcement might even contemplate a stripe across the pavement with a shelter for an officer at the side of the road, like the foul line and judge at a bowling match, because no truck or bus may cross that line unless properly placarded to indicate that the owner has been awarded a certificate of "public convenience and necessity to operate in interstate commerce."

Thus does a new law, for which there was no demand whatever except from competing forms of transportation, create "convenience" to harass industry and "necessity" for more policing. The sole result will be to make distribution more expensive and intercommunity relations more complicated.

Editorial of the Day

THE LANDON SECRET.
[Rockford Register-Republic.]

It is one of the anomalies of public life in America that a man whose name was unknown to most of us a few months ago seems in the lead as popular choice for the Republican nomination for the presidency. We venture to say that a year ago the majority of United States citizens could not have recalled the name of the governor of Kansas. During the subsequent months Gov. Alf Landon has done little to advance his candidacy. Now, however, political leaders seem to be climbing on his band wagon at every crossroad.

This political enigma from Kansas has made only two speeches and has no organization to further his candidacy. The reason that this unknown in the national political field has suddenly become so great a figure that he looks like the inevitable choice of the Republicans in June at Cleveland seems to be because he typifies the old virtues of thrift, prudence, economy in government.

There is a growing number who feel that Gov. Landon's record represents the sharp contrast to the heedless spending of the present administration. The rush to Landon should be a warning to the President and the Democratic party. It indicates that the major issue of the coming campaign will be the New Deal spending policy.

Politicians will do well not to minimize the Landon threat. Here is a man whom public sentiment really has dragged out from comparative obscurity because he is a high executive who is outstanding in regard for the value of money and has a decent respect for the virtue of economy. Landon is a drab personality beside the brilliance of a Roosevelt, but in the very simplicity of his political philosophy lies his greatest strength.

CO-OPERATIVE COMMONWEALTHS

BY WILLIAM HARMON NORTON.

The word socialism is capable of accurate definition and is not necessarily surcharged with emotion. Why, then, should it be sidestepped like the Elizabethan synonym for "soused"? Norman Thomas has been known to camouflage it as "coöperation" throughout an entire address. And a favorite substitute among those now engaged in sanctifying socialism is "the coöperative commonwealth." The phrase is innocuous and has been agreeably perfumed with altruism and religion.

Admittedly socialism is coöperative. It does away with individual enterprise and initiative and hence with individual competition. It is thoroughly coöperative like an army or a machine.

But why should Socialists assert that theirs is the only coöperative commonwealth? They paint the present economic order as a horrid primordial jungle in which monstrous capitalistic saurians, red in tooth and claw, with individualistic ravine, stalk about unrestrained. This picture is modernly artistic in that it exemplifies the principle of distortion and the avoidance of the resemblance to reality. As a matter of fact our present social order, built on the foundation stones of private ownership and control within the law, is coöperative also. America without socialistic remodelings is a coöperative commonwealth.

Among primitive men the radius of coöperation was short. Coöperation was limited to the members of each little group of food gatherers in the forest. Among the Neanderthalers the man chipped the flints and brought home the kill, while the woman tended the fire and the babies. The family or tribe was self-sufficing and expected no help from without.

Today capitalistic civilization covers the nation with a web of coöperation whose radii reach to the earth's ends. Even so simple a detail as the American breakfast table enlists the services of tens of thousands of coöperators, as any high school boy will cheerfully explain. The breakfast grapefruit has been brought by a conveyor which includes as necessary links of the chain not only retailer and wholesaler and the little companies of packers, pickers, sprayers, and cultivators in the Florida or Texas orchard but also workers in mills and factories manufacturing boxes, wrappers, agricultural implements and chemical fertilizers and insecticides; men on freight trains and trucks; men forging rails and rolling stock and digging iron ore in mines; men in offices directing all these multifarious activities. There are innumerable co-laborers also in all that ministers to the life at higher than the bodily levels. That the morning TRIBUNE can be laid on the breakfast table is due to thousands of co-workers—the office staf, compositors, a world-wide news service, men in foreign paper mills, and loggers in distant forests. How exquisitely adjusted is the coöperation which brings to the home at the turn of a knob a symphony by the Chicago orchestra, cheering in a California stadium, or chants from the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem!

Under capitalism all sharers in the coöperative enterprise we call civilization are expected to be paid according to service rendered. The value of the nickel exchanged for the grapefruit is divided into parts about as minute and many as the nickel's molecules, and of these even the remotest coöperator gets his share. In so wide a distribution and one not directly supervised by omniscience it is highly probable that some coworkers are paid too much and some too little. But the compensations are regulated by impersonal economic law. They can be changed when found unjust without wrecking the social order, and they are accepted, if not always fully acceptable, by the recipients. Coöperation is uncoerced.

Plainly the issue between socialism and capitalism is not that of coöperation. Any civilized social order requires coöperation. The issue is whether coöperation shall be compulsory or free, whether compensation shall be according to need or according to service rendered. And whether, like the heart with its systole and diastole, like the atom with its proton and electron, human society does not require both coöperation and competition, and a scientific ethics does not find place for both the self-regarding and the other regarding motive.

Coöperation, regardless of motive, is viewed by the cold appraising economic eye as the meshing of cogs in a very intricate and far-from-perfected machine. It remains for some religious leaders to so transfigure coöperation that in and of itself it shines with spiritual effulgence. Church assemblies pass resolutions favoring consumers' coöperatives and preachers go forth to organize them as part of the cure of souls. It can hardly be that the coöperative is Christian because it claims to lessen the cost of distribution—chain stores do that. It must be because of the magic of "coöperation."

Thus teaches that devout apostle of the coöperative, Kagawa, who has come over into our American Macedonia to help us to it. His reported speeches at Indianapolis in December pictured the coöperation of the coöperatives as love. They "apply the love motive to industry." "Christianity and the coöperative movement are completely interlocked." "Christianity will fail without the coöperatives." Many of his listeners must have been profoundly concerned to learn that Christianity has become so completely interlocked with any economic system that it will fail without it—can draw the breath of its life only with the help of an economic pulmotor—and hence in case of the failure of that system must inevitably die.

No doubt coöperatives confer certain advantages on their members. The Serbian peasant long since found his credit coöperative useful since the state did not allow him to give security by mortgage. Kobe workers, Hawaiian fishermen, and Lancashire weavers, by means of their consumers' coöperatives, save something on their grocery bills by eliminating middlemen. Whether society is advantaged when the dispossessed merchants, that "dying class," go on the dole or join the workers, already too numerous for their jobs, may be left to experts. The economic values of Kagawa's projects are referred to those competent to assess them.

It would seem that if coöperation is Christian because it cheapens distribution by eliminating merchants, then the machine which cheapens production by eliminating labor must be Christian, too. If coöperation is love in a consumers' coöperative in Tokio, or on a collectivized farm in the Ukraine, it must be love also for the wage paid mechanics of an automobile factory in Michigan, and the dividend paid stockholders of a pulp mill in Canada—coöperators all!

If coöperation is the straight gate into the city of God one can enter as well by buying stock in General Motors as by joining a coöperative.

Americans generally do not tilt at usefully turning windmills. They see no more adorable beauty in socialism's coöperative commonwealth than in that of capitalism. In the consumers' coöperatives they find neither love nor Christianity. If these coöperatives succeed their victorious trampling down the merchant class may as well be called the "March of the Dinosaurs" as were the early triumphs of American corporations.

Moreover it is not clear that the motives of coöperating consumers are entirely religious. There seems to be a desire for cheaper goods and a disregard of the question at whose expense. We leave the mystery unsolved how the profit motive, which in the merchant is "greed," becomes "love" in the coöperative; why capitalism's freely coöperative commonwealth, in which distribution is fundamentally according to service done, is as a system "inequitable and un-Christian," while socialism's commonwealth, whose coöperation is compulsory and whose distribution is according to free grace, is the temple of social justice, the kingdom of heaven on earth.

How to Keep Well
By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Cutter will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual disease.

CURE OF SYPHILIS DEMANDED.

MOST communities boast a well organized fire brigade—paid or volunteer. In my old home town it was a distinct honor to hold membership in the fire company; to contribute of one's valor to the saving of life and of property. There were but two paid employes—the driver of the "steamer" and the engineer.

If a conflagration developed we did not stand by wailing or idly wringing our hands. Neither did we attempt to emulate Nero. In most instances we were able to prevent the spread of the flames to adjoining structures.

Syphilis is a fire that affects many human beings. It needs no fuel other than that furnished by the body itself, and it may attack all the vital organs, the nervous system, including the brain, and even the bones. It is a destroying force that will pass from person to person through contact. Physicians are prepared to combat it if the alarm bell tolls the location. This means that the one who is blazing with the disease must seek help—a diagnosis. If the smoke and flames are manifest they can be recognized readily and the proper extinguisher applied.

It is a relatively easy matter at the start of the disease to kill the syphilis organisms within the body. In fact, the best time to treat the infection is before the blood reaction becomes positive, hence any sore on the body, particularly about the genital region or on the lips or the tongue, should be considered as pointing to the presence of some important disorder—possibly syphilis.

Through the use of what is known as a dark field examination the parasites, if present, can be identified, that is, when the syphilis ulcer is less than ten days old. As a rule, at this time the blood test is negative. Six or seven weeks after the appearance of the initial sore the blood will react positively to the Wassermann or the Kahn test, which means that the disease has made great progress and is thereafter more difficult to eradicate.

There would be but few failures in treatment if patients could be persuaded to seek help promptly. All too frequently the sore is regarded with indifference and aid is not sought until the secondary rash appears over the body. Some physicians need intensive education on this point, as the ulcer may not be typical and yet be truly syphilitic.

Competent and adequate medical management spells death for the disease. In order to be effective, however, treatment must be given by a physician who thoroughly understands the varied symptoms which the disease presents and the best methods of destroying the cause. Furthermore, the plan must be thorough and comprehensive. A few doses of some antisyphilitic drug may bring about an immediate disappearance of all signs of trouble and lull the patient into a sense of false security. For the sake of the patient and the members of his family treatment must be continued until there is no further danger.

Rarely will a skilled physician be satisfied to discharge a patient as cured until he has had from twenty to thirty injections of some arsenic compound and double this number of some one of the heavy metals—mercury or bismuth. To pursue a proper course requires time, patience, and stick-to-it-iveness, but it means the difference between safety and permitting a smoldering infection to continue its destructive inroads upon the heart, the blood vessels, and the nervous system.

Syphilis is a scourge that is worldwide in its occurrence and we must not forget that there are approximately one million new cases in the United States each year. What a potential harvest of suffering, disability, and death this means. It is our greatest public health problem, as the disease can be innocently acquired.

In most cases cure is possible; but it is almost certain if an early diagnosis can be followed by a vigorous attack.

BLOOD PRESSURE.

A. E. R. writes: Much is said about high blood pressure, but very little about low blood pressure. Even doctors are reticent about it. I am 60 or 70 points below, yet I know of nothing to do. Among my symptoms are excessive dizziness, a desire to fall forward, especially on getting up in the morning, and a feeling of great exhaustion. Does it end in paralysis, cerebral hemorrhage, heart trouble, or any of the same results as high blood pressure?

Please advise about diet, rest, and medicine.

Is any tonic advisable?

Is milk good to take?

In a word, just what is good for low blood pressure?

REPLY.

Low blood pressure never results in any of the distressing symptoms of high blood pressure. It is relatively unimportant, and many people live long and happy lives in spite of it. Its cause is uncertain, some research attributing it to constitutional deficiencies, and the treatment varies with the individual. The usual complaints are exhaustion, instability on movement, and nervous disturbances. After middle life the person with low blood pressure has a better life expectancy than the one with high blood pressure, probably because of the fact that quiet, restful situations are sought.

Disease of the adrenal glands should be investigated, but where there is no specific disease there is no specific treatment. Cultivation of enthusiasm for the many good things of life will raise the blood pressure where medicine and diet will fail.

"WATER INTOXICATION."

Mrs. H. H. writes: Some time ago I read an article in your column about water intoxication from drinking too much water and other fluids. Could one be so affected by taking too much water in enemas? Is it considered dangerous to take large enemas? Is a quart of water about the average amount used in an enema?

REPLY.

Water taken in an enema does not enter the system in the same way that water taken by mouth does, hence water intoxication does not occur. But too much water in an enema can distend the bowel dangerously. For an adult, one to two pints are injected slowly and retained as long as possible. Instead of water, two or three ounces of warm olive oil may be used. The frequent use of enemas is not recommended, as constipation may be increased.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters to this department must be signed with names and addresses of writers.

TITLE TO PROPERTY.

Chicago, March 13.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A man died leaving three children, all of age. Two are married, having no children, and one is single. He made a will many years ago when he had money, which he has since turned in and spent. The will reads: $500 to the one son [married] in lieu of money he received at the time he married. The balance to be divided share and share alike between the other two. There is nothing but a frame building, which is worth about one-third of what it was when he made the will. 1. Is there any other way than probating by which these three can get title to the property? 2. They have to file the will, do they not? 3. What is the time limit? 4. If they all agree to let it ride the way it is for seven years—the statute is seven years, is it not? 5. Will they automatically come into title after seven years? If there should be any children born to the two married sons during the seven years [6] what effect would this have on title? 7. Could they eliminate trouble by quit claiming? 8. I assume when children were of age they could make a proof of heirship and thus get title without probating? 9. Could they give clear title? 10. Can they file the will themselves or is it necessary for them to have a lawyer? 11. What would he charge for his services? 12. Could two boys who are to have the house give the one who is to receive the $500 a mortgage and have him quit claim? E. H.

1. Probate proceedings would be necessary to produce a title which a contract purchaser would be forced to accept.

2 and 3. Probate can be entirely dispensed with if none of the parties are insisting upon it, but see 1.

4. This is the period established by court decision as the limitation for filing of claims in absence of probate.

5. Since purchasers would not run the risk of the property being subjected to debts, they would be somewhat more willing to waive probate after this period, but they might insist that the facts as to heirship be established. This latter could be done by a simplified statutory procedure.

6. None, unless the married sons died.

7. Yes, but in general we would advise discussing all of these contingencies in a personal interview with an attorney.

8. It is not clear what you mean by getting title.

9. Before the seven years, the title company would insist on a bond against claims, and of course they would have to be satisfied as to the facts about heirship.

10. We are not in a position to estimate their experience and resourcefulness.

11. Depends largely on the attorney whom they would employ.

12. Yes, but see preceding answers.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

ESTATE PROPERTY.

Chicago, March 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can an executor of an estate manage property as he sees fit without approval of majority of heirs? There are four heirs. 2. Can one of heirs place a small mortgage against property of an amount of less than one-fourth? Property has an income and is clear of debt. 3. Is an approval of majority necessary? 4. Property has been in hands of executor for four years and not probated. A. C. P.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—Not only Italy is hit by the league of nations sanctions. Another sovereign state is in a bad way on account of them, the Vatican, according to reports in Italian refugee circles here.

The great reduction in the tourist stream flowing into Italy means a corresponding diminution in the number of tourists and faithful to visit the Vatican and a consequent lessening of contributions. Despite various official assurances that travelers are safe in Italy there is a general fear among the peoples participating in the sanctions of mob violence. A number of incidents involving English speaking people have brought about this nervousness.

Another reason for the present desperate state of the Vatican treasury, THE TRIBUNE's informants declare, is a stoppage of contributions—St. Peter's pence—from sanctions countries. The two banks through which the Vatican state performs its financial operations are Italian and severely under the control of the Fascist government.

There have even been accusations by anti-Fascists abroad that the Vatican and the Italian state have reached a "clearing" agreement whereby the latter may use Peter's pence, frozen in sanctions countries, to make cash payments for its purchases. This accusation was immediately and officially denied in the Osservatore Romano, Vatican organ.

The commission of cardinals which supervises the Vatican finances is said to have made a report recently indicating a desperate condition, and Msgr. Bernardini, papal nuncio at Berne, is said to have called at the league of nations secretariat twice on this errand since sanctions were enforced. He conferred with Secretary General Joseph Avenol, Frenchman, and it is said that Premier Pierre Laval, informed of these conversations, plans to propose some special arrangement whereby the Vatican's difficulties will be solved.

IS THE FARMER A PROFLIGATE?

Louisville, Ky., March 17.—Unfortunately and most unwisely and unjustly, it has seemed to me, there is now already all but established in the minds of the people the belief that the farmer should be restrained of his freedom in the use of his land. We are told that he customarily and by wholesale mismanages his estate and damages and injures the lands of the country by a cultivation that causes deterioration and erosion, the latter rather high sounding word meaning, it is supposed, what the farmer calls "washing."

It has seemed to me that this is a most unworthy accusation to level at the farmers of the country. Theirs are the children who will inherit the lands that they till. If the farmer destroys this heritage by improvidence and neglect he knows he inflicts injury upon those for whom he principally labors as well as hurts himself. He may very reasonably be relied on to consider the interests of his family with fully as much love and deep attachment as the average politician and public pensioner holds for the nation.

The farmer has appeared to fail to realize the danger that confronts him in the future development of the New Deal. He has accepted without suspicion and very gratefully the sudden affection of the Democratic party, which has always denied him the tarifs which would protect his products, and which have been granted him over its opposition by the Republican party. He has not yet openly and generally resented the charge that he must be restrained in the management of his land.

But when the entire savings of the nation have been poured into that remarkable pump, when the forgotten man, the consumer, discovers that the cost of maintaining his table has been greatly increased by reason of planned economy, applied by government to farming, and that he is heavily taxed to meet the interest and endeavor to pay off the debt incurred in part by reason of a direct gift of approximately two billion dollars to the farmer by our national Santa Claus, who has nothing whatever to give except what he taxes out of the people or saddles upon them and upon their children—as a public debt—then, I am persuaded, a new idea will germinate, if it has not already done so, in some ambitious minded New Dealer.

Having reasoned it out to himself that the forgotten man is in fact the consumer, and that he has a plurality of votes over the farmer, and that it was the forgotten man that elected the President in 1932, this New Dealer may then go a step further in his progress than has yet been attempted. He may say to the farmer: "You have possessed yourself of the public bounty. We find you destroying the national wealth. You farm 'way back in the horse and buggy days. We will no longer pay you to do no work nor to refrain from misuse of the land. We will take it over and establish a real farm administration, one that both owns and manages the farm land of the United States, intelligently and economically."

The farmer, if he reflects and considers, must see that the public mind is rapidly being prepared for such an announcement. He owes it to himself to make reply. He owes it to himself and the country as well to give his side of the controversy, to tell of his tireless struggle against weeds that infest his fields, the pests that destroy his crops, his instant attack on the wash that threatens his soil; that his eye is ever upon his land and that with the most faithful labor and effort he battles the year round to save for his children and so saves for the nation its productivity and value.

MURDEROUS INCLINATIONS.

New Canton, Ill., March 14.—Six great powers seem to be squaring off for another free for all—three on a side this time. France, England, and Russia are lined up against Germany, Italy, and Japan.

After several years of roughhouse they will in all probability end up in exactly the same position as in 1918, licking their wounds and looking forward to rearmament, remobilization, and the chance, once more, to preserve peace and their divine rights.

Of course they cannot compete with us, in motor car accidents, gang killings, etc., so they take the next best means.

Thank God we do not have to take it out on some other country, but can confine our homicidal tendencies to our own fair land in a civilized manner.

CARL WICKUM.

ADORATION.

Springfield, Ill., March 15.—In part one, page 30, of Sunday's TRIBUNE reference is made to the destruction of the "venerated crucifix of Christ of the Faith, long an object of adoration."

It is a common belief among those not of the Catholic faith that Catholics adore images, statues, crucifixes, relics of saints, and other holy objects. This is a misunderstanding, as God alone is the object of our adoration. All other holy persons, places, or objects are revered or honored because of their reference to or connection with God, but it is an error to say that they are adored.

MOTORMAN'S ERROR.

Chicago, March 12.—As time goes by there seem to be more auto and street car collisions. Up until a few days ago I concluded the motorists were at fault. Getting off the car at Lunt avenue [7000 North] I found the light was red; therefore, going west, I started to cross Clark street, but imagine my embarrassment when the street car started and went through the red light, and the yellow light did not show until the car was across the street.

JAPAN AND CHINA STRUGGLE TO IRON OUT DIFFICULTIES

Agree on Ultimate Aims at Secret Parley.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, March 21.—Hachiro Arita, Japanese ambassador to China, returned today to Shanghai from Nanking, where he completed the longest diplomatic conversations on Chinese-Japanese relations ever recorded. They consisted of talks of three to four hours duration daily, extending for five days, with Gen. Chang Chun, Chinese foreign minister. The conference was secret and no secretaries were present, Arita said.

"We reached an agreement on the ultimate aims of the projected readjustment of Chinese-Japanese relations and also touched on the international situation and issues affecting the league of nations, but the divergence of opinion on some important issues still exists," the ambassador added.

Ignore North China Trouble.

Arita said the issues of the complications in North China were not touched, being reserved for his discussion with Gen. Sung Chen-yuan, chairman of the Hopei-Chahar political council next week. Tomorrow Ambassador Arita is scheduled to preside at a conference of Japanese consuls of Central and South China, following which he will proceed to North China for further conferences and thence to Hsinking, the capital of Manchukuo. There he will confer with Emperor Kang Teh of Manchukuo. Then he will go to Tokio where he is scheduled for the post of foreign minister.

Arita denied the existence of a secret Chinese-soviet treaty, the alleged text of which was recently exploited by Japanese newspapers here. However, he said Russia recently approached China to sign a nonaggression treaty.

Demands Bankers' Release.

MOSCOW, March 21.—(AP)—The immediate release of two officials of the soviet Far Eastern bank who were arrested by Japanese-Manchukuan authorities following liquidation of the bank, was demanded by the Russian consul general at Harbin, it was reported tonight.

The demand was accompanied by a protest against the arrests, which were characterized in soviet dispatches as "probably for purposes of extortion."

The officials arrested were named Surikoff, chief accountant, and Gurevich, the bank lawyer. They had remained in Harbin to wind up the affairs of the bank which the soviet government ordered closed "due to the abnormal business conditions in Manchukuo." Members of the board of the bank and other employés have already returned to the soviet union.

Bring Torture Charges.

The official soviet press has been accusing the Japanese-Manchukuan authorities of arresting soviet citizens on what they called trumped up charges and subjecting them to torture. The press statements also declared that Japan has not yet answered a Russian protest dispatched Jan. 21.

The protest expressly demanded an investigation of the case of the soviet citizen Bogomoloff, arrested in October and declared by the Japanese gendarmes to have been killed while attempting to escape. The Russian newspapers charge Bogomoloff's death was from the effects of torture.

CONSULATE CLOSED.

The soviet government ordered its consulate in Mukden, Manchukuo closed on Feb. 14, although an official declined to connect the order with recent clashes between Japanese-Manchukuan and soviet troops on the Outer Mongolian frontier.

The consulate was closed, a spokesman said, "in view of the created conditions," which was explained only by the assertion that government felt it unnecessary to keep open an office "which we can get along without."

BRITAIN, FRANCE AND U. S. ACCEPT NEW NAVY PACT

Limits Battleships' Size to 35,000 Tons.

LONDON, March 21.—(AP)—The United States, Great Britain, and France today accepted the final draft of a new naval treaty limiting the size of battleships and the building of cruisers for six years.

The document will be signed Wednesday, when a conference of four months ends with the original big five powers of the 1922 Washington agreement reduced to three.

Limits Size of Battleships.

The draft treaty as finally approved would restrict battleships to a top size of 35,000 tons, retain 10,000 tons as the maximum for large cruisers, and provide that none of th[e] size shall be constructed during the six year period.

Norman H. Davis, chief of the American delegation, served notice, however, that the United States would consider herself free from the large cruiser limit if Great Britain should build more than 70 cruisers.

Unsuccessful in keeping Japan and Italy pledged to naval limitation, the conferees wrote escape clauses in the treaty which would permit them to disregard the limits if Japan and other nonsigners exceeded them. Japan walked out of the conference because her demand for equality was rejected. Italy refused to participate because of sanctions for her war on Ethiopia.

An opening for other nations to adopt similar restrictions was left by the conference. It announced that a copy of the treaty would be sent to the league of nations for consideration by member governments. Germany, which like Japan is no longer a member of the league, has a separate bilateral agreement with Britain, limiting the size of her navy, rebuilt when she scrapped the restrictions of the Versailles treaty.

ITALY, HUNGARY AND AUSTRIA TO SIGN NEW PACT

Treaty Designed to Bind 3 Nations Closer.

ROME, March 21.—(AP)—Representatives of Italy, Austria and Hungary have agreed, after conferences here, to sign a new consultative treaty strengthening and replacing the Rome accords of 1934, reliable sources disclosed tonight.

Premier Mussolini had made a renewed bid for continued friendship of Austria and Hungary in consultations with Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria and Premier Julius Goemboes of Hungary. Those nations had expressed their sympathy for the Italian cause when the league of nations tried to stop the Italo-Ethiopian war with sanctions.

Still Under Discussion.

The terms of the new treaty were still under discussion, but the principal points were said to have been covered.

Austria wishes her independence guaranteed, but it was learned that Hungary is not very enthusiastic on that point. Nevertheless there were indications that this matter would be touched on in the treaty, which would bind the three countries closer than the old accord.

Economic talks are still to come, it was stated.

The same source revealed that Premier Goemboes was seeking two concessions—signed guarantees for the Hungarian minorities in Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Jugo-Slavia, and Hungary's right to armament equality with those same neighbors.

Hungary Allotted Army of 35,000.

The treaty of Trianon—the peace pact signed June 4, 1920, allows Hungary about 35,000 men. A similar restriction was placed on Austria.

During this diplomatic interlude, Italian troops pressed forward in simultaneous advances on both fronts in Ethiopia, with their objectives quoram, 30 miles south of Amba Alaji, and Harrar, the second city of Ethiopia.

Admiral Domenico Cavagnari, undersecretary of the navy, told the chamber of deputies that the situation in the Mediterranean "has had some critical moments" which "could have given rise to tragic events on the seas."

TWO JAILED FOR BIKE THEFTS.

Judge Joseph Graber in the South Chicago court yesterday sentenced Warner Faris, 25 years old, 18 West 113th place, to 30 days in the Bridewell for the theft of three bicycles and ordered John Van Dam, 43 years old, 11543 Wentworth avenue, to serve a like term for disposing of the stolen property.

CROP SUBSIDY, SOIL BUILDING STIR UP FARMERS

Protest Rates of Pay as Set by Wallace.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—Announcement of some details of the new farm program brought a quick response today in telegraphed protests against rates and conditions for paying soil conservation subsidies to producers of rice, sugar cane and sugar beets.

The protesting farmers were understood to call the rates too low as outlined yesterday by Secretary Wallace.

As agricultural extension directors arrived from several states to confer with the AAA, these two main problems were reported:

1. Division of the $470,000,000 subsidy among the states.
2. Exact definitions for soil "depleting," "conserving" and "building crops," and classification of crops under such terms.

Average $10 An Acre.

The soil conservation program would provide for payment of an average of $10 an acre for land diverted from commercial crops to soil conserving uses. The AAA would so employ about 30,000,000 acres that would be devoted to commercial crops in 1936.

While cotton farmers after a two day controversy asked payment at the rate of 6 cents a pound for cotton they would have grown on land which will be planted this year in soil conserving crops. The AAA will pay five cents. Other farmers are said to have similar basis for complaints.

Sectional disputes have arisen over subsidy payments. Recently at Memphis during a regional conference a farmer charged the south would be expected to divert the most acres from its principal cash crop, and would not receive a fair share of subsidies. Charges were made at Chicago that the south would receive more money than it should get.

Rice and Sugar Problem.

As to rice and sugar payments, AAA officials said they believed they had done the best they could, and that when farmers understood the plan thoroughly there might be general accord. For sugar beets and sugar cane a payment of 12½ cents per 100 pounds would be made for sugar produced on the base acreage, provided an area equal to half the base be planted in soil "building" crops.

A coöperating rice farmer would receive 20 cents for each 100 pounds of his domestic consumption quota or rice providing an acreage of rice land equal to not less than 20 per cent of the base rice acreage be planted in oil "improving" crops or devoted to a soil "improving" practice this year. A rice producer must plant not less than 65 per cent of his base acreage to qualify for a payment.

Another dispute arises over what constitutes a "soil depleting" and a "soil conserving crop." Because many crops are classed as soil "depleting" under certain conditions in one section of the country and as soil "conserving" in others, one official said the matter of classification may be decided largely on a state or local basis.

Calls Meeting for Monday.

Representative Fred Cummings, Fort Collins, Colo., says government benefits would not accrue to beet growers in proportion to benefits paid to growers of other crops and there would be unfair conditions between renters and land owners. He called a meeting for Monday of senators and representatives from nearly a dozen beet producing states, asked them to study the plan, and suggest changes.

Senator Edward P. Costigan, [Dem., Colo.], co-author of the AAA amendment which brought the sugar industry under AAA regulations, reserved comment.

Cummings added benefits would be 33.75 cents on a ton of beets, based on an average of 270 pounds of sugar produced from a ton of raw material. He said payment would only be two and one-half per cent of the selling price of sugar.

Cummings asserted sugar growers would be required to retire from cultivation or sow with soil building crops, acreage equal to one-half the amount they devote to sugar beets. Cotton growers would be required to retire only 35 per cent and tobacco growers 30 per cent, he said.

Second Boy's Body Found in Canal in Niles Center

The body of Robert McCalley, 14 years old, 7440 North Hoyne avenue, was recovered yesterday from the Sanitary district canal in Niles Center just north of Howard street by chief boatswain's mate, Carl Howell, of the Wilmette coast guard station. McCalley and James Harvey, 14 years old, 7349 North Seeley avenue, drowned on Friday when a boat in which they were playing with another companion, George Palmer, 15 years old, 7351 North Seeley avenue, capsized and threw them into the canal. Palmer swam to safety.

Companion Shot

MARGARET SCHMIDT.

Marvin Hilt, 28 years old, 4160 Ellis avenue, an unemployed bus driver, ended a brief career as a hold-up man early yesterday when he was shot and seriously wounded after he had held up a tavern a 1312 East 53d street with a toy pistol.

Hilt, who is married and the father of three children, had been drinking in the tavern with Miss Margaret Schmidt, 19 years old, 930 East 42d street, when he told her he was going to rob the place. She attempted to dissuade him, she said, but Hilt drew his gun and ordered the bartender to turn over the money in the cash register to him. As he was leaving the place Patrick Wade, proprietor of the tavern, struck him on the head with a revolver and started to disarm him. When Hilt offered resistance he was shot in the abdomen by Samuel Finn, a patron, who was guarding him with Wade's weapon.

PARTY DEMAND CHANGES ORDER ON CCC CAMPS

President Likely to Keep All Open.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—As a result of conferences with a bloc of Democratic representatives, President Roosevelt was authoritatively reported tonight to have decided to rescind his recently issued executive order which would have closed 700 CCC camps April 1.

On the basis of new information given to him, the President was said to be prepared to issue a new order continuing the camps slated to be abandoned at least until enrollees have completed work on which they are engaged.

Order to Close Camps.

The civilian conservation corps already had notified representatives that certain camps in their states were to be closed under the President's original order.

It was also understood an allocation of funds would be made to maintain the camps during the remainder of the fiscal year, to June 30. An official announcement of the new plans will be made next week, it was stated, probably Monday or Tuesday.

The President's reported decision to cancel his previous order followed an incipient rebellion among house Democrats, who were outspoken in their insistence that the CCC work go on in their home districts.

Leaders Withhold Comment.

Representatives Nichols and Johnson, Oklahoma Democrats, who have played leading rôles in the negotiations to maintain the existing 2,158 camps at full strength, tonight declined any comment on the President's reported decision.

Earlier today, however, Representative Nichols announced that a petition signed by 75 Democratic members and filed with Caucus Chairman Taylor [Dem., Colo.], had been withdrawn "pending further developments."

Other members of the bloc said privately, however, they would insist on going ahead with the petition unless a favorable compromise were reached over the week-end.

CLIMB WRONG MOUNTAIN FOR LOST AVIATOR

Salt Lake City, Utah, March 21.—(AP)—A ground party turned back yesterday after climbing the wrong mountain seeking wreckage of the plane of Howard Stark, department of commerce flyer, missing since Jan. 16, set out again today. The party now will climb Black mountain 10,000 foot peak near the summit of which flyers seeking Stark's plane found a snowy mound which they said resembled the outline of a plane. Stark was lost in a snowstorm while flying here from Rock Springs, Wyo.

SCOUT MEETING SPOT TAKEN BY BOONDOGGLERS

Park Official Ousts Boys for WPA Dancers.

Boondoggling classes sponsored by the Works Progress administration have forced the Boy Scouts of section 7 of the north shore district to move their semi-monthly examinations, held for seven years in the Jefferson Park No. 2 fieldhouse at 5425 Higgins avenue, to inadequate and inconvenient quarters at Wilson park, Wilson and Milwaukee avenues, Scout leaders declared yesterday.

"The parents of 475 Scouts resent the action of the management of the Jefferson Park fieldhouse in forcing Scouting from its doors to favor such activities as boondoggling," said W. Pennigsdorf, neighborhood commissioner for the Scoutleaders' association.

"Insult to Common Sense."

"The action shows a distinct disregard of our community rights, an insult to our common sense and an injustice to our families. For at least seven years the semi-monthly examinations of Scouts of the neighborhood were held in the centrally located Jefferson Park fieldhouse, whose banquet hall in the basement was the only suitable site to be found in the community.

"Last October Harry L. Van Trees, the park director, denied us further use of the building, with the explanation that 'better use' had been found for the premises. Evidently he meant the various arts and crafts classes, such as dancing and knitting, which are under the Works Progress administration. Despite repeated appeals, he has refused to let the Scouts in again.

"Since last fall nineteen groups with Scouts reporting for examinations have been obliged to meet in a small room of the Wilson park fieldhouse, which is entirely unsuitable, due to small size and location. Most of the boys walk past the Jefferson fieldhouse on their long hike to Wilson park, crossing dangerous streets on the way."

"Scouting as Important."

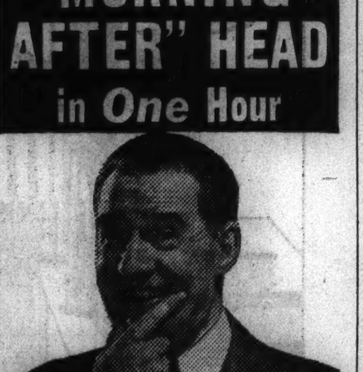
Willard Farr, chairman of the Scout examination boards, expressed similar complaints, adding that it was impossible to hold satisfactory examinations with the boys scattered in shower and locker rooms. From his observation of results over many years, he said, Scouting was at least as important and practical as boondoggling classes.

Arthur C. Maumann, assistant district commander, said he had complained to Park Director Van Trees several times in vain.

Van Trees refused to comment beyond denying that the Scout officials had talked to him in the matter.

French Royalist Head Gets 4 Months for Blum Attack

PARIS, March 21.—(AP)—Charles Maurras, director of the monarchist organization L'Action Française, was sentenced to four months in prison today in connection with a royalist attack last month on Leon Blum, Socialist leader. Joseph Delest, his associate, was fined 100 francs [$6.62].



Here's a quick way to rid your system of the poisons that make you feel logy and achy

If you have over-indulged in eating or drinking to the point that your head aches, your stomach is upset, and you feel "dead" on your feet—

DON'T TAKE MEDICINE WHICH MERELY GIVES YOU TEMPORARY RELIEF TO MAKE YOU FEEL BETTER. The thing to do is take something which will get rid of the cause of the trouble. Any doctor will confirm this.

And here is what millions of people do to end that terrible "morning after" feeling in 1 hour, or less. Simply mix 1/5 of a glass of Pluto Water with 4/5 of a glass of hot water, and drink. This is what happens:

First, any excess acid in the stomach is carried away. Second, your sluggish liver and gall are stimulated to action. Third, a complete bowel flush is attained. When this happens your head clears. Your stomach settles. Your energy returns. You look and feel like yourself.

Pluto Water is a non-habit-forming saline mineral water. Sure! Quick! Gentle! Safe! Get Pluto from your druggist—either in the 25c, or the large 50c size, which contains three times the quantity. In 1 hour, or less, you'll feel like a new person.

264 LOSE JOBS WITH IERC; 189 IN COOK COUNTY

A speedier reduction in the number of administrative employés of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission than its officers had anticipated was disclosed yesterday in a report showing that 264 members of the staf had been dropped from the pay rolls since March 1. The addition of 22 employés in the state auditing, finance and treasury departments of the commission brought the net decrease to 242.

In a forecast presented to the commission on March 3 it was estimated that only 45 employés could be eliminated by March 15. The reductions, preparing for discontinuance of the IERC by May 1, reduced the total administrative personnel in the state from 5,511 to 5,269.

The Cook county administration underwent the greatest slash, with a reduction of 189 employés, 119 of whom were social workers.

Meanwhile, it was indicated the confusion created by the scramble of dismissed WPA workers back to relief rolls will be heightened at the close of this month when WPA officials begin their program of gradually reducing WPA lists by approximately 7 per cent each month for three months to eliminate 42,000 WPA employés.

HOPES TO RETURN TO U. S.; FREED AS LABATT KIDNAPER

LONDON, Ont., March 21.—(AP)—David Meisner, freed at his second trial on a charge of kidnaping John Labatt, rich brewer, said today he hoped to return to the United States to rejoin his wife and take up his life where he left off 18 months ago.

Meisner, a native of Ontario, was brought to Canada from his home in Covington, Ky. He was convicted more than a year ago and sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary. Changed evidence by Labatt and the testimony of Michael McCardell, confessed abductor of the brewer, played a large part in freeing Meisner in Supreme court last night.

W. A. Bickers, United States consul in London, said he thought Meisner's chances of readmission to the United States were slim. Meisner never was naturalized as a citizen of the United States.

Robbery Victims View Gems Seized by Police

Several hundred robbery victims viewed a quantity of jewelry yesterday in the Shakespeare avenue station. The loot had been taken from the Alex Junievicz jewelry store at 3317 South Halsted street after Junievicz had been named by Charles Novak, 25 years old, 1032 West 48th street, a confessed burglar, as a buyer of his loot. Two persons identified property which had been stolen from them. Assistant State's Attorney Julius Sherwin said Junievicz would be arraigned tomorrow in felony court on charges of receiving stolen property.

Three necessary steps in a fully protective heart examination: The clinical examination by a trained physician, the electrocardiograph record of the heart's action and the X-ray study of the chest showing its contour and size.

Suddenly, without warning, thousands are struck down by

Heart Disease

RECENTLY published figures show that fatalities from HEART DISEASE increased in Chicago during 1935 while the number of deaths from all causes decreased. Scarcely a day passes that the newspapers do not carry a story of the sudden collapse of some comparatively young and supposedly healthy business executive at the height of an important and valuable career. The loss of these men, aside from the shock to family and friends, is an economic waste which in many cases could and should have been prevented.

These sudden and tragic deaths are usually the result of an over taxation of hearts that have been previously damaged by an infection which the individual did not know existed—or they may have been caused directly by high tension working and living habits. The most common causes of heart trouble are rheumatic fever, sore throat, diseased tonsils, toxic thyroid, high blood pressure, extreme worry or mental strain, irregular living habits and syphilis. Many of these ailments, especially syphilis, can cause extensive damage to the heart before the patient is aware that anything is wrong.

Regular periodic medical examinations, including the use of all the facilities which modern medicine provides, would disclose the presence of these infections as well as evidences of worry or strain, in most cases, before the heart was affected. When these conditions are discovered early, proper care can be instituted that will eliminate the trouble or prevent further development. Protection lies in knowing at the earliest moment whether some hidden infection is encroaching upon the heart. Today, very little time and very little expense are required for these regular inspections. They can be made by competent physicians employing every modern medical facility, including the X-ray, at fees almost anyone can afford to pay.

The time required at a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE for a COMPLETE HEART EXAMINATION is less than an hour, including X-ray, electrocardiogram and laboratory tests, and the total cost is but $6.00.

All examinations and treatments are rendered through a friendly, personal relationship, by competent and experienced medical men with special knowledge and training in their respective fields of medicine who feel that their greatest service to patients lies through a responsible medical organization. Complete, modern medical facilities are available to aid in diagnostic and treatment service, including the newest and most complete X-ray equipment in the Middle West, a modern and completely equipped medical laboratory and other necessary scientific apparatus.

A special invitation is extended to every reader of this announcement to visit the offices of Dr. Joseph G. Berkowitz and medical associates and personally inspect the facilities of a United Medical Service which are at your disposal.

Eyesight and Health

According to medical authorities on diseases of the eyes seven persons out of ten have defective eyes and are endangering their sight and health by forcing them to do the work of normal eyes. Periodic eye examinations by a qualified physician are very important, first, because clear vision progressively decreases with advancing years and, second, because eyestrain often seriously affects the nervous system and causes nervousness, headache, neuralgia, nausea, fatigue, etc.

A Complete Medical Eye Examination by a specially trained physician, including a medical examination of the eyes, refraction, and special tests for vision, urinalysis, complete blood and serological tests is........ $3.00

70 Garden Clubs Present Navy Pier Exhibits.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Navy pier has been made into a peninsula of flower and vegetable gardens by 400 women who opened their 10th annual Chicago Flower show yesterday. A throng of 18,000 gardeners and flower lovers from all parts of the United States attended the opening of the show presented by the Garden Club of Illinois.

Judges had practically completed their work of awarding prizes when the doors of the exhibition hall at the pier opened at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The prize winning exhibits, displayed by 70 garden clubs, offer practical lessons in the use of plant material. Educational features have been woven into all phases of the show, which is run by women representatives of the 120 garden clubs affiliated with the state organization.

Gardens in Bottles.

The exhibition hall, 1,700 feet long and 60 feet wide, is covered with gardens of almost every type and design from gardens in glass bottles to estate plantings. In every garden exhibit there is a diagram which shows the names of the various plants used. Hundreds of visitors yesterday were making notes of the many combinations of plant materials and designs that may be utilized in their own gardens.

The flower and vegetable plants used in the club exhibits were grown by the member exhibitors. Many of the gardens are small but the plans and plantings can be expanded to suit the needs of home gardeners, show officials pointed out.

The show is packed from end to end with exhibits built around both new and old ideas in gardening. Club workers are being praised for having the most complete show ever offered by the women of Illinois.

Forest Preserve Wins Medal.

Judges awarded one of the gold medals in the special exhibit section to the forest preserve of Cook county on a big patch of earth brought in out of the woods under the direction of A. C. Korsgard. Last year Mr. Korsgard won a silver medal on a smaller patch of good earth transferred from the forest preserve to the pier. It was one of the big features in the 1935 show.

Mr. Korsgard's patch of earth this year shows "nature in the raw," with moss covered stumps, rotten logs, blood root, and anemones sticking their blossoms through the surface of the cold ground. A stream bubbles through it.

Frontier Gardens Popular.

Many visitors are collecting around the frontier gardens of the south and central west. In the Carolina frontier garden is to be seen red clay and plant material brought out of the Carolina hills. The doorway is decorated with a black kettle, an old oaken bucket hanging in a well, coon skins on the side of the house, a chair with a cow hide seat, all familiar objects in 1700. In the central west frontier garden there are such details as an old sunbonnet mashed flat on a bench, a musket, a brass kettle, and bobcat's hide stretched over a board.

The show is under the general direction of Mrs. O. W. Dynes and Mrs. Warren W. Shoemaker, co-chairmen. The exhibit hall will be open daily from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. throughout the week, closing next Sunday.

Gold medals were awarded to the following for special exhibits in which exhibitors grew their own plant material used in garden displays:

Mrs. Warren Wright, Chicago park district, Forest Preserve of Cook county, Illinois Nurserymen's association, Garden Club of America, American Gardeners' association, Morton arboretum, National Association of Gardeners [north shore branch], North Shore Horticultural society, Vaughan's Seed store, state department of agriculture, and University Horticultural society.

Among the passengers was Harry Woodring, assistant secretary of war.

STOP WISCONSIN WPA STRIKERS' CAPITOL SIEGE

La Follette Orders State House Cleared.

Madison, Wis., March 21.—[Special.]—Acting on orders from Gov. Philip F. La Follette, seventy Madison policemen today broke the ten day siege of the state capitol by clearing the assembly chamber of WPA strikers from the Fox river valley who were encamped there.

The strikers offered no resistance, in accordance with the advice of their leader, Lyle Olson of Green Bay. He instructed them to file out in orderly fashion, asserting that the workers "will make a temporary retreat, but will carry on the battle back home."

Pack Personal Effects.

The women in the crew immediately began gathering their children together and the men grudgingly started packing grips with personal belongings they had strewn about the chamber.

The policemen remained on guard in the assembly hall to maintain order until the retreat was completed.

The strikers were granted, at their request, permission to clean up the chamber before they left.

The strange siege started March 12 when the strikers came to Madison to enforce their demands for a wage increase from $48 to $60 a month. State WPA Administrator Martin W. Torkelson gave them final word today that he could not grant the raise in pay.

Others Are Barred.

In ordering the group out, Gov. La Follette said that when the strikers came here they were extended the use of the capitol the same as any other group, but that they later had refused other persons the use of the chambers.

The encampment refused to give up the assembly last night for a high school debate which had been scheduled some time ago.

"When this group saw fit to deny others the same privileges which they claim for themselves," said the governor, "I instructed the chief engineer of the building to have them dispersed so that the capitol may be available to all as it should be."

ROB MUSICIANS OF INSTRUMENTS.

Two gunmen early yesterday took a banjo and an accordion from Bruno Vitale, 2820 Polk street, and Guy Loperi, 1407 Flournoy street, musicians in a tavern at 834 South California avenue.

HEYWOOD BROUN, SIX OTHERS HELD IN PAPER STRIKE

Milwaukee, Wis., March 21.—[Special.]—Seven persons were arrested, including Heywood Broun of New York, nationally known radical, during a demonstration today in connection with a newspaper strike on the Wisconsin News.

The arrests were made during brushes which the pickets and their sympathizers had with police in front of the News building and the Safety building. The central police station is located in the latter building.

Broun was one of two charged with interfering with an officer. His bail was set at $125. He had $70 in his pockets, and the remainder was obtained through the strike committee. The others also were released on bond. Their trial is set for Monday.

HOODLUM TELLS WEITZMAN PLOT TO SLAY DAICHES

State Ready to Bolster "Incredible" Story.

How Walter Murphy, the state's chief witness in the murder trial of Irving Weitzman, enjoyed the freedom of the city and even placed bets on the ponies while in technical custody of state's attorney's police was told yesterday.

These facts were elicited on cross-examination of Murphy, who had resumed the witness stand before a jury in the Criminal court of Judge John J. Lupe, where Weitzman is being tried a second time for complicity in the slaying of Eli Daiches, advertising executive.

Murphy, who is under indictment for Daiches' murder, repeated his story of the slaying conspiracy Friday under questioning of Assistant State's Attorney John Boyle. He testified that he and a fellow ruffian had been hired by Irving Weitzman to murder Daiches in a plot to obtain $286,000 in insurance.

Murphy Story Called Incredible.

At the conclusion of Murphy's testimony, Defense Attorney W. W. Smith had asked that it be stricken on the grounds that in reversing the previous conviction and life sentence of Weitzman, the Illinois Supreme court had declared that Murphy's story was a "difficult one to believe."

Judge Lupe, however, refused to consider the motion until after the state had concluded its case. Assistant State's Attorneys Emmett Moynihan and Boyle promised to produce corroborative testimony from other witnesses.

As the result of the court's ruling, Murphy was put on the witness stand for cross-examination by Defense Attorney Smith.

Living at State's Expense.

Under prodding by Smith, Murphy admitted he and his wife have been living at the Oak Park Arms hotel in Oak Park since his arrest in the fall of 1934 at the expense of the state's attorney's office.

Murphy told how he traded his automobile in for a new one several months ago and said that on various occasions he and his wife, accompanied by policemen, would drive around the city.

"Isn't it a fact that on one occasion you walked into a gambling place to bet on the horses, accompanied by policemen?" Attorney Smith asked.

"Yes, that's true," Murphy answered reluctantly.

Detail on Betting Vague.

The witnesses said he didn't remember where the place was located but thought it was "somewhere" west of Oak Park. Attorney Smith didn't inquire further into the visit, but asked Murphy if he expected to receive consideration for turning state's evidence.

"I expect to," Murphy answered.

"You admit you lied most of the time you were in custody," Attorney Smith continued. "I suppose you would lie now to help yourself or to save yourself from the penitentiary?"

"Yep, that's right," the witness replied.

At this point Judge Lupe adjourned the trial until tomorrow morning. Assistant State's Attorney Boyle said the state would conclude its evidence early this week.

JUSTIN M'CARTHY, NOTED AUTHOR, DEAD IN LONDON

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, March 21.—Justin McCarthy, author and playwright, died today, after a long illness, at the age of 75. He wrote "If I Were King," which later was adapted to "The Vagabond King."

CHOPS UP BANK WITH AX; DIES OF HEART ATTACK

Bayonne, N. J., March 21.—[Special.]—William Feehan, 55 years old, "got even" with the Mechanics Trust company today, but it cost him his life. He was displeased because the restricted basis on which the bank has been operating since Jan. 1, 1934, prevented him withdrawing $200 he had on deposit.

To the amazement of depositors and employés, Feehan suddenly began wielding a long handled ax he had carried into the bank. Swinging wildly, he chopped down two doors, hacked at the tellers' cages, pounded at marble and metal work, and broke much glass.

"Please give me ten minutes more to do what I want to do," he appealed to the janitor, drawn from the cellar by the uproar. Without waiting for assent, Feehan went on with his work.

Somebody yelled "Holdup!" and three policemen came on the run. They entered the bank with guns drawn, but the axman, on the verge of exhaustion from his efforts, surrendered his weapon without dispute. Then he slumped to the floor.

When examined he was found to be dead. A physician said: "Heart attack."

FRANCE STRIKES AT TUNIS REVOLT; SEIZES HUNDREDS

Virtual Martial Law Rules African Protectorate.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 21.—While the French appear to have succeeded temporarily in suppressing the insurrectional movement in Syria, the Paris government is seriously worried over the growing unrest in Tunis. Hundreds of native nationalists have been arrested there for subversive activities and sentenced to long jail terms or to detention and concentration camps recently.

An indication of the gravity of the disturbances in the African protectorate was contained in a communique issued by Marcel Peyrniton, the French resident general, which stated:

"The energetic and wise measures immediately taken have proved to the agitators that the authorities are more than ever resolved not to permit them to disrupt the work of reconstruction which is being so actively pursued.

"Martial Law" in Effect.

The measures in question practically amount to martial law, comprising the suppression of freedom of the press, the right of assembly and the closing of all nationalist organizations.

As in Egypt and Syria, students are playing a leading part in the revolutionary movement, which unites nationalists, Socialists and communists against French authorities. Following violent demonstrations at Tunis Kairouan, and other cities, hundreds of students were expelled from the Moslem university, El Zituna. Thirty-four were condemned to jail for from ten to three months and given heavy fines.

Numerous "political suspects" have been interned in a special concentration camp at Bordj le Boeuf in the Sahara desert, where the prisoners are guarded by black troops and are isolated.

Part of General Movement.

The unrest in Tunis is regarded in informal colonial circles here as part of a general movement for independence among north African peoples caused by the Italo-Ethiopian war. Tunisian nationalists, who have come to regard Sidi Ahmed Bey, their alleged ruler, as a puppet in the hands of the French, have demanded democratic reforms giving the people a part in controling their destinies.

Tunis became a French protectorate in 1881, France obtaining control of the army, education, finance, and public works. Attempting to meet the nationalist demands, the French in 1922 established a general council of forty-four French and eighteen nominated native representatives.

HAWKS LOSE, 3 TO 1; FINISH IN THIRD PLACE

CHICAGO BOXERS END DRILL TODAY FOR N. Y. BOUTS

Coaches Still Ponder Choice of Fighters.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 21.—Chicago or New York? This is the question which perplexes New York fight fans as they anticipate the ninth annual Golden Gloves scraps Monday night between the nation's two greatest cities.

Chicago's boys are ready. So are the youngsters who will represent Manhattan and attempt to regain the championship won last year in Chicago Stadium by the westerners Twenty thousand will watch the 16 intercity fights and for them, it is predicted, a drama of action will be unfolded which will eclipse all other intercity rivalries.

Visiting Team Has Not Won.

No visiting team ever has been returned victor in the preceding years during which span Chicago has won four titles, tied once in 1928, and lost three times. Chicago won last year, 11 to 5, and in that conquest established one of the records of Golden Gloves. Losing 5 to 3 at the intermission, Chicago swept through the final eight matches without a defeat. That victorious surge was started by Elwood McReynolds, runner-up welterweight, who now is battling for the same position on the 1936 team.

The other Golden Gloves record also is held by Chicago. In 1931 the boys from the Windy City administered a 13 to 3 licking to Father Knickerbocker, which mark still stands as a flood tide effort. After losing the opening match Chicago rushed through 11 consecutive bouts victoriously, then lost one, and eventually wound up with 13 victories. New York narrowly missed tying this in 1933, when the easterners won, 12 to 4, but there were several questionable decisions, not the least of which was the last bout of the evening when Adam Smith, Rockford heavyweight champion, was judged the loser.

Makeup of Team Undecided.

The coaches still are undecided concerning the makeup of the Chicago team. Five champions must fight. These boys are Johnny Brown, 118 pounds; Pete Lello, 135 pounds; Chester Rutecki, 147 pounds; Carl Vinciquerra, 175 pounds, and Paul Hartnek, heavyweight. The other champions—Jackie Wilson, 112 pounds; Ted Kara, 126 pounds, and Milton Shivers, 160 pounds—come from Cleveland and Detroit. One of them will fight Monday night in Madison Square Garden, and now the opinion of the coaches is that Wilson will get the call, although he was not asked to report at the Illinois Athletic club for the preliminary training.

Jackie is more than 6 feet tall, despite his flyweight proportions. Consequently he has a tremendous physical advantage. It doesn't seem possible that any flyweight, even Joe Wall, New York's Negro champion, can stand up against him. Shivers, who hails from Detroit, has been showing extraordinary ability, and so has Kara. One of them will fight. There is no reason why all should not fight, except that New York imposed a restriction several years ago which will undoubtedly be removed after this year.

Here's Present Lineup.

This present intercity arrangement for the five Chicago boys who are certain to fight follows:

Johnny Brown vs. Pete Scalzo, 118 pounds.

Pete Lello vs. Murray Kravitz, 135 pounds.

Chester Rutecki vs. Vincent Pimpinella, 147 pounds.

Carl Vinciquerra vs. George Brothers, 175 pounds.

Paul Hartnek vs. Jim Howell, heavyweight.

You could sell out Madison Square Garden just for these five bouts. But there'll be 11 more. Add 'em up, divide or subtract, and the answer is the same—the greatest show in the world, the Golden Gloves intercity fights of 1936.

No Golden Gloves team ever has worked harder. The 31 boys have drilled every afternoon, gone on the road every morning. They ask only a victory over New York and are willing to accept the decision of the coaches as to who shall do the fighting.

How Other Weights Look.

That two of the championship positions must be filled by boys who did not win titles in Chicago is a handicap, perhaps, but at the same time it permits a manipulation of the squad to obtain the best possible results. Granting for the moment that Jackie Wilson will be chosen from the three ineligibles, the situation in the other weights then looks like this:

Austin McCann, New York featherweight champion, will face Paul Spica of St. Louis or Ray Harris of South Bend. Harris, a southpaw scrapper, was here two years ago. He knows how to fight in front of a hostile throng, will not be worried, and is considered a safe although not a spectacular bet in this intercity fight.

Giants Pound Warneke; Beat Cubs, 9 to 2

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pensacola, Fla., March 21.—The champion Cubs found things tougher in Houston Thursday than they had been in San Antonio Wednesday, tougher in New Orleans yesterday than in Houston Thursday, and today, O, goodness gracious! Their oldest rivals, the New York Giants, gave them a brutal 9 to 2 licking in the opening of the six game spring series.

Lon Warneke started for the champs and though he had his anxious moments in the first three innings, he kept the Giants away from the plate until the Cubs scored a run in the first half of the fourth inning, off Carl Hubbell, New York starting pitcher.

This Cub run seemed to inflame the Giants, who had been trounced in their three earlier exhibition games with the Cleveland Indians. In their fourth they fell on Lon with a double, two singles and a double for three runs.

Easy for Freddie.

Thereafter it was just a breeze for Freddie Fitzsimmons, plump possessor of a $1 contract, who pitched four innings after Hubbell had retired at the end of his four inning assignment. Fred Marberry, reformed American league umpire, pitched the ninth and gave up two walks and a single for the Cubs' second and last run.

Roy Henshaw pitched the last five innings for the Cubs and augmented pitching ineffectiveness with two throwing errors.

The Cubs did not bruise Hubbell to any appreciable extent in the first inning. Galan grounded to Bartell and Herman flied to Davis, then Klein fanned.

Gabby's Single Wasted.

The Giants filled the bases in their half of the first, but nothing came of it. With one out Moore singled to center and stole second just before Ripple walked. Davis flied to Galan, then Leslie walked, filling the bases. Jackson ended it with a fly to Galan.

Hartnett led off the second inning with a single to center. He reached second on Demaree's high bouncer to Hubbell, but was out, Hubbell to Whitehead, when he overran second. Grimm and Hack were easy fly ball victims.

Whitehead singled off Hack's glove to start the Giant second, but was doubled with Mancuso on Gus' liner to Hack. Hubbell mowed down the Cubs in one, two, three order in the third and only three batsmen faced Warneke in the Giant half.

The Cubs got a run home and had the bases full when the light went out in their fourth. Herman opened with a single to right, the second hit off Hubbell, and stopped at third on Hartnett's second hit, a double off the far distant left field fence. Demaree was given an intentional pass, filling the bases. Grimm flied to Davis, Herman scoring and Hartnett reaching third. Hack walked, again filling the bases. Jurges ran the count to three balls and two strikes, then whiffed on a bad pitch.

Lon Gets Thumped.

The Giants thumped Warneke for four hits and three runs in the latter half of the fourth. Davis started things by slamming a double off the left field fence and paused while Leslie popped to Herman. He went to third when Jackson caromed a single off Hack's instep. Whitehead came through with his second single to center, Davis scoring the tying run, and Mancuso followed through with a double to left which scored Jackson and Whitehead. Koenig batted for Hubbell and popped to Jurges and Bartell flied to Demaree.

Fitzsimmons started his work in the fifth by fanning Stainback, who batted for Warneke. Galan walked and took second on a wild pitch. Then Herman flied to Ripple. Klein walked, but the inning ended on Hartnett's pop to Whitehead.

Little Roy Comes On.

Manager Grimm sent for Henshaw and Ken O'Dea as his battery at the Sox Score 4 in 9th, Beat Angels, 6-2

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

San Bernardino, Cal., March 21.—The White Sox, making their initial appearance of the spring homegoing barnstorming tour, were more or less annoyed for a limited time this afternoon, but in the end everything worked out to their satisfaction. For eight innings they could do nothing better than keep on even terms with the Los Angeles Angels, but the ninth was entirely different. The major leaguers opened up seriously at the end and registered four runs for a 6 to 2 victory.

Chief among the day's developments was the importance of the bat swung by Marshall Mauldin, the recruit recalled from Longview, Tex. Mauldin was permitted to perform in center because no other candidates were available and he surprised Manager Jim Dykes by exploding three hits in five appearances. Two of his hits were wasted, but the third came in the ninth to dispatch homeward the first two of the four deciding runs.

Angels Fill Bases.

The Sox pitching was good enough for minor league purposes and probably would have been better if the two men who shared the job had felt there was any real necessity for bearing down. John Whitehead took care of the assignment during the first five innings, yielding four hits and one run. The remaining Angel hits and the other run were plucked from Vernon Kennedy, who was treated to various bits of trouble by some of the former major leaguers who are spending their declining days as Coast league employés.

Whitehead had pleasant sailing in the first inning, but encountered difficulties in the second. He adjusted the situation in time. With one out Schulmerich and Reese singled. With two gone Whitehead plunked Steiner on the hoof with a pitched ball, thereby filling the bases. The trouble was removed as soon as Whitehead was able to slip across three strikes on Campbell.

Sox Get Going in Third.

The White Sox came up with nothing more potent than a single by Mauldin in the first inning and a single by Sewell in the second. The third resulted in something worth while due to a slip in the Angels' defense. Radcliff opened with a single

KILIAN, VOPEL WIN BIKE RACE BEFORE 16,982

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Chicago's thirty-fifth six day bicycle race terminated last night in a two team tie as far as mileage was concerned, but no electric camera eye was required to inform the 16,982 wildly cheering customers that the German team of Gustav Kilian and Heinz Vopel had definitly and conclusively won the race, their seventh consecutive victory on American boards.

Tied with the two speedy Teutons in mileage was the popular Canadian duo of Torchy Peden and Jules Audy, but a glance at the scoreboard at midnight showed the Germans with an overwhelming total of 1,105 sprint points, enough to win a 12 day race and certainly sufficient to top the 601 points scored by Peden and Audy.

Thomas-Rodman Third.

Holding third place for the 2,605 mile journey, which began last Sunday evening, was the Chicago-Kenosha team of Jerry Rodman and Bobby Thomas. They won third position, for which they were tied in mileage by Alvaro Georgetti and Ferdinando Grillo of Italy, and the Chicago-Cleveland entry of Cecil Yates and Saveer Van Slambrouck by finishing with 541 points. The Italians collected 505, and Yates and Van Slambrouck had 461.

The gathering of nearly 17,000, which covered practically every scarlet pew in the Stadium, despite an increase in admission prices, saw enough riding in the last hour to hold it until next November's race.

Two Old Masters.

It saw Kilian and Vopel use their heads as well as their legs in those last 60 minutes. There was Kilian, who rides a bicycle like old Mac Garner bringing home a winner on rent day. There was Vopel, squinting over his shoulder at the pack like a western hombre being pursued by

BY HOWARD BARRY.

De La Salle of Chicago and St. Mary of Anderson, Ind., will meet tonight at Loyola university gymnasium with the National Catholic Interscholastic basketball championship at stake. The encounter shapes up as a battle between the most powerful team of the tournament and the most courageous.

St. Mary, the little fellows from Indiana who have acquired the reputation of going through Loyola tournaments on their nerve, went up against a big, fast team from Campion academy, Prairie du Chien, Wis., in one of last night's semi-finals.

Hoosiers Stage Story Book Finish.

The Indiana boys seemed beaten all the way, but apparently they didn't know it and, with fifteen seconds to play, they were behind by 1 point. Then Gene Zagorski dribbled down the side line and skimmed a pass to Marty Broderick. From the side Broderick sent the ball arching high and it swished through the net for the points that gave St. Mary a 32 to 31 victory.

De La Salle, holder of the Chicago Catholic league championship, renewed its duel with St. George of Evanston in the other semi-final and emerged victorious, 39 to 32, after a battle which saw St. George drop far behind only to return with a rush

DECATUR BEATS DANVILLE, 26-22, FOR STATE TITLE

Champaign, Ill., March 21.—[Special.]—Decatur tonight handed Danville a 26 to 22 defeat in the final game of the Illinois High school basketball tournament here. The 1936 champions were slow to start, and trailed Danville throughout the first half, which ended, 15 to 12. Early in the third period, however, Weingand brought Decatur up to even terms with a field goal. Thereafter, the score see-sawed for several minutes, until Decatur took a 19-18 advantage as the final quarter started.

Danville went into the lead on Tuggle's basket. Baker dropped in a free throw to tie the score again. Here Weingand again connected on a one-handed field goal, and within a few seconds tore through the Danville defense for another basket that made the score 24 to 20 in favor of Decatur.

Owens Scores on Rebound.

Jack Owens missed a free throw, but dashed under the basket and tipped in the rebound for a field goal and Decatur led by two points. Baker was fouled, but missed the free throw. Minick of Decatur leaped high and pushed the ball through the basket for the final points of the game.

Decatur, in winning the championship game, sullied Danville's record for the first time this year. It was the Maroon's 24th game and their first defeat.

Breaks Attendance Marks.

All attendance records for the state tournament were broken when 39,443 passed through the turnstiles, 9,347 more than in 1935.

Danville entered the final by defeating Mount Pulaski, 36 to 33, in the afternoon.

Decatur advanced to the championship game by turning back Johnson City, 20 to 19.

Five Records Are Broken in Armour Meet

Five records were broken and a sixth was equaled in the eighth Armour institute relays last night as 400 midwest collegians closed the indoor track season at the University of Chicago fieldhouse.

New marks, three of them jettisoning records which had stood since 1932, were made by Al Haller of Wisconsin in the pole vault, by Cal Beckett of Marquette in the half mile run, by Sunny Heg of Northwestern in the quarter mile, by Doc Huntley of Illinois in the 70 yard high hurdles, and by the Michigan Normal college foursome in the college one mile relay.

Tolmich Wins Three.

Individual honors in the meet went to Allan Tolmich of Wayne university, Detroit, who won three first places, an unprecedented feat in the Armour meet, and to Ward Parker of Wisconsin, who captured the new individual "all around" championship, based on performance in seven events. Tolmich, who had won two firsts and a second in the Central intercollegiate meet at South Bend last week, last night took the titles in three of the college division races—the high and low hurdles and the dash.

Parker barely nosed out Dill Hemphill of Kansas State by a margin of 5,389½ to 5,386½, in the all around event. Parker scored heavily in the pole vault, clearing 12 feet 4 inches to lead the six competitors, tied for first in the high jump and was second in the broad jump. Hemphill won the 60 yard dash and 880 yard run and was strong in the other five events. Bob Carter of Northwestern took third with 5,000½.

Badgers Win Four.

In the university division Wisconsin, Illinois, and Kansas State were outstanding. The Badgers took four firsts; Illinois took two firsts, four seconds, and three fourths; and Kansas State took three firsts, two seconds, and two thirds.

Bob Grieve of Illinois equaled the Armour record of :07.1, first made by Randall Herman of Carleton, in winning the University 70 yard dash.

Huntley Lowers Record.

Osman [Doc] Huntley of Illinois lowered the record in the 70 yard high hurdles, finishing in :08.7, a yard and a half in front of his team mate, Jack Robinson, against whom he has

MONTREAL, Que., March 21.—(AP)—The Chicago Blackhawks were forced into third place in the American division of the National Hocky league tonight when the Stanley cup holders, the Montreal Maroons, defeated them 3 to 1 in a match featured by spectacular goalkeeping of Mike Karakas.

Montreal qualified for the National league championship series with the Detroit Red Wings, opening here next Tuesday, while Chicago will meet New York Americans in the third place series. Tied with Boston in points, Chicago has fewer victories and is entrenched in third place regardless of the result of the Ranger-Boston game tomorrow.

The close-checking battle was in doubt up to the 18th minute of the third period when Joe Blinco broke away from a Chicago gang attack to give the Maroons a two goal margin. Chicago scored, first early in the second period, when Johnny Gottselig rifled home a short shot on Glen Brydson's pass.

Fans Cheer Karakas.

The score touched off one of the best sustained attacks seen here this season in which Karakas drew rounds of applause from the pro-Montreal crowd. The young Chicago goalie kicked out 19 shots but finally was at the mercy of the Maroons. First Baldy Northcott drove home a short pass from Hooley Smith in a scramble and then Gus Marker gave the Maroons the lead by rounding left defense on passes by Bob Gracie and Herb Cain. Marker's hard knee high shot caught the corner.

Earl Seibert was the mainspring of a bitter Chicago attack in the third period, but the Hawks could not drive their way through and Maroons held control to the end when Blinco's goal settled the issue.

Hawks Take Lead.

Chicago scored on a beautiful play at the start of the second period. Brydson and Burke broke from their own end and Brydson carried down right wing. As Wentworth moved over to check him, Brydson fired a long pass across the goal mouth. Gottselig trapped the puck and fired it home from five feet, all in one motion. He was checked heavily into the goal post as he shot. The time was 1:46.

The starting lines returned. Karakas drew applause with a hard stop after Blinco broke clear. He made two beautiful saves on Smith and Wentworth, drawing another round of applause. The goalie was in exceptional form. He picked off another from Smith and got his skate on a drive by Northcott that seemed to have him beaten.

The tide of battle had swung completely against Chicago with Maroons desperately seeking the tying goal. Ward and Northcott tricked the defense, but Karakas made a sliding fall to save. Against ordinary goal tending the attack was worth at least several goals. Eventually the pressure told.

Big Cheer for Mike.

Hooley Smith was right in on the goal in a scramble. He passed to Northcott and the left winger deflected the puck into the lower corner. The third lines came on and the partisan crowd went wild as Marker scored, giving the Maroons the lead.

Gracie rushed with Cain and Marker. Marker, on the left wing, rounded Seibert and rifled a knee high shot into the cage. The time was 19:08.

Karakas was cheered as he went to his post at the start of the third period. His second period display was regarded by the crowd as the finest exhibition of goal tending of the season.

Chicago forced a pile up in the Maroon goal, but Chabot came up with the puck in his pads. Romnes intercepted a Montreal pass and let go a terrific shot, but Chabot got his stick to it.

Chicago put on four forwards and Blinco broke alone from center ice to race in on Karakas and score from close range at 18:26.

DE LA SALLE AND ST. MARY REACH CATHOLIC FINAL

Chicago, Indiana Quintets Clash for Title Tonight.

that made the last period one long session of pandemonium from the cheering section.

De La Salle Stars Pop 'em In.

Those skillful De La Salle sharpshooters, Eddie Riska, Joe Gresik, and Frank Hollendoner, beat a tattoo against the backboard and sent the ball caroming into the net time and again as St. George threatened to take the lead.

First it was Gresik who got his team off to a great start by making four baskets in the first period. In the second quarter he shared the burden with Riska. Then, in the third period, Riska was the leader in a great drive that gave De La Salle its commanding lead. Three times in quick succession Riska flashed down the floor to score on the run. And while all this was going on, Hollendoner was contributing a basket now and then to keep things moving.

St. George came back with a strong threat after trailing, 34 to 23, as the last period began. With Calihan and O'Donnell leading the attack and Tierney maneuvering cleverly where he was most needed, the Evanston players cut De La Salle's advantage to 36 to 30 at one point. But that was the closest they came.

Campion got away to a 6 to 0 lead at the start of its game with St. Mary. From that point the Indiana boys had an uphill fight to overtake their fast and rangy rivals. Campion led at the quarter, 10 to 6, and at the half, 20 to 15.

St. Mary Creeps Up.

Bit by bit St. Mary closed that gap and midway in the final period took the lead at 28 to 27 when Suchocki sank a basket and a free throw. But Campion forged ahead immediately and led, 31 to 28, with little more than a minute to go. Then Welch scored for St. Mary to set the stage for Broderick's spectacular finish.

SHAMROCKS AND DETROIT MEET IN PLAYOFF TODAY

The C. Y. O. Shamrock hocky team will be seeking its third straight victory and its second against the Detroit Chevrolet six tonight, in the Hanley cup playoff in the Chicago Stadium. Detroit also will be trying for a second triumph over the Shamrocks.

The last time the Shamrocks met Detroit at the Stadium several individual fights raged throughout the contest.

Detroit depends a great deal on its triple threat scoring trio and blond goalie, Al Maki. The threatening trio are Sullivan, Bogue, and Myre.

Burr Spreitzer's leg, injured in the last Detroit encounter, is reported fit by C. Y. O. phyicians. Spreitzer will be in there doing some hard body checking with Tony Beda. Three lines of forwards will be sent into action by Coach Earl Kelleher. His kid string of Wilbur Savela, Ken Begin, and Bill Turkovich probably will start the game. Roland Conacher, Eddie Janelle, and Floyd Murphy are on the second string, while Alvin Ouellette, Frank Grossman, and Matt Glad make up another line of attack.

CICERO BOWLER TAKES LEAD IN 3 A. B. C. EVENTS

Indianapolis, Ind., March 21.—[Special.]—Louie Levine of Cicero, Ill., a seasoned campaigner in American Bowling congress tournaments, took the lead in three divisions this afternoon with some of the most spectacular bowling thus far in the tournament.

Paired with Gus Stefani, Levine romped into the two man lead with 1,285, Levine getting 680. Levine came right back with 704 in the singles, shoving Harlan Ingwalson's 702 into second place. The Rockford, Ill., bowler had been leading since last Sunday.

The big minor events totals, added to his 557 in the team event last night, gave Levine first place in the all-events with an aggregate 1,941. In his six games in the doubles and singles Levine had neither error nor split. Levine's 1,941 was 61 pins better than the previous high posted by Ingwalson.

a posse. But never once did the two young Germans allow any one to go out after a lap without giving chase.

Gustav and Heinz went into the final hour deadlocked in mileage with the Peden-Audy, Grillo-Georgetti, and Yates-Van Slambrouck teams. They trailed Peden and Audy on points, but soon adjusted that by taking 11 out of the 29 sprints in the last 60 minutes, including five of the first ten. It was this series of speedy dashes that finally won for them, since each of the sprints in the last hour carried 72 points to the winner.

Last Challenge Fails.

With 15 minutes to go the Germans had finally dropped the Italians and the Yates-Van Slambrouck team to second place, and almost had Peden and Audy there except for frantic pedalling by the two Canadians. Torchy and Jules made their final brave challenge in the last two minutes but failed to lift the lap which might have given them the race.

Before the 9 o'clock sprints started, the four team deadlock which had endured since shortly before midnight Friday, was still in effect, the front combinations being Peden and Audy, Kilian and Vopel, Georgetti and Grillo, and Yates and Van Slambrouck.

In between the sprints, the boys contented themselves with watchful waiting for breaks that never came, for every threatening gesture brought the entire field up in mass pursuit.

The racing became serious for the first time just after the tenth sprint had been completed. Kilian caught practically the whole field asleep when he dashed out alone, but he wasn't out in front for long before the earnest young Yates was almost scraping his rear tire.

This one stirring jam lasted for ten minutes and finally rewarded the Germans and the Yates-Van Slambrouck duo with a joint lead of a lap. They were presently joined by Peden and Audy, who had to come from far back to regain a tie. Georgetti and Grillo, pocketed during this trafic, could not escape and at 10 o'clock they were a lap behind.

Yates and Slambrouck had hardly matched the Germans' lap theft, when the latter took a spill along the north boards and the action was delayed until he was patched up.

The profusion of premiums offered in the final hours assured Winter and Hill of carfare home for the Californian and New Yorker went after every prize as though they didn't have the price of a trolley ride. They captured almost all of them until a $50 premium was set up, and appeared to have that clinched until Kilian turned on the pressure and won going away.

Three In Deadlock.

As the final hour of riding began, three teams—Peden-Audy, Kilian-Vopel, and Yates-Van Slambrouck were leading the field by a lap, Sima and Lands stole a lap shortly before 11 o'clock to tie Georgetti and Grillo for second place.

Pitcher Ruffing, Owner Ruppert Meet—Disagree

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21.—(AP)—The first meeting between Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, and his holdout pitcher, Charlie Ruffing, ended in a deadlock today.

Ruffing, holding out for $15,000, which is $3,000 more than the Yankees have offered him, stalked away after the colonel had refused to increase the figure originally tendered the big right hander for 1936. The conference lasted less than ten minutes.

Ruppert said $12,000 was his final offer and that the pitcher could take it or leave it.

been battling all season. Huntley's time bettered the mark of :08.8 made by Roy Black of Chicago four years ago. The Illini took three places in this event when Cullinan finished fourth behind Hotchkiss of Kansas State.

Michigan Normal's one-mile relay entry, perennially strong, cracked the college mark for this distance when Gavrilavicz, Hause, Mathews, and Baker finished in the fast time of 3:27.8. The former record, 3:29.9, was made by Michigan Normal in 1934.

Heg Breaks Mark.

Winslow Heg, Northwestern's spirited little quarter miler, who is better known as Sunny, chipped four-tenths of a second from the Armour 440 yard record. Leading all the way, Heg finished five yards ahead of O'Shea of Marquette in :50 flat. The former record, :50.4, was made by Burns of Butler in 1932.

Al Haller, Wisconsin pole vaulter, who won the Big Ten title last week, vaulted to a new meet record by clearing 13 feet 6¾ inches, bettering the mark of 13 feet 5⅝ inches made by Irving Seeley of Illinois last year.

Beckett Comes Through.

The fifth and final new record of the meet was made by Cal Beckett of Marquette in the half mile run. A new record had been promised in this event with Abe Ronsencrantz of Michigan Normal as the potential creator of it. Ronsencrantz did not appear at the meet, and Beckett, a former Englewood High school star, did very nicely without him. Beckett's time was 1:55.5, one and three-tenths faster than the Armour mark made by Chuck Hornbostel of Indiana in 1932. Trailing Beckett was Jack Fleming of Northwestern.

BADGERS TURN TO SELECTION OF COACH, DIRECTOR

New Faculty Board to Consider Applications.

Madison, Wis. March 21.—[Special.]—Following selection of a faculty athletic board as the first step in rebuilding the University of Wisconsin's athletic department, the major question today was, "who will succeed Spears and Meanwell?"

The new board is expected to meet early next week to consider applications for the vacancies. Although the applicants are reported to number between 50 and 100, Guy Sundt, assistant football coach, is generally regarded as the likely choice for the directorship and possibly that and the head football coaching post for one year.

Here Are Board Members.

The new faculty board includes: Dr. William F. Lorenz, professor of neuropsychiatry; Edwin E. Witte, professor of economics; Dr. Harold C. Bradley, professor of physiological chemistry, and Oliver S. Rundell, law professor, as representatives from the faculty, and Dr. James P. Dean, Madison, and Howard I. Potter, Chicago, as alumni members.

The seventh member of the board, a student representative, will be Howard Heun, a member of the crew. Heun resigned along with the four faculty members of the old board when the regents overruled their recommendation and ousted both Dr. Clarence Spears, head football coach, and Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, athletic director, but he was reëlected president of the student athletic board and as such automatically goes back on the new faculty body.

Wilkie Dissents in Selection.

Creation of the faculty board was not accomplished without a touch of the dissension which has prevailed since the controversy flared into the open more than three months ago.

In a statement today Harold M. Wilkie, president of the board of regents and a member of its executive committee, which approved the selections, revealed his reasons for voting against the two alumni members.

"I voted against confirmation of the alumni appointees not because I have any doubt of their fairness or ability, but because Madison already has four representatives, including Dr. Lorenz and Dr. Bradley, who are in close touch with the alumni here. Milwaukee has had an outstanding representative in Walter Alexander and from time to time there should be representatives from other places in the state. I feel the matter of alumni appointees should receive further consideration," Wilkie explained.

Others Overrule Wilkie.

He was outvoted, however, by the other two members of the committee, John Callahan, Madison, and George W. Meade, Wisconsin Rapids.

In the official release today President Frank pointed out that "Walter Alexander has given seven years of devoted service to the board and Walter Heymann [Chicago] in briefer service has won the admiration and regard of his colleagues by his capacity, insight, justice, and devotion to the interests of the university."

In answer to Wilkie's criticism that the setup is Madison "top-heavy," Frank explained that a "local alumnus was selected for the coming year because, in the process of departmental readjustment and selection of personnel, it would be advantageous to have alumni representation immediately available. Other years will see other cities represented."

The process of rotation is scheduled to begin in June, 1937, when terms of the present members expire.

Carleton and Kowalik Pitch for Cubs Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pensacola, Fla., March 21. — Mike Kowalik and Tex Carleton will pitch for the Cubs in tomorrow's clash with the Giants. Manager Terry is secretive, but it is the turn of Hal Schumacher and Frank Gabler for the Giants.

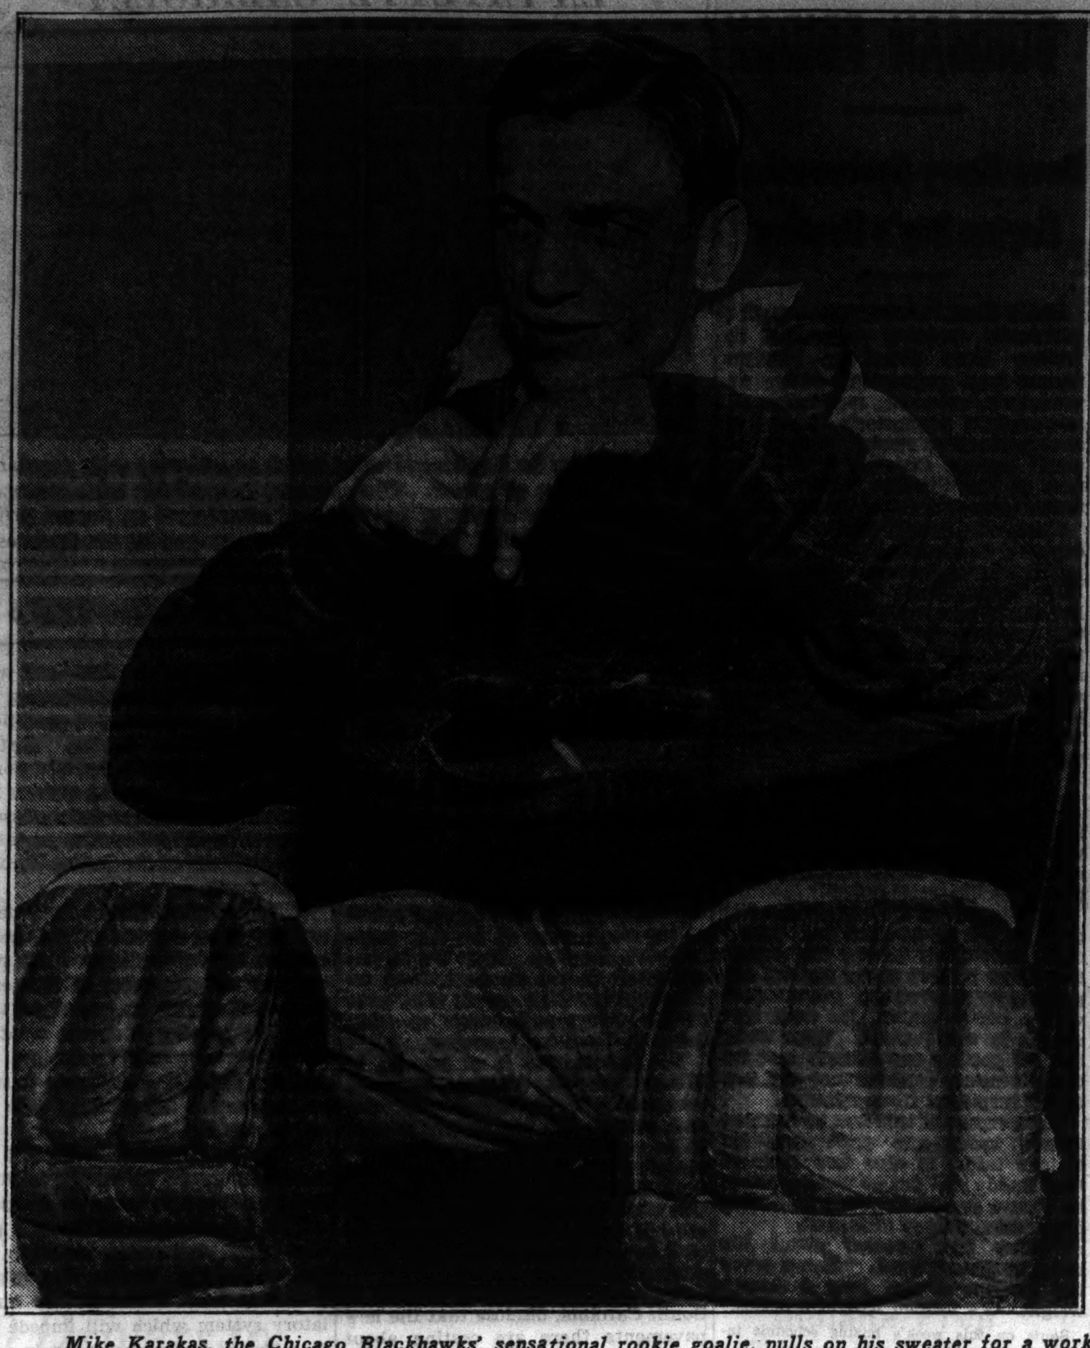
When Charley Grimm and Gabby Hartnett got off the train this morning it was the first time either had set foot in Florida, which probably is a record for ball players of their ripe experience in the majors.

Hank Leiber, last of the Giants' holdouts to sign, is expected to be ready to play against the Cubs here Wednesday.

The Cubs and Giants will play in Selma, Ala., Monday and in Dothan, Ala., Tuesday. They will leave here Monday morning and return at 10:30 Tuesday night.

The Giants are wearing mourning bands in memory of their late president, Charles A. Stoneham.

THEY'LL BE AT TOP FORM IN STANLEY CUP BATTLES



Mike Karakas, the Chicago Blackhawks' sensational rookie goalie, pulls on his sweater for a workout. He is ready for the Stanley cup playoffs, the world series of hocky, which open Tuesday. Karakas, who supplanted Lorne Chabot, last year winner of the Vezina trophy, is given credit for a big part in the Hawks' fine showing this season. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

When it comes to harnesses and padding football players aren't in it compared with hocky stick wielders. This dressing room view of Johnny Gottselig (left) and Wildor La Rochelle, Blackhawks' wingmen, as they get ready for practice, gives fans an idea of just how much protection a hocky player carries.

start of the Giants' fifth. Moore socked a double to left to get Little Roy loosened up. Ripple grounded to Henshaw, who had a good chance to get Moore at third until he threw the ball into the left field corner of the field. Moore scored and Ripple reached third on the toss. Ripple had to cling to third, while Davis fanned and Leslie grounded to Jurges. He died when Jackson flied to Galan.

Grimm singled to left with one out in the sixth and reached second on a wild pitch. He got to third on Hack's single to left. But the chance faded fast. Jurges popped to Whitehead and Henshaw bounced to Jackson.

Roy Gets Excited.

Whitehead launched the Giant sixth with his third straight hit, a double to right center. Danning flied to Galan, then Fitzsimmons and Whitehead put on the squeeze play. Whitehead scored and Fitzsimmons reached second when Henshaw fielded the ball and threw it into right field. Bartell flied to Klein, but Moore tripled to center, scoring Fitzsimmons. Ripple lined to Klein.

Klein furnished the total of the Cub offensive in the seventh with a single, then the Giants came to bat and touched up Henshaw some more. Davis doubled to center, went to third on Leslie's infield single and scored while Henshaw was throwing out Martin. Whitehead grounded to Jurges, who attempted to get Leslie at third after Sam already had arrived at the base. Danning popped to Vitter, who muffed the ball but recovered in time to tag Whitehead. Fitzsimmons flied to Klein.

The Giants wound up their attack in the eighth by making two runs on two walks by Henshaw, two errors by Lillard, and a long fly.

HELEN STEPHENS TO RUN IN A. A. U. TRACK EVENT

Chicago track fans will have their first chance to see Helen Stephens, world's champion girl sprinter, in action when she competes here in the annual Central A. A. U. women's track and field meet Wednesday night, at 7:30 o'clock at the 132d Infantry armory, 2653 West Madison street, under the auspices of the Polish National alliance.

Miss Stephens will appear in a special 60 meter invitational dash race. Among the leading girl sprinters who have been invited to run against Miss Stephens are Stella Walsh, Betty Robinson, Tyde Pickett, and Annette Rogers. The presence of these girls in the race assures stiff competition for the champion from Fulton, Mo.

There will be the eight regular track and field events, a special 400 meter relay race, in which the Illinois Catholic club for women's team will renew its rivalry with the Chicago Park district team. Special events are scheduled for women members of the Polish National alliance, and for Polish-American girls, not members of the P. N. A.

Hawks Are All Set for Playoffs Review of Week's Sports

The Chicago Blackhawks were all set last night to start battling for the Stanley cup, highest honor in professional hocky, but because of a terrific nose dive in the last week of the regular season they did not know until after last night's game they play Tuesday night. Last night's defeat assured them of finishing in third place and meeting the New York Americans, third place team in the Canadian division, Tuesday night at New York.

Detroit had clinched first place in the American division, but the first two places in the Canadian division were in doubt until the Montreal Maroons clinched first place by beating the Hawks last night. Toronto finished second.

Three consecutive defeats for the Hawks prior to last night brought about all the uncertainty in the American division after they had all but clinched second place and left their ultimate ranking in doubt until the final game. The week's scores follow:

SUNDAY.

Boston, 1; Chicago, 0.
Toronto, 2; Detroit, 1.
Rangers, 2; Americans, 1.
Maroons, 3; Canadiens, 1.

TUESDAY.

Rangers, 4; Chicago, 1.
Maroons, 2; Toronto, 1.
Boston, 1; Canadiens, 0.

THURSDAY.

Detroit, 5; Chicago, 3.
Boston, 2; Toronto, 2.
Americans, 4; Canadiens, 1.

Scarpati, Hurt in Ambers Bout, Dies.

Lou Ambers, contender for the lightweight championship, shot a right to the chin of Tony Scarpati of Brooklyn at the close of the seventh round of their bout at the Broadway Arena in New York last Tuesday and Scarpati went to the floor, his head banging sharply against the canvas.

Seconds worked over Scarpati, trying to get him into shape for the eighth round. When he failed to regain consciousness Ambers was declared the winner and Scarpati was taken to the Bushwick hospital. There it was found he had fractured his skull. He died there Friday afternoon.

Scarpati was 22 years old, a former New York Golden Gloves champion, and had been fighting as a professional for four years.

Cubs Start Out on Long Spring Tour.

Chicago's two major league baseball clubs wound up the first round of their intracity series at Los Angeles last Sunday when the White Sox beat the Cubs in their third game 7 to 4. The Cubs had won the first two games.

Immediately the Cubs set off on the most extensive spring training tour in their history. They stopped off at San Antonio on Tuesday and walloped Pittsburgh's Pirates 3 to 1. They repeated the victory the next day 4 to 0, and then moved on to Houston, where they trounced the Houston Buffs of the Texas league on Thursday 5 to 4. On Friday they were in New Orleans, the training base of the Cleveland Indians, where they took a 7 to 6 whipping and then hopped on to Pensacola, Fla., to open a series with the Giants yesterday. [For details of yesterday's game, see first sports page.]

Sonja Henie, Skating Star, Signs Pro Contract.

Sonja Henie, demure little Norwegian girl who has won the Olympic figure skating title three times, signed a contract on Sunday to make appearances in ten cities on her way to the Pacific coast to start her movie career. From this exhibition tour the queen of skaters expects to earn $300,000; she is guaranteed $70,000. She will skate at the Chicago Stadium on April 2, 3, 4, and 5.

Haynes Stops Carnera in Third Round.

Boxing fans who wondered how Primo Carnera, the Italian giant, ever got to be heavyweight champion were wondering even more last week. Beaten for his title by Max Baer, hammered down by the sensational Joe Louis, Carnera took another drubbing last Monday night when Leroy Haynes, a Los Angeles colored second rater, stopped him in the third round of their fight at New York. Carnera, though seventy pounds heavier than Haynes, was floored twice in the second round and beaten into helplessness in the fifty-third second of the third round.

Hank Leiber, New York Giants outfielder, a month ago retired to the campus of the University of Arizona at Tucson to coach the baseball team when the Giants refused to go above $8,000 in meeting his salary demands of $12,500. On Thursday the Giants went $3,000 above their figure, Leiber came down $1,500 from his demands, signed a contract for $11,000, and gave up coaching to return to the Giants' outer garden.

The Illinois state racing commission on Thursday set the following dates for race meetings in the Chicago district:

Aurora—May 1 to May 22.
Hawthorne—May 23 to June 27.
Arlington Park—June 29 to Aug. 1.
Washington Park—Aug. 3 to Sept. 7.
Lincoln Fields—Sept. 8 to Oct. 10.
Sportsman's Park—Oct. 12 to Oct. 31.

New York, March 21.—(AP)—Joe Louis, colored heavyweight boxer, will train for his June bout with Max Schmeling at the estate of Bill Dwyer in Lakewood, N. J., his co-managers, John Roxborough and Julian Black, said today. After finishing heavy work at Lafayetteville, N. Y., Louis will go to Lakewood on May 15.

JUDY, CARDINAL ROOKIE, WILL BE OUT FOR SEASON

Bradenton, Fla., March 21.—[U. P.]—Dr. George F. Hyland, club physician for the St. Louis Cardinals, told General Manager Branch Rickey today that Lyle Judy, brilliant young understudy for Manager Frankie Frisch, is lost to the team for the entire season.

An immediate operation on Judy's right shoulder, which was fractured in an automobile accident last winter at Louisville, Ky., is imperative, he said. Rickey, who regards Judy as another Ty Cobb, said the loss would be the "biggest in ten years" to be suffered by the Cardinals.

Judy now is in St. Louis awaiting the operation.

New York Makes Scalzo 8 to 5 in Battle of Newsies Tomorrow

BY FRENCH LANE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 21.—"Morning paper, mister? All about the two newsboys who will fight in Madison Square Garden on Monday night."

By a strange coincidence one of the spectacular fights in the ninth annual Intercity Golden Gloves matches between Chicago and New York brings together two former newsboys.

In one corner will be Johnny Brown, who a few years ago was scampering around at Halsted and Madison streets in Chicago shouting "Morning paper, Mister?" in a high treble.

And in This Corner—Pete Scalzo.

In the other corner will stand Pete Scalzo, an Italian kid from the Bronx, who sold just about as many papers there as Johnny did, both on cold nights in winter and hot nights in summer, at Halsted and Madison.

Newsboy Brown is the bantamweight champion and captain of THE TRIBUNE'S team. Newsboy Scalzo is bantamweight champion of the New York News team.

Well, those wise guys along Broadway are betting on it, like they would bet on a heavyweight championship match. You can't drop in for a friendly chat anywhere in Greater Manhattan unless somebody asks you "Will it be Brown or Scalzo?"

Our Chicago captain doesn't seem to be alarmed about the situation. Still if we had along some of those rough and ready Chicago newsies w' operate around Dearborn and Van Buren, at Clark and Chicago avenue, or out in the Back o' the Yards district everybody in this Chicago Golden Gloves party would feel a bit more secure.

Nick Might be Some Help.

And our old friend Nick who sells the poipers on the race track trains wouldn't be a bad asset to have along either.

We've watched Nick larrup a few tough touts now and then in the manner we hope Johnny smacks down that news kid from the Bronx.

The Chicago newsboy has his work cut out for him. New Yorkers think this fellow Scalzo is the greatest amateur boxer in the world.

He is fast and very shifty. He's on the move constantly. He has a good straight left and a wicked right which is just as likely to land in the solar plexus as it is on his opponent's chin. His uppercut is devastating, but now and then he misses with the mighty punch.

He May Carry Brown's Trade Mark.

If he misses many times against Johnny Brown he's likely to wake up, look in the mirror and find the fist print of Brown branded into his chin. That's the sort of newsboys we have in Chicago.

New Yorkers didn't know much about this newsie from the Bronx until he whipped George Coyle the usher from Radio City in the New York Golden Gloves finals.

Coyle was the young upstart who came to Chicago last year and knocked our flyweight champion, Patsy Urso, practically into the lower bend of Lake Michigan and out along the Dunes country of Indiana.

Because of this Mr. Peter Scalzo has been made the 8 to 5 favorite to knock the stuffin' out of Chicago's captain. How those New Yorkers go for a favorite. You should see 'em rush up with their money in their fists if anybody even hints that Johnny Brown will whip Scalzo in the Garden on Monday evening.

Still, it was in this same New York, where some hoss beat Man o' War one day when the gallant Man o' War was at 1 to 50 in the betting.

George Latka of Gary, a rugged, two fisted fighter, is a possiblity and might draw the runner-up position. Kara, of course, should fight since he is the champion of the weight class.

Wardlow May Get the Call.

Bob Burke, New York's middleweight champion, is a soft touch for a fighter like Shivers, who wins by knockouts, and scorns decisions in three rounds. If Shivers is out, Al Wardlow, a left hand fighter from Wilberforce university, Dayton, O., is the natural choice. Wardlow is backed up by Hiner Thomas, the Catholic Youth champion, Joe Drayer of Omaha, and Paul Frazier of Chicago's Savoy Athletic club.

Herman West remains the dark horse of the New York training. West hasn't asked a thing; he doesn't want anything except a chance to show his stuff before Madison Square Garden's 20,000. He may get that opportunity in the 175 pound class or in the heavyweight class. He can lick a wildcat with no holds barred.

Finish Training Today.

Tomorrow the boys will finish their training with a light gymnasium workout after a morning on the road in Central park going around and around the cinder path which circles the reservoir.

So far the boys have stuck to their knitting. They will see New York via bus on Tuesday, have dinner at Jack Dempsey's restaurant in the evening, and then embark for Washington, and the flood waters of the Potomac. New York still is placing bets at even money on Monday evening's fights. That's New York for you. Broadway also thought that Primo Carnera was a 5 to 6 choice to lick Joe Louis. When the Brown Bomber, graduate of the 1934 class of Golden Gloves, knocked out the sloping Alp, New York discovered that Golden Gloves boxers are better than the name.

to right and was forced by Mauldin. Haas was set down on a one-handed pickup by Reese, the ex-Yankee. Kreevich then popped in front of the plate and Steiner, who is supposed to be a catcher, let the ball trickle through his paws, Mauldin scoring from second.

Mattick Ties Score.

Bob Mattick, son of Chink Mattick, who once patroled the outfield for the Sox, lined a double to right center at the start of the fifth inning and this bloomed into the tying run for the minor leaguers. Mattick raced to third on Steiner's fly to Mauldin. Then a fellow named Mene batted for Campbell and shoved a single through short, Mattick scoring.

The Sox resumed the lead in the sixth when Kimball appeared as the Los Angeles pitcher. Haas led off with a slow roller toward third and Mesner, being ambitious, made the throw which went wild. Haas took second on the error. He remained there while Appling was being handled on a popup to Reese. Piet poked a gentle single into center and Haas ran home. Dykes concluded the inning with a powerful smash as far as the pitcher.

Kennedy relieved Whitehead at the start of the Angels' sixth and the score was tied up again, this time at 2 all. Hurst, Philly and Cub graduate, singled to center with one out. Schulmerich, recently returned to the Coast league after extensive wanderings in the National, doubled to the fence in left center and Hurst scored.

The Sox accomplished enough hitting in the seventh to warant at at least one run, but it didn't materialize. Shea opened the inning with a single through short and was sacrificed to second by Kennedy. Radcliff beat out a high bounder in front of the plate. Mauldin loaded the bases with a single to left. The opportunity fell apart when Haas' roller to Reese was converted into a double play.

Morrissey Starts Uprising.

The business of winning the game in the ninth was undertaken by Morrissey, who had supplanted Dykes at third. The former Red led off with a double and was nailed at third on Shea's intended sacrifice. Kennedy ripped off a single to center. Radcliff bounced to Reese who dropped the ball when he tried to tag Kennedy. The bump was sufficient to knock Reese flat and after recovering he retired from service. The incident filled the bases and when Mauldin singled, Shea and Kennedy scored. Two more registered on a double to left by Haas.

SONNENBERG AND O'MAHONEY TOP COLISEUM SHOW

Danno Learns His Title Status Tomorrow.

Danno O'Mahoney will make his first Chicago appearance since Feb. 12 in a windup bout against Gus Sonnenberg in the heavyweight wrestling show at the Coliseum tomorrow night. On that occasion he defeated Jim Browning at the Stadium when the latter conceded a toe hold.

Danno had little difficulty throwing Alphonse Bisignane in 22 minutes and 33 seconds at North Bergen, N. J., Feb. 21, but in a subsequent match against Dick Shikat he was handed a surprise when the referee awarded the decision, and with it the Irish youth's title, after 18:57 of wrestling.

O'Mahoney's First Loss in U. S.

It was the first time O'Mahoney had been defeated since he came to this country a year ago last December. Prior to his bout with Shikat the closest Danno was to defeat was when he was held to a draw by Ernie Dusek in November. He won the crown by throwing Jim Londos in 1 hour and 16 minutes at Boston last summer.

Following his setback by Shikat the former champion beat Joe Dusek at Scranton, Pa., March 4; Jack Kandrat at Worcester, March 13; Charley Strack at Wilmington, Del., March 16, and Al Mercier at Greenfield, Mass., March 17.

Learn Status Tomorrow.

O'Mahoney is expected to learn tomorrow whether or not he still is recognized as champion in this state. Although New York has officially declared Shikat the new title holder, Danno has protested the action, holding that he wasn't "fairly thrown." The Illinois board is expected to coincide with the decision handed down by New York.

Other wrestling shows this week will be presented Wednesday at Arcadia Gardens and Friday at Marigold Gardens and Lithuanian auditorium. Alex Kasaboski and Bert Rubi will be windup principals at Arcadia, and Farmer [Whiskers] Tobin and Jules Strongbow main event opponents at Marigold.

Open A. A. U. Title Events on Mat Tomorrow

More than 100 of the leading wrestlers from the state of Illinois are entered in the Central A. A. U. wrestling title events, which will be held tomorrow and Tuesday, at the McKinley park fieldhouse, 39th street and Western avenue. The bouts which will start at 7 o'clock on both days, are being held under the auspices of the McKinley Park Wrestling club.

Nine weights are included in the title events: 112, 118, 123, 134, 145, 158, 174, 191, and heavyweight.

Teams representing Armour Tech, Wheaton college, University of Chicago, University of Illinois, the Inter-Fraternity club, Chicago Park district, Board of Education playgrounds and various Y. M. C. A.s are entered.

Preliminary bouts will be held tomorrow with the finals on Tuesday night. Well known wrestlers, among them holders of Big Ten conference and Central A. A. U. titles, who are entered are Devine, Goings, Brousil, Kaufman, Harmon, Antonucci, Silverstein, Brown and Linder. Robert Hunter, chairman of the Central A. A. U. wrestling committee, is assisting with arrangements for the meet.

SOUTH K. OF C. FIVES PLAY OFF TWO TIES TODAY

Ties for first and third places in the second round will be played off this afternoon by the South Division of the Knights of Columbus Basketball league at St. Rita's gymnasium, Sixty-third street and Oakley avenue.

Quigley and Loyola-Hyde Park will be the contenders for the title, while Englewood, Santa Maria and McHale will battle it out for the other position. Quigley, if winner over Loyola, will automatically win the divisional championship, as the team also took the title in the first round.

Englewood and Santa Maria will meet in the opening game at 2:30 p. m. The first place contest will follow and then McHale will play the winner of the Englewood-Santa Maria game.

The result of the playoffs will determine the schedule for Tuesday night, when the semi-finals for the league title will be held at the University of Chicago fieldhouse. St. Cyr vs. Carroll for first place in the west section, and Hughes vs. Cardinal for third place already are scheduled for Tuesday night's program.

MIDWEST PRO QUINTETS CLASH FOR TITLE TODAY

Double-headers this afternoon and evening, involving the two leading teams of both the East and West sections, will decide the first championship of the Midwest Professional Basketball conference.

Representing the East are the Pittsburgh Young Men's Hebrew association and Akron, O., Firestones. Playing for the West are the Chicago Duffy Florals and Indianapolis Kautskys.

Akron and the Duffys will meet at 3 o'clock and an hour later Pittsburgh will play Indianapolis. The two losers will meet at 8 o'clock for third place, followed by the title clash between the two winners.

KNOX IMPROVES IN DRILLS FOR BURMAN FRIDAY

Dave Barry Systematizes Dayton Boy's Routine.

Buddy Knox is being put through a systematic training routine by Trainer Dave Barry at Madison Square loop gymnasium, which appears to be enhancing the Dayton, O., heavyweight youngster's chances of scoring his ninth straight Chicago triumph against Clarence [Red] Burman at the Stadium Friday. The match is booked for eight rounds.

Knox, who is still in his 'teens, is expected to receive his strongest opposition from Burman, who whipped Billy Treest, Hank Bath and Steve Roberts in previous local efforts. For that reason he has been placed under the training guidance of Barry, former lightweight champion of Canada, and referee of the Tunney-Dempsey long count battle at Soldiers' field in 1927. Burman is a member of Dempsey's stable.

Make No Change in Style.

"We're not trying to change Buddy's style," Barry explained. "All we're endeavoring to do is further to instruct him on boxing fundamentals; polish up his weak points."

The aggressive Dayton fighter was put through an unusual drill yesterday. Instead of boxing the regulation three minute round against one partner he sparred one minute each with a trio of mates. He went four rounds in this manner. Thus while he was getting one minute rest between sessions each partner was getting a respite of three minutes.

The purpose of this was to increase Knox's speed and endurance, his trainer said. It also was revealed that Buddy will not be weighed until he shows up at the Illinois boxing commission Friday afternoon.

"We're not worried about his weight," Barry stated. "He's a growing youngster and he's a heavyweight. He has no weight worries."

Bouts on this week's boxing schedule include:

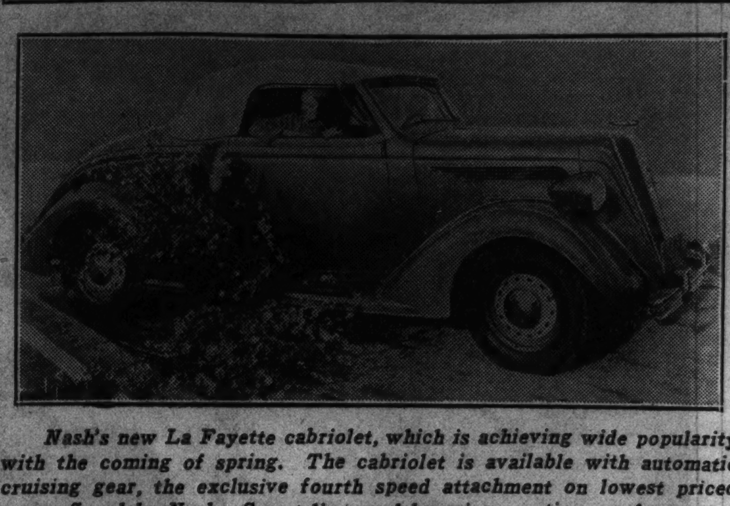
MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

LA FAYETTE CABRIOLET



Nash's new La Fayette cabriolet, which is achieving wide popularity with the coming of spring. The cabriolet is available with automatic cruising gear, the exclusive fourth speed attachment on lowest priced cars offered by Nash. Smart lines and luxurious seating are features.

ILLINOIS COULD STUDY ROADS IN SOUTH CAROLINA

Winter vacationists returning from the south have had some kind words to say about some of the new roads in South Carolina. They tell of low cost roads in this southern state, accommodating high speed, with none of the waves and lumps so often found in black top macadam.

The information is of interest to Illinois, with its state highway department experimenting with low cost surface treatments preliminary to an extensive secondary road construction program. There are more than 50,000 miles of rural roads in this state in approximately the same condition they were in during the civil war, impassable to motor cars during the spring thaws.

Inquiries at Columbia, capital of South Carolina, disclose that the new pavements there are costing about $12,400 per mile. This is more than Illinois can afford to spend on roads used almost exclusively by farms on abutting and adjacent property. However, it is little more than Illinois has actually spent on such roads.

Intermediate Trafic Volume.

A pavement costing $12,500 a mile with maintenance costs at between $300 and $350 a year must carry a moderate volume of trafic to justify this expense. For such a trafic volume Illinois has spent $30,000 a mile for hundreds of miles of concrete where usage and revenue from usage warranted no more than a $12,400 investment.

It's for this intermediate trafic volume—too low for expensive concrete and too high for land service feeders—that South Carolina has developed a surface treatment admired by visiting motorists from Illinois. Several types were noted on a drive between Aiken, fashionable winter colony, and Charleston, historical seaport.

Specifications vary somewhat with the type of soil, but generally this standard bituminous surfacing is placed on a prepared base course, a prime coat being applied by means of a pressure distributor. After the prime coat has been thoroughly dried the coarse aggregate is uniformly spread on the base, and after it has dried an application of cut back asphalt is made by means of a pressure distributor.

Shaped and Rolled.

The cut back asphalt is at once covered with fine aggregate, and as soon as practical a second application of cut back asphalt is made. Immediately after this second application of cut back asphalt the surfacing materials are thoroughly mixed by road machines or multiple drag blades and the mixture finally shaped to the section and rolled.

The coarse aggregate consists of broken stone or slag. The fine aggregate is composed of clean, hard, durable, uncoated grains, free from lumps or soft particles.

Another type of black top surfacing is constructed by placing bituminous surfacing on an earth type base, a prime coat of light tar being first applied. After the prime coat has dried hot asphalt is applied, it being immediately covered with coarse aggregate. After about two months the bituminous surface is swept and a seal coat of a double application of cut back asphalt is made by a pressure distributor. Between the two cut back asphalt applications a cover of fine aggregate is applied and spread before rolling.

FINAL IN TABLE TENNIS IS WON BY DENNINGER

Jack Denninger defeated Ralph Muchow for the men's single table tennis championship at the Stay and Play club last night. The scores were 21-17, 22-20, 21-11. Denninger will compete in the national tournament at Philadelphia on April 2, 3, 4.

Flossie Basler beat Mary Thompson, 21-19, 19-21, 21-19, for the women's championship. Dan Kreer and Abbot Nelson won the men's doubles by default.

In the mixed doubles championship Carlton Drake and Mildred Wilkerson beat Leonard Korf and June Bollinger, 21-11, 21-13, 21-15.

HUGHES ADVISES HOW TO GET NEW LICENSE PLATES

Secretary of State Hughes yesterday requested all motorists with obliterated 1936 license plates to write to him for replacements which may be obtained without cost. Do not mail him the prematurely rusted plates until the substitutes are received, he advised. After getting the new set, the obliterated plates may be delivered to the secretary's Chicago branch at 120 South Ashland boulevard, or mailed to Springfield. It is compulsory to surrender the old plates after getting the replacements.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Spring will soon be here—and with it the necessity of reconditioning automobiles for the changed conditions of warm weather driving. Certain "tips" on the proper care of automobile radiators and cooling systems are contained in recommendations issued last week by the automotive engineering department of the Socony-Vacuum Oil company.

While motorists should continue to use a certain amount of anti-freeze solution in their radiators until such time as the possibility of freezeups is past, it is just as important that with the coming of warm weather all anti-freeze should be drained out and the radiator thoroughly flushed in preparation for refilling with ordinary water.

When the anti-freeze is drained out motorists should be careful to flush their radiators thoroughly to clean out all impediments which may prevent free circulation through the cooling system. During the winter rust may have formed in the circulatory system which will impede the free flow of water and result in overheating. It is often advisable to use a special flushing fluid to prevent stoppage.

As a result of operation of a series of training schools by thirty-four Ford Motor company branches, each of the approximately 1,000 Lincoln-Zephyr dealerships in the United States now has attached to it competent Lincoln-Zephyr service mechanics. This was announced at the home offices of the Ford Motor company at Dearborn, Mich.

As quickly as dealers were appointed to handle the new twelve cylinder car their most competent service mechanics were required to enroll in the branch service school. These "students," usually men of long experience in automobile service work, were then given an intensive course of instruction lasting several days, climaxing in oral and written examinations. Those failing to obtain satisfactory rank in the examinations were required to take further training until adjudged competent to handle Lincoln-Zephyr service.

Construction has started in Detroit on a new engineering building to be erected by Olds Motor works, according to C. L. McCuen, president and general manager. This latest addition to the Oldsmobile plant will be located on Olds avenue directly behind the parts warehouse building. The building will be three stories, 131 feet by 410 feet, and will add 153,000 square feet to the Oldsmobile factory.

A Graham Crusader, piloted by "Cannonball" Baker, has established a new high mileage record of 27.30 miles per gallon for 4,744 miles across the continent, according to an announcement by Robert C. Graham, executive vice president.

Total Pontiac retail deliveries in February were 8,515, of which 3,809 were delivered in the last nine days. This last period figure exceeds the same ten day period of a year ago as well as the last ten day period of January.

"The quickness with which retail sales came back as soon as there was a break in the weather bears out the contention that there would be no business lost due to the cold weather," said C. P. Simpson, factory general sales manager, in speaking with H. A. Wehmeier, vice president and general manager of Community Motors, Inc., Chicago Pontiac distributors.

STATE PLANS NO S. CHICAGO ROAD FOR FOX RIVER

Gov. Horner Has Offered No Encouragement.

BY HAL FOUST.

State Highway Engineer Lieberman said last week that the Illinois highway department has nothing in its current construction program nor in its tentative programs for the future providing for a direct road between the Fox river valley and the southern end of Chicago, southern suburbs and populous northern Indiana. The trip between these points today requires a long detour to Joliet or Ogden avenue to remain on pavement, or a drive over winding gravel and crushed stone byways.

Gov. Horner in the last year has given encouragement to hundreds of downstate delegations, each with a favorite road proposal. He aroused many hopes, unfounded in most cases because to build all of the roads that he said would receive consideration would require all the state's revenue for construction for the next two decades. But, in so far as could be learned in Springfield, the Horner administration hasn't even encouraged hopes for a direct route between the Fox river valley and the far south side.

Not Organized Politically.

The main explanation for this neglect is that the metropolitan area has never organized politically to get its dues from the state highway department. Downstate if a legislator fails to get a road sought by his constituents his tenure in office is threatened.

A second reason for the lack of such a direct highway is geographic. The Des Plaines river, closely paralleled by the sanitary and ship canal and by the Illinois and Michigan canal, forms a valley expensive to bridge in the 25 miles from Chicago to Joliet.

Archer avenue, on the southeast bank of this valley, in the 23 miles between 55th street and Joliet connects with seven pavements that extend eastward. Not one of them extends westward on the other side of the valley.

There is a bridge at Summit, connecting 55th street and Archer avenue with Lawndale avenue, extending north into Lyons. There is a new $1,000,000 bridge connecting 79th street with Mannheim road, a north and south highway. At Spring Forest there is a bridge for the north and south Willow Springs road. At the Calumet Sag channel there is a $750,000 bridge extending over the Des Plaines valley for the new Illinois 54 route, which runs north from one end of the bridge and east from the other.

Bridge but No Pavement.

The east and west McCarthy road ends at Lemont at a bridge connecting with the north and south Lemont road. At Romeo there is a bridge with no pavement connections. Still farther south, 159th street ends at Lockport, where there's a road west from a bridge no farther than U. S. 66, the Joliet road on the west bank of the river.

Dead ended at Archer avenue are pavements on 95th and 143d streets. Also dead ended at Archer is 107th street; in another year it will connect with the Illinois 54 bridge under construction, but it will be a connection for travel north and not west from the Des Plaines valley.

Looking at the picture from the Fox valley viewpoint, trafic originating in Aurora and along the river south with its many recreational attractions and trafic from the west on the well traveled U. S. 34 are forced east by north in heading for Chicago in Ogden avenue, even when the destination is the Calumet district or Blue Island or Harvey or Hammond or East Chicago, Ind.

Fox River Bridge Condemned.

South of Aurora six miles is a bridge over the Fox river at Oswego, built in 1900 and now condemned, that will have to be rebuilt for Illinois 65, the cutoff between Naperville and Oswego for U. S. 34 trafic wishing to bypass Aurora. With no extra expense the replacement could also care for a new pavement that might be built eastward to cross the Des Plaines valley at about 107th street where the new Illinois 54 bridge is under construction.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

TRICKED INTO ACCIDENTS.

Chicago, March 18.—Between Michigan avenue and South Park avenue on 24th street, a distance of four blocks, there are four intersecting streets. Indiana avenue and Cottage Grove avenue have stop signs protecting 24th street. Calumet and Prairie avenue have not, a condition deliberately tricking motorists into accidents. In these four blocks of 24th street is a heavily used bus and automobile thoroughfare and intelligent placing of stop signs is urgently needed.

H. N. BRADY.

MOTOR MANNERS.

Chicago, March 18.—Motor manners are something this country needs very badly. The automobile has produced conditions and created problems of conduct, which affect not only the comfort and convenience, but also the life and limb of a large part of our population.

Good motor manners come from a decent consideration of the rights of others. While it may be true that most of us are not deliberately reckless, it must be admitted that we are very thoughtless. The result is the same, accident, inconvenience, injury and death.

Too many motorists unconsciously think only of themselves, and immediate advantages. In their selfishness they forget the convenience and safety of others. Discomfort and danger follow.

There would be a tremendous falling off in accidents on our highways and streets if every motorist would paste on his windshield: "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you."

MARK J. GOODGER.

FEW WILL HELP.

Chicago, March 9.—Sunday in the early part of the evening our family were coming back from the suburbs of the southwest side of Chicago. Unfortunately we had car trouble and were forced to stop on Cicero avenue and parked the car in the center of the road, which is used for parking. We were unable to remedy the trouble without professional assistance, but if some one were only good enough to give us a push to the first gasoline station, it would have helped immeasurably and caused very little inconvenience to the helper.

Finally we decided to push the car into the driving lane and push it to some gasoline station, which was not near by. We signaled for help and pushed fully two blocks [which included going over a railroad track, before a good Samaritan volunteered to push us to a gasoline station. We all were very grateful for this assistance and hope he will be able to get the chance to read this, for we do want him to know how grateful we were.

I really don't think people intend to be selfish about helping others in distress, as probably most of them think that "the other fellow in back of us will help them," but I do believe that our people need to be educated to the fact that it pays to help others: "Do unto others as you wish them to do unto you."

40 Drivers to Race Tonight in 10 Events

Approximately forty auto racing drivers are expected to report at the 124th Field Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue, tonight for the weekly renewal of the Midwest title competition.

Ten events are scheduled, including a seventy lap sweepstakes, three handicap events, and several straightaway dashes to keep the drivers busy.

Interest will focus particularly on a three cornered duel for the point lead, with Jimmy Snyder, current leader, seeking to protect his laurels from Pat Warren, the runner-up, and Ronnie Householder, who Snyder displaced last week. Snyder's lead is so slim that either Warren or Householder can overtake him tonight.

While these pilots are in the spotlight, Duke Nalon, Harry MacQuinn, Tony Willman, Curly Mills, and Wally Zale will present a united front to undermine the leaders. Each of these latter pilots is reporting in an improved automobile.

SONJA HENIE TO EARN $300,000 AS PRO BY MAY

Norwegian Star Heads Ice Show at Stadium.

An Olympic champion when she was only 16 years old, ten times world's champion since she first won the crown at the age of 14 years, and now on the verge of earning a third of a million dollars in her first six weeks as a professional, Norway's Sonja Henie, who appears at the Chicago Stadium on April 2, 3, 4 and 5, is the most remarkable girl athlete in the history of sports.

Mistress of the ice, both in the routine required numbers of competitive figure skating and in exhibition skating, the Norwegian girl is the biggest feminine box office attraction in sport history. Miss Henie opens her tour in Madison Square Garden, New York, tonight.

Wins Olympic Berth at 12.

When winter sports were first introduced into the Olympic games in 1924 Sonja Henie was only 12 years of age. She astounded continental masters of the ice by winning a place on the Norwegian team and placing eighth in the women's figure skating international events. Up to that time she was known only to her own neighborhood, but in 1924 and 1925 she won the Norwegian title and became a front rank star. In 1927 she won her first world's title in international competition and in ten consecutive years since has never met defeat, winning ten world's titles and the 1928, 1932 and 1936 Olympic titles.

No skater in history, man or woman, has ever shown such consistency over a period of years and now after twelve years of competition and having reached the age of 24 years, Miss Henie decided to desert the amateur ranks and follow the professional path to a fortune. Her present contract for eighteen performances in America and a picture contract in Hollywood will net her $300,000 before the middle of May.

Will Present Olympic Routine.

In her Chicago appearances at the Chicago Stadium, Miss Henie will demonstrate several numbers from her Olympic routine which won her the international titles at Oslo in 1928, Lake Placid in 1932 and Garmisch-Partenkirchen in the Bavarian Alps last month. She will follow with her Dying Swan number, in which she reaches the rhythmic beauty of Pavlova, and will add a number never seen before in the United States.

Table Tennis Tips

This is the fourteenth of a series of weekly articles on table tennis by Coleman Clark, former national champion, twice western champion, and authority on this sport. Readers are invited to send contributions and address questions to the conductor of the column, care Chicago Tribune, Tribune Square, Chicago.]

BY COLEMAN CLARK.

Women in increasing numbers are taking up this popular indoor sport. [But don't call it an indoor sport in California where it is played mostly in the summer time and out of doors at that.] This fascinating table game is an ideal family diversion.

One beauty of table tennis lies in the fact that one can regulate the strength of his dose. If you merely feel ambitious enough to start the blood circulating a game or two will suffice. On the other hand, if it's a stirring workout you want you can get full measure in less than an hour. Women devotees will tell you it tones up the muscles and keeps them supple, and last it's a pleasant way to take off extra poundage.

Tips for Women.

The rules governing competitive play for women is no different from those prevailing for men, except that in tournament play matches are generally best two out of three games instead of best of five. We believe that women should learn to play the game as men do; that they should use the same kind of rackets and of the same weight, and that there is no reason why the American girl should not use the same technique, strokes, and tactics.

We strongly urge women who take the game seriously to avoid wearing high heeled shoes and tight fitting clothes. Further, we urge them to seek out competent instructors, and lastly we plead with them to cast aside bashfulness and enter the tournaments. There are thousands of women who play the game well who simply can't be dragged into appearing in public. If they entered in one tournament they would soon discover that all shyness would disappear.

U. S. Players Make History.

The first full team that ever represented our country in the world title tournament is homeward bound from the battles at Prague. No longer need we stand in awe before the seasoned continentals. Our men's team composed of Jimmy McClure, Bud Blattner Richard Tindall, and Gilbert Marshall finished sixth among fifteen nations playing for the Swaythling cup [the Davis cup of table tennis].

Our women's team of Ruth Aarons, Corrine Migneco, and Jay Purves of Des Plaines, Ill., did even better, tieing for second place with Germany. In the men's singles our boys fared badly, but McClure and Blattner won a stunning victory in carrying off the world's doubles title in convincing fashion. Credit should be given Reg Hammond of Chicago, who headed the committee that picked this great young American team.

One upset after another featured the world meet. Sandra Kolar, a Czech, defeated Ehrlich, a Pole in the singles finals. Austria beat Rumania, 5 to 4 to win the Swaythling cup, emblematic of world team supremacy. The collapse in every event of the hitherto unbeatable Hungarian contingent is still a mystery to close followers of the game.

Ruth Hughes Aarons Wins.

The most amazing victory of them all was that of Miss Aarons, 17 year old New Yorker, our national titleholder. In the semi-finals she vanquished Marie Kettnerova, the defending world's champion and crushed Fraulein Krebsbach in the finals. Two years ago petite Miss Aarons won the American title, handicapped as she was with her penholder grip. During the following summer she changed to the tennis grip and the following winter won the U. S. title for the second time. As if that was not enough she enters the world's tournament for the first time in her life and wades through the greatest players on earth with the loss of only one game in the entire tournament. Such a record surely establishes her as a genius which she is.

This and That.

Jack Denninger defeated Ralph Muchow, Chicago intercity star, in the finals of the Elmhurst title tournament. Mort Ladin is the new north side champion. Richard Hainline of Rock Island, Ill., No. 2 in the national boys lawn tennis rankings, is the state Y. M. C. A. table tennis champion.

News of the Stay and Play club, 168 West Monroe street—On Wednesday an interleague six man team competition will be held at the Stay and Play club, 168 West Monroe street. On Friday the Industrial league tournament and on April 1 the south side open.

College Humor magazine is sponsoring an intercollegiate competition throughout the nation. The following schools have already agreed to hold meets: The Universities of Michigan, Buffalo, Minnesota, Detroit, Louisville, Oklahoma City, Purdue, and Illinois Wesleyan. Also Dartmouth and Drexel institute. This event is the idea of W. R. Stewart, former president of the U. S. Table Tennis association. Eight thousand saw the finals of the English tournament at Empress stadium, London. Three thousand were turned away.

Sistrunks Is Eliminated in Badminton Tourney

Boston, Mass., March 21.—[Special.]—D. R. Hutchison, champion of Boston, eliminated Henry Sistrunk of Chicago, from the annual New England badminton tournament today, defeating the Illinois champion, 15-12, 15-13, in a second round match.

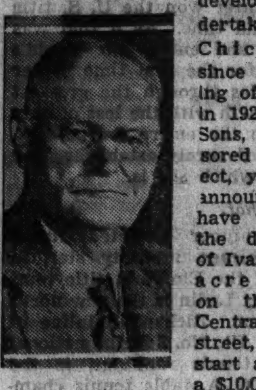
Announce the Largest Residential Development Since 1928 for Far South Side Suburb

MILLS & SONS TO BUILD HOMES AT 'IVANHOE'

Program Calls for 1,600 Modern Units.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Work is scheduled to start this week on the largest home building development undertaken in the Chicago area since the building of Westwood in 1928. Mills & Sons, who sponsored that project, yesterday announced they have taken over the development of Ivanhoe, a 465 acre community on the Illinois Central at 144th street, and will start at once on a $10,000,000 residential program, eventually to total 1,600 homes.



JOHN MILLS SR.

Actual construction will be started this week on seven modern residences. According to John Mills Sr., a minimum of 100 houses will be under way this spring with a probability that several hundred more will be under construction during the summer and fall.

Plan Building 1,600 Homes.

"These homes will be erected on lots owned or controled by us," said Mills. "We have no means of estimating how many additional homes we may erect for the large numbers of individuals already owning lots, but our development of Ivanhoe should influence their plans and cause many to build this year. We contemplate about 1,600 new homes on our own property."

Ivanhoe was launched in 1925 by the Branigar Brothers company and is one of the most ambitious suburban projects in Chicagoland. It comprises lots for more than 4,000 homes, besides apartments and business blocks, and has a housing capacity of 30,000. Many of the 4,000 lots in Ivanhoe were purchased from Branigar Brothers prior to the depression and are paid for in full.

No Vacancies in Ivanhoe.

A considerable portion of the property is owned by people who hold their lots free of encumbrance and are therefore in a position to build at once with little or no outlay of cash.

Until the depression stopped practically all building Ivanhoe progressed satisfactorily. Nearly 100 homes, besides apartments and business buildings, were erected and it is stated that there has not been a vacancy in Ivanhoe for the last two years. For both apartments and homes there is now a waiting list, it is reported.

Ivanhoe has 15 miles of concrete streets, including a 100 foot boulevard with parkway down the center, crossing the development from east to west for a mile and a quarter and connecting its western line [Halsted street] with its eastern boundary [Indiana avenue] at 144th street.

Other Features of District.

It also has 30 miles of cement sidewalks, 80,000 feet of water mains, 40 acres of community parks and playgrounds, 4,000 shade trees and thousands of shrubs. The Illinois Central, it is said, spent a quarter of a million dollars to create a combination grade separation and station. Tracks are elevated and screened by trees in parkways. The community is flanked on the west by a 250 acre county forest preserve.

"The class of homes we intend to build will range from $4,500 to $8,500 complete with lot," said Mills. "The types may be chosen from literally hundreds of designs by outstanding architects and a large variety of locations is available. We shall use only thoroughly proved building materials. For the last five years we have studied the many new products and have accepted only those which have stood the tests for long life construction.

No "Shirt Front" Homes.

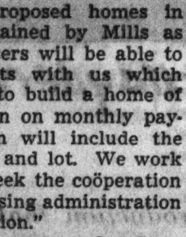
"There will be no 'shirt front' homes; all walls, both front, rear, and sides, will be of the same materials. Fire resisting materials and steel sash will be used. Union labor will be employed."

Financing of proposed homes in Ivanhoe was explained by Mills as follows: "Purchasers will be able to make arrangements with us which will enable them to build a home of their own selection on monthly payment terms which will include the cost of both house and lot. We work closely with and seek the coöperation of the Federal Housing administration officials in this region."

The M. A. Ring company has been appointed to publicize Ivanhoe, Mills stated, and to direct the merchandising of the project.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of March 13 to 19, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled 36, with a combined cost of $392,500. For the corresponding week last year there were 29 contracts, totaling $1,058,600. So far this year the total cost of contracts is $5,371,992, compared with $4,877,964 for the same period last year.



Plan Garden Setting for Home Show

Transformation of the Coliseum into a garden setting, with a specially constructed and furnished model house as the central figure, is being planned for the National Home show of Chicago, to be held May 16 to 24, according to John A. Servas, managing director. The exhibition is sponsored by the Chicago Real Estate board.

"Every detail of the model house will be carefully studied to fulfill the requirements of an average priced residence and still incorporate all the comforts, refinements and beauty of the more expensive types," said Servas. "Space the size of an average city lot will be given over to this feature."

"Surrounding the model house and its garden will be a complete exposition of all building materials and home fittings and furnishings to help the prospective home owner and home builder solve his problems. Leaders in every branch of the building industry will have representation."

Servas organized the initial national home show held last January in Baltimore. He also was active in the development of similar shows in Houston, Fort Worth and Philadelphia. He is known in Chicago for his work in connection with flower shows, especially the horticultural exhibition at A Century of Progress.

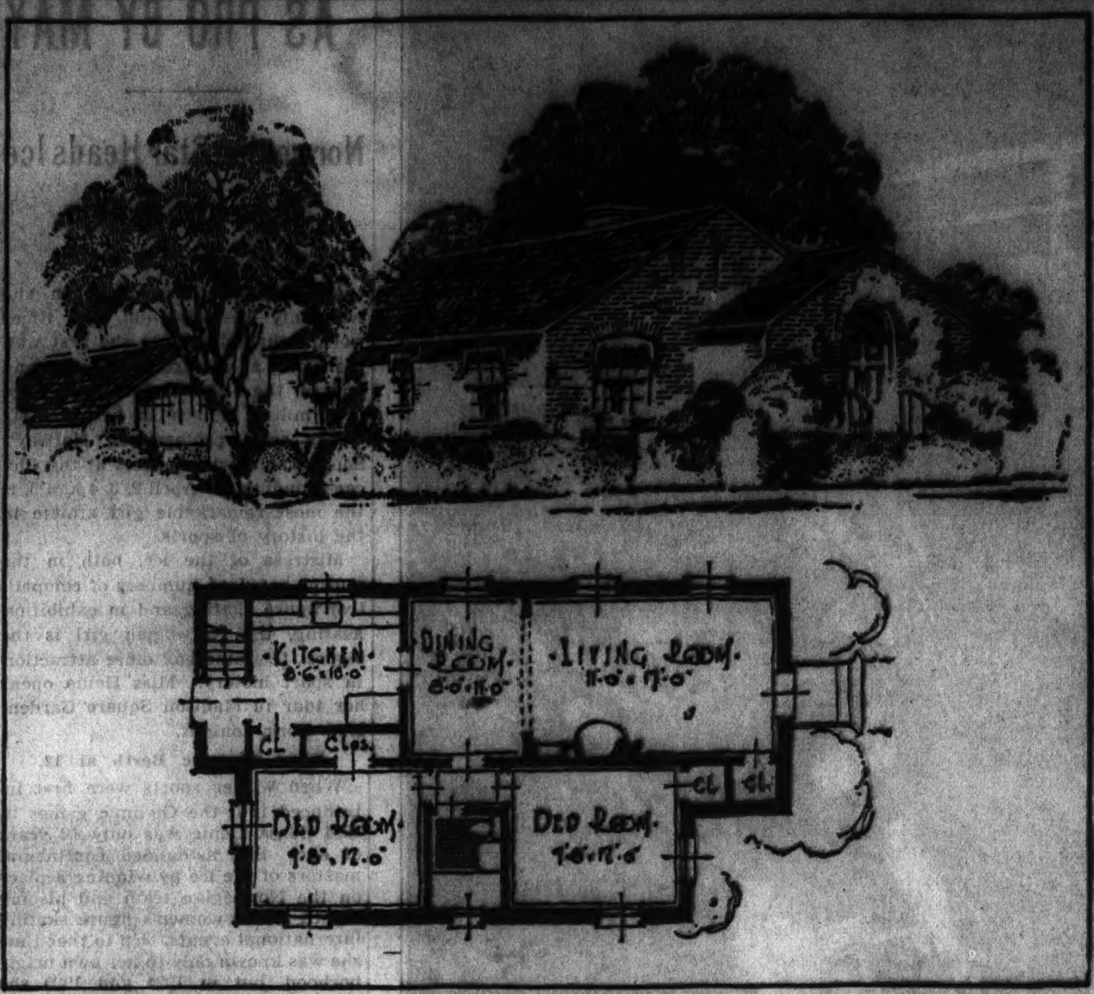
PIONEER IN HOUSING PROJECT



The above residence is one of seven to be built in Ivanhoe by Mills & Sons as their initial step in a major housing development for that south side suburb, which, it is asserted, will involve construction of homes costing several million dollars. This unit will be erected at the southwest corner of Wentworth and Atlantic avenues, of brick and other fire resisting materials. Its cost, including lot, will be $5,950, it was stated. Other homes will be built on La Salle street, between 143d and 144th streets. Details of the Ivanhoe building program are given in an adjoining column.

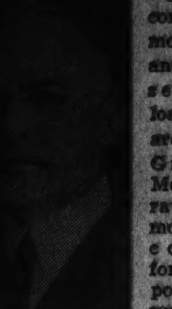
ABOLISHES FEES COMMISSIONS ON MORTGAGE LOANS

Metropolitan Life Offers New Schedule.

Another big insurance company has done away with the long established practice of charging borrowers a commission for mortgage loans and a fee for servicing the loans after they are made. The Great Lakes Mortgage corporation of Chicago, mortgage loan correspondent for the Metropolitan Life Insurance company for Illinois and the Calumet region of Indiana [including Gary, Hammond, Whiting, East Chicago, and Indiana Harbor], yesterday announced that hereafter it will negotiate first mortgage loans with no charge for commission nor fee for service to the borrower.



ROBERT F. WINGARD.

Construction Loans Excepted.

The only exception will be a charge of 1 per cent for construction loans. This, it was pointed out by Robert F. Wingard, president of the Great Lakes Mortgage corporation, and also head of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association, is really not a commission, but is calculated to cover the cost of making periodical inspections and progress reports of the construction of the building. This work, he stated, is necessary to the borrower as well as the investor.

This announcement and similar ones made recently by various mortgage companies representing other life insurance companies, seems to be an indication of the intention of big mortgage investors to make available a large volume of funds for investment in mortgage loans and to encourage home building.

Loans Show Steady Expansion.

"From the first of this year each week has shown a consistent increase in the volume of new mortgage loan business, construction loans as well as refunding loans," said Wingard. "This increased activity is especially noticeable in high grade residence construction in the better sections."

The Metropolitan Life for many years has been one of the largest investors in first mortgage real estate loans in the Chicago area.

WOOLWORTH CO. RENTS BELMONT-OSGOOD CORNER

The F. W. Woolworth company yesterday signed a 20 year lease for entire occupancy of a new one story business building to be erected at the southeast corner of Belmont avenue and Osgood street.

The lease calls for a minimum guarantee of $96,000 for the term, plus a percentage of the gross sales, according to G. M. Grounds, Inc., who negotiated the deal, and who also was a broker in the site purchase by Ben Landis.

B. Leo Steif & Co., architects, have designed a building along modern lines with a frontage of fifty feet on Belmont and 115 on Osgood. Exterior walls will be of stone. Old improvements will be wrecked in the near future and the new fireproof structure erected at a reported cost of approximately $30,000.

Four Firms Take Entire Floors in Wholesale Area

Four leases in the wholesale district, one of them by a firm which is returning to that area, are reported by Arthur Rubloff & Co. Pelton & Pelton, makers of bathing suits, formerly in the district, have leased the entire sixth floor at 412 South Wells. Hogan & Farwell represented the lessor. Kehoe & Lau, mimeographers, have leased an entire floor at 527 South Wells. Fan Tan, Inc., cosmetics, rented a floor at 212 South Franklin. Charles Shayne, letter service, also leased an entire floor at 504 South Wells.

TWO NEW PARTNERS ARE ADDED TO FIRM OF MUNDIE & JENSEN

One of the midwest's oldest architectural firms, Mundie & Jensen, founded in 1867, yesterday announced a change in its name to Mundie, Jensen, Bourke & Havens. Robert E. Bourke and George Havens, who have been silent partners for many years, have been made active members. The other members are W. B. Mundie and Elmer C. Jensen. The latter is president of the Illinois Society of Architects for a second term.

The firm was established sixty-nine years ago by Maj. William Le Baron Jenney, who entered the building profession as architect and engineer following service with the Union army in the civil war. Jenney's name was retained until 1907, two years after his death.

The firm earned an international reputation with the erection of the Home Insurance building, asserted to be the first skyscraper of its kind in the world.

FHA MORTGAGE CLINICS WILL BE OPEN ALL WEEK

The Federal Housing administration's "Insured Single Mortgage Clinics" will continue throughout this week, including Saturday evening, March 28, until 9 o'clock, according to Gael Sullivan, associate FHA director for northern Illinois.

"Several thousand persons have visited the eight clinics in Chicago and Oak Park," said Sullivan, "and outlined their mortgage problems and received advice regarding FHA loans."

He again called attention to the locations where FHA experts will give free advice and information during this week: At the Roosevelt, Schurz, Austin, Hirsch, and Calumet High schools, at the Palmer House and at FHA headquarters, 134 North La Salle street, as well as at 105 North Marion street, Oak Park. The school clinics will be open from 2 to 9:30 p. m. The loop and Oak Park offices will be open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

FIELD'S PLAN ESCALATORS IN WABASH STORE

Step in Modernization Program.

The second step in a plan for a modern floor to floor transportation system within the retail store of Marshall Field & Co. was announced yesterday by Frederick D. Corley, vice president of the company and manager of the retail store. This will be the installation of a double flight of escalators in the middle and north rooms on the Wabash avenue side of the Field downtown store, from the sub-basement to the ninth floor, replacing five elevators.

FREDERICK D. CORLEY.

The first step in improving the store's system was taken in the spring of 1933, when, in preparation for A Century of Progress, escalators were installed in the State street section, from the sub-basement to the ninth floor.

Plan Modern Lifts.

The third step, according to Corley, will be the bringing up to date of the entire passenger elevator system throughout the store. An intensive study of the present installation is now being made, he said.

It has been found, Corley said, that one pair of moving stairways can handle as many passengers per hour as 26 elevators. The present escalators in the State street unit can take care of a maximum of 11,000 persons an hour off of the main floor during the heaviest trafic.

"The growing volume of retail trafic on Wabash avenue has made it necessary for us to increase our store transportation facilities in the east half of the building," said Corley.

Escalators Are Popular.

"The extent to which our customers used the escalators installed in 1933 in the west half, convinced us that this system is the most economical, efficient and otherwise advantageous equipment for floor to floor, mass transportation.

"The escalator idea therefore has been incorporated as a permanent feature in the modernization program which has been constantly before us during recent years and which we are continually developing."

Architecturally, the new escalators will be identical with those on the State street side. However, there will be certain improvements in accompanying lighting and decorative effects. Graham, Anderson, Probst & White are the architects. Bids will be taken shortly with the expectation of having the new moving stairways ready for early fall business.

War Insurance.

London's great insurance company, Lloyd's, quoted 9½ to 1 odds early last week against a European war within six months.

European diplomats, however, later offered a plan for blanket insurance against [1] war between France and Germany and [2] between all nations which cared to join a world peace conference.

The struggle to gain a French-German compromise left the world peace conference idea far remote as the week ended, however. [See Main News section.] This project was apparently intended to be bigger and better than anything attempted in the way of peace since The Hague conference in 1899. The Hague conference failed to limit the armament race preceding the world war, but it did establish the permanent court of arbitration. This was the forerunner of the permanent court of international justice [world court] established by the league of nations in 1920. Both courts are still in existence.

What to do about Germany's military occupation of the Rhineland in violation of the Versailles and Locarno treaties was the urgent question. The offended parties to the Locarno treaty—Great Britain, France, Belgium, and Italy—struggled for two weeks to find the answer. France had demanded that the league of nations punish Germany. Great Britain had suggested a compromise in a new treaty. Britain won.

The agreed plan of action emerged Friday at 2 a. m. from a London meeting of the four nations. The same day Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, outlined the proposals before parliament.

The immediate steps indicated: [1] Germany to agree to submit the Russian-French treaty, which Germany had declared had voided the Locarno treaty, to the world court; [2] France to abandon her demand for withdrawal of German troops; [3] Germany to promise to send no more troops and to build no fortifications in the Rhineland; [4] Germany to consent to a temporary 12½ mile demilitarized frontier policed by British and Italian troops.

The future steps indicated: [1] the powers of Europe to meet with the league of nations and draft new pacts replacing Versailles and Locarno treaties; [2] the "Big Four" Locarno powers to reaffirm mutual assistance and to hold military meetings if Germany did not accept; [3] the nations of the world to join in a conference aimed at disarmament, trade and security treaties.

For France's acceptance of all this Great Britain suggested a military alliance with France, Belgium, and Italy until Germany signed a new treaty. For Germany's concessions, Britain offered to consider Adolf Hitler's proposal for new collective security treaties which would accept German equality.

Foreign Minister Pierre Etienne Flandin of France and Premier Paul van Zeeland of Belgium followed Eden's example and appeared before their respective parliaments Friday. They recommended acceptance.

One dictator, Mussolini, remained silent. Flandin indicated that Italy's support of the new alliance depended on a deal removing league trade penalties for war on Ethiopia. [See Ethiopia.]

Another dictator, Hitler, was far from silent. Following up his campaign for a vast German vote of confidence March 29, he spoke in Hamburg. Thundered Hitler: "We will not yield one inch our demands for equality of rights." This was only an indirect reply to the British threat of a hostile alliance.

As the week closed the Locarno powers still awaited the dictator's formal reply. He was advised by Britain that the proposals were not the final word, and that counterproposals from him would be welcomed. [See Main News section.]

Previously it had taken two invitations to get Germany's 30 man foreign office staf into St. James's palace, where the council of the league of nations was meeting.

Britain had to assure Hitler that Germany would have equality with France and Belgium, its accusers, before the council and that his peace offering would be considered later. All this had to be accomplished over France's threat to bolt the league and Soviet Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinov's loud charges of German deception. He quoted Hitler's book, "My Struggle," to show that Hitler's ambitions prefigured war.

Litvinov's speech was suppressed by the Nazi press, but Hitler barked hoarse defiance to Russia and all who opposed [as he called himself] "the herald for peace in Europe."

On Thursday Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's special representative and the man who largely accomplished the Anglo-German naval treaty a year ago, rose before the league of nations council. He echoed Hitler's repetitious justification of his Rhineland remilitarization on March 7. The council then unanimously condemned that act [France, Belgium, and Germany could not vote] as a violation of Versailles and Locarno.

Japan.

When Koki Hirota succeeded two weeks ago in forming a cabinet to replace the one shattered by the army rebellion in Tokio, all Japan wondered how much military pressure would change government policy. Last week Premier Hirota announced his policy, and Japan continued to wonder.

Hirota said he wanted to promote friendship with foreign powers but fulfill Japan's mission "as a stabilizing power in the far east." His promise to "regulate and expand" the national defense appeared a sop to military leaders. He promised taxation and banking reforms. Japanese newspapers declared Hirota's policy was too vague. Industry and labor were left guessing by the reference to "recent unhealthy social trends."

Meanwhile the 1,320 soldiers who participated in the Feb. 26 rebellion were released. It was expected that they would be held guiltless because they merely obeyed the orders of their officers. The war office said nothing of these 20 rebel leaders who are in jail. Forty soldiers are still under arrest.

Three Japanese newspapers in Shanghai charged that China had agreed secretly to support Russia in the event of a Russian-Japanese war. The soviet was said to have agreed to discontinue communist agitation in China.

Hachiro Arita, Japanese ambassador to China, and Gen. Chang Chun, Chinese foreign minister, conferred at Nanking secretly for five days in an effort to iron out difficulties between the two nations. An agreement was reached to readjust relations, although the Japanese envoy admitted views on some problems still conflicted.

Ethiopia.

Emperor Haile Selassie last week personally directed an Ethiopian army for the first time. Reports from Addis Ababa said the emperor led a counterattack against Italian advances near Mount Alaji on the northern front. Italy reported its planes had bombed Harrar, near Ethiopia's only railroad.

Meanwhile the league of nations committee of 13 delayed Ethiopian-Italian peace conference action in London until tomorrow.

New Deal.

It takes big money to live in the style to which the New Deal has become accustomed. New Deal expenditures for the current fiscal year have passed the $5,000,000,000 mark. When the year ends June 30 they will have totaled about $7,645,000,000, according to financial estimates made Thursday. The same estimates predicted that the next fiscal year, beginning on July 1, would see more than $9,000,000,000 in expenditures.

Boondoggling, farm handouts, experimentation, pay rollers and the bonus are among the many reasons for the money already spent or about to be spent. The pay roll is a big item. Figures given out Monday by the national industrial conference board show that there are 11,120,925 men and women drawing salaries from the taxpayers. This is an increase of 861,766 from 1933 to 1935.

New Dealers naturally were gleeful during the week when they scanned income tax returns. The bigger the better. On Tuesday the treasury reported that tax collections for the first 16 days of March amounted to $281,758,032, a gain of 46.4 per cent over the $192,429,413 in the corresponding period last year. The Chicago area contributed $35,630,043, a gain of nearly $10,000,000 over last year. [See Business Review.]

Works.

Taxpayers will have to dig into their pockets for $1,500,000,000 more to support Roosevelt boondoggling during the fiscal year beginning on July 1. This sum for work relief was demanded by the President in a special message to congress on Wednesday.

Actually, next year's relief business will cost about $3,500,000,000, but approximately $1,600,000,000 is available from unexpended balances and other sources. The President said in his message that 5,000,000 persons have found work since he took office. The American Federation of Labor says only 3,000,000 have returned to work. The President declared that the killing of the NRA halted reëmployment. Business statistics show business improvement began after the NRA was killed. The President urged shorter hours in private employment so more men could be employed. An impartial survey shows that 55 per cent of 41,550 firms of all kinds are still following wage and hour code standards set by NRA.

The President's message caused commotion. Many congressmen said they wouldn't vote the money unless politics were taken out of works administration. [See Politics.] One congressman, Representative C. L. Gifford of Massachusetts said that the President in continuing huge works relief apparently forgot his promise of last summer that "the federal government must quit the business of relief."

There was WPA activity outside of Washington, too., during the week. In Madison, Wis., several score of striking WPA workers picketed the office of Gov. Philip La Follette. They wanted a monthly scale of $60, instead of the present $58. Groups of them stayed night and day in the state assembly chamber. Gov. La Follette gave them $30 for breakfast one morning, but that was all. He told them he couldn't get them the raise; that it was a federal matter. The strikers retaliated by carrying cards: "Foxy Phil," and "Phil Fools Labor."

Yesterday police forced the strikers to leave.

Some 70 workers on WPA jobs at Niles, Mich., also struck. But most of them returned to their jobs when threatened with dismissal. Tear gas bombs broke up a puny WPA strike at Sioux Falls, S. D., Monday.

Black Hand.

Senator Hugo L. Black, chief dealer of the senate committee trying to seize private and business telegrams of New Deal foes in a purported lobby quiz, played his hand more subtly last week. For some time Black has been pushed around a bit in his terroristic activities. One court enjoined him from grabbing a Chicago law firm's wires. This was followed by the filing of two injunction suits by William Randolph Hearst, the publisher.

It was in the Hearst litigation that Black tried tricks. He would need $10,000 to hire competent lawyers to defend his seizures. And to get that he'd need approval of the senate, the house, and the President. The senate's approval was certain, and it was given Friday. The President's is expected, so Black concentrated on the house.

After introducing a joint bill for the $10,000, he sent over to Representative John J. McSwain of South Carolina a purported copy of a telegram that Publisher Hearst had sent to James T. Williams Jr., one of his editorial writers. The telegram instructed Williams to write a series of editorials calling for McSwain's impeachment as an alleged "communist in a spirit and a traitor in effect."

Along with the telegram, Black sent a letter calling the Hearst order a "secret effort to assassinate" the character of a loyal, patriotic man. As Black likely hoped and expected, Representative McSwain read the telegram before the house, and then proceeded to defend himself and attack Hearst. The house applauded McSwain to a man. Whenever a representative is attacked by an outsider, his colleagues almost always unite back of him. Thus Senator Black, by subtle strategy, caused the house to consider [illegible] enemies its enemy, which [illegible] house almost certainly [illegible] Senator Black his $10,000. [illegible]

AAA.

The President on [illegible]sday asked farmers to work with [illegible] government for the success of the new farm soil conservation scheme, successor of the illegal AAA. He said that if they do not coöperate, and surplus crops result, decent farm prices will be wrecked. Earlier in the week Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace announced establishment of five regions for administration of the new farm act. They are the north central, including Illinois, southern, eastern central, northeast, and western. On Friday Wallace announced a tentative scale of payments for farmers. The scale does not yet show exactly how much the individual farmer can expect, but $11 an acre is indicated.

Capital Notes.

The senate on Tuesday voted down an additional appropriation of $12,000,000 for the unauthorized Florida ship canal which President Roosevelt started with a $5,000,000 relief gift. New Dealers got busy, however, and the matter will be voted on again tomorrow.

J. M. Doran, executive director of the Distilled Spirits institute, reported Monday that states which have legalized liquor since prohibition repeal have netted $161,445,808 from license fees and taxes. New York got the most, $34,971,781.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, his wife, and their son, Robert, departed Sunday for a vacation on Sea Island, Ga.

The special congressional committee announced Tuesday that it will hold open hearings March 26 on the Townsend pension plan and other old age pension plans. Dr. F. E. Townsend, head of the organization bearing his name, will be among the first witnesses.

Dr. Harry Knott of Plymouth, Ind., received an emergency call to the scene of an automobile accident. He found his own son, David, 20 years old, dead in the wreckage.

Applying for an old age pension at Bishop Hill, Ill., Mrs. Mary W. Thompson, 72 years old, said: "Mother wants one, too." Her mother, Mrs. Andrietta Oak, is 97.

John J. Young, 82 years old, and his daughter, Mrs. Martha Burhans, 52, saw each other in New York for the first time in 38 years. The daughter ran away from home when she was 14 because he had remarried.

Wayne Waggoner and Tom Hall, convicts, worked fifteen days sawing bars in their cell window in the prison at Lincoln, Neb. They were caught at the last minute.

George Howell, a Chicago iceman, kicked a package in front of a west side tavern. He almost fainted later when he learned the package was a bomb.

Each year for 69 years the swallows of San Juan Capistrano mission in California have returned to the mission on March 19. This year they began returning on March 18—a day early. It was the first time they had arrived either early or late. The extra leap year day probably caused the schedule break, but it was the first leap year it had happened.

Floods

Hitler, Mussolini, and talk of world war were pushed into the background of American interest last week. Something more important was happening at home—floods. Heavy rains and fast thaws had made little rivers big, and big rivers huge. Suddenly they swept over banks. They struck tiny villages and big cities, Pittsburgh the biggest. They carried houses and steel bridges away, isolated towns, halted transportation, brought death, famine, and disease. In the battle of man versus nature, man lost.

The floods were widespread, but confined to the east. Thirteen states and the District of Columbia were affected. Ominous waters lapped at the very steps of the Lincoln memorial in Washington. From the White House President Roosevelt could see the rising waters of the Potomac. He asked the nation to give $3,000,000 to the American Red Cross for flood relief. Chicago's share was $225,000.

Latest estimates placed the dead at 167 the homeless at 300,000, and the property loss at $297,000,000. But these were estimates. For one thing, the death toll is certain to be heavier. [See main news section.]

Dozens of rivers, large and small, contributed their waters to the floods. The four greatest were the Ohio, the Potomac, the Susquehanna, and the Connecticut. Among others were the Merrimack, the Delaware, the Shenandoah, the Monongahela, the Allegheny, and the Conemaugh. The Ohio, 980 miles long, carried its own and the waters of its tributaries to the Mississippi as best it could. Too much into the Mississippi and that, too, may overflow soon. A rise to 50 feet at Cairo, Ill., would be the warning.

Pennsylvania and New England were hardest hit. Chief sufferers in Pennsylvania were Pittsburgh and Johnstown. Pittsburgh's billion dollar district, the Golden Triangle, was inundated. More than 45 lives were lost, more than 50,000 persons made homeless, more than $25,000,000 damage done. Waters began receding Friday. Johnstown narrowly escaped a repetition of the flood of 1889, when 2,235 perished. But this time the Quemahoning dam held, and though the Conemaugh surged over, only 15 died; more than 5,000 were homeless, however. Wilkes-Barre was flooded twice in two weeks; 12,000 persons fled homes. Other towns flooded were Williamsport, Clearfield, Lock Haven, Petersburg, Sunbury, Bellefonte, Lewistown, and Renovo. Measles and scarlet fever threatened several places. The state's dead were put at 113.

Here, in summarized form, is what happened elsewhere:

OHIO—Thousands of families scurried from the industrially rich upper Ohio valley, particularly in the East Liverpool and Steubenville areas. Among towns flooded were Bellaire, Martins Ferry, Bridgeport, and Shadyside. Marietta and Portsmouth prepared for floods. Blizzards and falling temperatures added to the trouble.

WEST VIRGINIA—Seventeen persons perished in Wheeling, and three at Wellsburg. Wheeling's main street, Market street, lay under 15 feet of water. The Ohio rose to 55 feet at spots; flood level is 36. The bridge at historic Harpers Ferry was swept away by the truculent Potomac.

MARYLAND—The Potomac boiled over along a 100 mile stretch from Cumberland to Point of Rocks. Ten feet of water covered several towns. On Wednesday the river rose to 40 feet, highest since 1889. Cumberland, second largest city in the state, was battered by a 14 foot wall of water. Westernport, Lonaconing, Oakland, and Hancock were flooded.

VIRGINIA—The James and Shenandoah rivers rose, but overflowed only in a few spots. Buchanan, Lynchburg, and Scottsville were inundated. Richmond strengthened its 2,000 foot dike.

NEW JERSEY—A few towns along the Delaware were flooded, but not seriously endangered. Burlington and Little Ferry received the worst.

NEW YORK—Binghamton and Syracuse were hardest hit. Binghamton's 80,000 inhabitants breathed in relief Friday as the Susquehanna and Chenango rivers subsided. Several restaurants served beer to con-

Political Relief.

The Illinois Emergency Relief commission will disband on May 1. The city council last week authorized Mayor Kelly to appoint a commission to study the Chicago relief problem that will result. Then the aldermen talked politics, though they didn't call it that.

Several condemned Gov. Horner for betraying his own city in recent legislation. [See Politics.] Measures passed at the second special session of legislature provided that the city should finance its own relief. Chicago was empowered to levy 30 cents per $100 property valuation. Another pending measure would cut off all state aid if Chicago does not create a relief organization.

Ald. James J. McDermott said the new tax would not yield $8,000,000 a year as the legislature anticipated. He said loss in collection and the limit set by banlscon tax warant purchases would cut the amount to $4,000,000. The present monthly cost is $3,000,000, he declared.

McDermott hoped the new commission of five aldermen and five civic leaders would find a satisfactory solution. He reasoned: "We have had enough hard times under relief administrations with case workers, who are university graduates, telling poor Chicago mothers that they shouldn't raise any more children."

Speed.

Z. A. Faulkner, Chicago Motor club engineer, timed automobile speeds on Chicago's boulevard system for two days last week. He reported that 94 per cent of the trafic was moving faster than the speed limits posted by the Chicago park district.

Faulkner's survey was made on Leif Ericson drive, Western boulevard, Sheridan road, Lake Shore drive and Michigan avenue. He declared the bulk of trafic traveled five to ten miles faster than the limit. He clocked 12 cars at more than 70 miles an hour on Leif Ericson drive. Said Faulkner, "The excessively low posted limits have not curbed recklessness and have not reduced the average travel pace. . . . Any one obeying the signs is an obstruction and a menace to those traveling at a normal pace."

Park district officials disagreed with Faulkner's 94 per cent. They also doubted that any car traveled at more than 70 miles an hour.

The Fox Valley federation, representing communities west of Chicago, met at St. Charles and indorsed the proposed Chicago elevated highway system. Lester J. Norris, federation president declared, "Elevated highways will reduce by half the problem of getting from the heart of Chicago to the Fox valley. . . . We could be getting such trafic facilities today were it not that Illinois and Chicago have diverted millions of dollars of gasoline tax revenues from road building funds." A resolution supporting elevated highways was sent to Gov. Horner and Mayor Kelly.

City Notes.

Registrations last Tuesday for the primary elections on April 14 totaled 489,166. This brought the number of names in the poll books to 2,002,757. The previous all time high was 1,800,658 recorded on March 13, 1934. Necessary revisions reduced this by 404,507. There were 1,513,591 voters registered before Tuesday.

Ald. Terrance F. Moran, chairman of the streets and alleys committee, asked the city council to approve 118 street name changes in accordance with the plan of unifying city street names. Thirteen have been changed thus far. The 118 streets under consideration are an eighth of a mile or less in length or are continuations of other thoroughfares. Council action was deferred until next Wednesday.

The Civic federation and bureau of public efficiency last week announced its third annual study of county debts and taxes. The survey showed that uncollected taxes have increased from $120,270,664 in February, 1932, to $439,437,932 last Jan. 31. The March 9 tax delinquency, $403,361,772, was 25 per cent of the taxes billed for seven years, 1928 to 1934. The report said that continued high delinquency is the greatest obstacle to restoring county government credit and that local governments will face successive crises until there is an improvement.

In Circuit court, Robert M. Sweitzer denied Cook county's charge that he is $733,817 short in the funds that were under his control as county clerk from 1910 to 1934. The county is suing Sweitzer, ousted last year as county treasurer, and the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company to recover the shortage.

Mrs. Daisy Tegtmeyer, 50 years old, refused to submit to a sanity test asked by Attorney William C. McGah. The latter has represented Mrs. Tegtmeyer in her attempts to end a jail sentence imposed two years ago for refusing to tell in court what had become of $30,000 claimed as part of her father-in-law's estate. "I am perfectly sane," said Mrs. Tegtmeyer. "I will not be a party to a release by a trick or methods not strictly in accord with the law. If necessary I will stay here until death."

FINANCE-SPORTS

Reviews of the week in finance and general business and also of sports are to be found in the finance and sports sections.

Politics

Politics and the federal public works were again tied together last week as the President demanded $1,500,000,000 more for his works program. [See Washington.] Bitter opposition rose at once, among Democrats as well as Republicans. A typical comment was Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's:

"I shall not vote for any lump sum WPA billions—at least until we assure ourselves that political exploitation is eliminated."

The works-politics tieup started to come to a head weeks ago. First Senator Rush Holt [D.] of West Virginia charged that people couldn't get WPA jobs in his state without political okays. Then Senator James J. Davis [R.] of Pennsylvania followed in similar vein. Next came Illinois' turn, with charges that donations had been demanded from WPA supervisors for Dr. Herman N. Bundesen's campaign. Wayland Brooks, seeking the Republican nomination for governor, took notice of this in a talk at Murphysboro on Thursday.

"Foremen, timekeepers and supervisors on WPA projects throughout southern Illinois have been told to pay fixed percentages to the political machine," he said. "Men in desperate need of food for their families have been told to contribute 'or else.' In this brazen and shocking move, people suffering from want must take part of their government allowance to fatten the Democratic campaign fund. . . . It is a new record in political perfidy and greed established by the Democratic party."

Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins could not avoid the issue. He gave out an order in Washington on Wednesday ordering immediate dismissal of any WPA employé soliciting campaign funds for any party. He said no WPA worker has to donate; none will be discharged for refusing to donate.

On Thursday the senate expenditures committee approved a resolution calling for an investigation of Works Progress administration but recalled it Friday when New Dealers put on heat. The resolution was offered by Senator Davis who charged Democrats were making a political football out of relief.

Meanwhile Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas continued what his supporters say is his onward march toward the Republican nomination for President. At Oklahoma City on Monday the G. O. P. state convention invoked the unit rule, thus assuring Oklahoma's 21 votes for him at the Cleveland convention. Charges were made by Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, another candidate, that the Standard Oil company had influenced the Oklahoma delegates selection. This was indirectly a slap at Landon, although Borah mentioned no names. Landon is an independent oil man. Landon's friends immediately denied the Standard Oil had anything to do with it.

"If we had that Standard Oil support we wouldn't be in debt," commented C. C. Hawk, retiring G. O. P. state chairman, as he passed the hat around in the convention to make up a $514 deficit.

Political interest skipped to Illinois, possibly a pivotal state, towards the end of the week as Senator Borah, a real native son—he was born at Fairfield—and Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, opened their campaigns.

Mr. Knox spoke in Danville on Wednesday, met with downstate Republican leaders in Springfield next day, and hopped over to Lincoln and then Decatur. He attacked New Deal waste, and particularly the WPA, which he said is being used politically by the Democrats. He said the present crisis was the worst since Lincoln's day. Senator Borah spoke at the Chicago Civic Opera house last night. His theme was: "Issues of the Campaign." Both candidates will tour downstate at the same time.

Henry P. Fletcher, national chairman of the Republican party, announced in Cleveland Monday that the keynoter temporary chairman of the national convention would be named on April 21. "Not a single name has been mentioned yet," he said.

Gov. Henry Horner and Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, rivals for the Democratic nomination for governor of Illinois, spoke in halls a block apart in Dwight, Ill., Wednesday. Dr. Bundesen called Gov. Horner a dictator, and Gov. Horner said Dr. Bundesen was being bossed by the Democratic machine in Chicago.

Daniel W. Hoan's 20 year hold on the job of mayor of Milwaukee was threatened in the primary Tuesday by Sherif Joseph J. Shinners. Hoan is identified politically as a Socialist and Shinners as a Democrat. There were two other candidates, John C. Schafer and Otto Werkmeister. To nonpartisans, the significant feature of the primary was that Hoan's three opponents piled up 26,889 more votes than he did. Unofficial returns gave Hoan 64,964, Shinners, 60,507, Schafer, 26,506, and Werkmeister, 4,840. Hoan and Shinners, who has much civic and independent support, will run off for election in April.

While the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin looked on Tuesday, his original Shrine of the Little Flower at Royal Oak, Mich., was destroyed by fire. Loss was estimated at $30,000. The new shrine, nearing completion, was not damaged.

Flying

It became known Monday that King Edward VIII. of England has ordered a private airdrome built in Windsor Great park near Sunningdale, his week-end home. The site is near Frogmore, the burial place of Queen Victoria. Britons received the news of the king's order for the airdrome with mingled feelings. Most of them would like to see him give up flying now that he is king. His advisers also entertain those wishes. Apparently he doesn't intend to do so.

President Jack Frye of Transcontinental and Western Air Lines announced Monday that a new efficiency device is being installed on the entire fleet of Douglas DC-2 airliners owned by the company. The device is said to enable pilots to operate their motors with a fuel efficiency approaching that of Diesel engines.

Lieut. Oliver E. White, U. S. navy, was killed Tuesday when he crashed with his burning plane into the sea 10 miles off Point Loma, Cal. A. W. Lecompte, radio man, bailed out safely in his parachute. . . . Dr. William P. Donovan, 39 years old, and Thomas F. O'Hanlon, 40, a lawyer, were killed Sunday in the crash of a National Guard plane near St. Louis, Mo. Dr. Donovan was a captain in the guard.

His plane disabled, Isamu Nakagaki, a Japanese naval flying student, pointed for a landing on the playground of a school in the heart of Kurume on the Island of Kyushu. As he neared the ground scores of children appeared. Nakagaki saw that if he landed on the playground he would mow through them and kill dozens. So he deliberately crashed into a nearby building, the Moribe hospital. He was killed; so were a little boy and a jinrikisha coolie—but the school children were saved. The accident occurred Wednesday.

Some time ago Jack Cope, a parachute jumper, made a parachute leap and was injured when the parachute failed to open properly. He sued the makers for $25,000, and won $5,000 by court judgment. Last week the makers appealed to the Illinois Supreme court asking the court to decide whether Cope was at fault, as they say, or the parachute, as Cope says.

Great Britain's new bomber was put through tests at Hayes, Middlesex, Wednesday. Its performance was kept secret, but it was believed the plane bettered 300 miles an hour. The bomber is streamlined, with long, slim fuselage lines and every modern improvement, including a robot pilot.

Representatives of five major air lines announced in Chicago Wednesday that they had signed a contract with the Douglas Aircraft company, Santa Monica, Cal., for a new, experimental transport plane. The ship must be able to carry 40 passengers for 900 miles nonstop, or 20 passengers in sleeping compartments for 2,000 miles nonstop. Its top speed must be at least 230 miles per hour, and its cruising speed, 193. It will have four instead of two motors, each of 1,000 horse power. [See Business Review.]

The new Zeppelin LZ-129 finished a 30 hour test flight at Friedrichshafen, Germany, Wednesday. Dr. Hugo Eckener was in command. Among his guests was Lieutenant Commander Scott E. Peck, U. S. N.

Medicine

Asylum Terror.

Two weeks ago Dr. S. B. Laughlin, Willamette [Ore.] university sociologist, expressed his conviction that hopelessly idiotic children should be put to death. Dr. Laughlin pointed to examples in the Oregon Home for the Feeble-Minded at Salem, and suggested that it would be better for both the pitifully subnormal individuals and for society if they were chloroformed.

Some of the Oregon home's 969 patients read Dr. Laughlin's suggestion in the newspapers. They nagged Mrs. L. D. Idleman, head psychologist, to know whether they would be chloroformed. Last week five terrified patients fled. All but one were returned. All were reassured that they had nothing to fear.

Said Dr. Laughlin, "Chloroforming suggestions do not apply to any one able to read a newspaper or run away. I mean the mercy killing idea to be applied to idiots unable to read, talk or understand."

He said there was no chance for mercy killing in this generation or the next, but declared his "principal interest is to put before the people the great need for eugenic marriage laws," under which "the type of feeble-minded persons under discussion would never be born."

Stone Scourge.

Fifteen months ago Nona Cloyes of Roy, Wash., noticed a tightening in the skin of her neck and thought she had a cold. When the tightening turned to numbness she went to a physician. But the numbness increased and spread, and physicians feared that her skin was turning to stone. Last week Miss Cloyes, 21 years old, was examined at the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn. The diagnosis was scleroderma, a disease characterized by hardening of the skin. It is apparently caused by abnormal deposits of calcium, an ingredient of bones and plaster, in the flesh. Mayo specialists assured Miss Cloyes that she could be cured within two years and sent her to two physicians at Valparaiso, Ind. Her treatment includes massages, light baths and outdoor exercise.

A second case of calcium hardening of the muscles was revealed at Cook county hospital. Miss Iona Swinnerton, 33, of Elkhart, Ind., is recovering from the disease after six years in the hospital. Until she was allowed to sit in a wheelchair several months ago, Miss Swinnerton was bedridden. She is steadily improving.

Medical Notes.

When Francisco Parra, 55 year old Mexican brawler, was brought to him with a knife wound in the heart, Dr. A. E. Saverich, night surgeon of the Los Angeles emergency hospital, decided the unprecedented was necessary to save Parra's life. Dr. Saverich, laboring for two hours, cut three-inch sections from two of Parra's ribs and closed the long gash in the heart covering with six stitches. Parra lived.

Three weeks ago an operation to remove abdominal adhesions stopped the eight day laughing jag of Teresa Hawkins, 18 years old, of Weston, W. Va. Last week Shreveport [La.] physicians pondered over the case of Ruby Poole, 16, daughter of an oil worker, who had talked incessantly for more than a week. The talking obsession followed influenza. Physicians said the girl seemed quite rational, talked intelligently and displayed an imposing vocabulary.

U. S. Watersheds Overflow

serve water. Albany, Troy, Ithaca, Green Island, Watervleit, Hornell, Catskill, Cortlandt, Afton, and Waterford received varying degrees of overflow. More than 4,000 persons in the state were made homeless.

All the New England states, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Maine tasted flood dangers. Troops were called out in New Hampshire and Vermont to prevent looting. New England's toll was twenty-two dead and $100,000,000 property loss. Conditions became worse yesterday as more rain, a coastal storm, and heavier floods swept the section. [See main news section.]

MASSACHUSETTS—Hatfield was hardest hit, its streets deep with water. Some 5,000 persons fled from their homes in Springfield. Deerfield, Fitchburg, Sunderland, Westfield, Worcester, Lawrence, and Lowell were tied up.

CONNECTICUT—Hartford and Middletown citizens fled to safety as the Connecticut river rose to 31 feet and spilled over. Bursting of the Greenwood dam of the West Farmington river sent water over New Hartford, East Hartford, and Farmington. Aviators warned valley people to escape. Troops were posted in Hartford to prevent looting.

VERMONT—The $1,000,000 dam at Vermont, near the Massachusetts border, broke, flooding Windsor, Brattleboro, and Bellows Falls. Water rose to roof levels in Brattleboro. State troops were sent to the towns.

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Fifteen feet of water over the power dam at Sewell's falls unleashed the Merrimack on Concord, crippling it. Hadley was abandoned, Warren damaged. Ice jams in rivers were dynamited. Troops were called out.

RHODE ISLAND—The Blackstone river valley was flooded. The mill dam at Lippitt gave way, and the Pawtuxet river overflowed at Warwick. Mills were shut down in Woonsocket and Pawtucket.

MAINE—Pittsfield, Saco, and Cornish had to contend with several feet of water in their streets. River front plants were closed. The Saco river, rising higher yesterday, gave new threats.

When sp[illegible]ains and thaws occur, the riv[illegible] the country often are taxed [illegible]acity. They must carry extra [illegible]s to their natural outlets—ocea[illegible] gulfs, and lakes. When the bu[illegible] are too heavy, the rivers overflo[illegible]ausing floods such as are now r[illegible]ing the east. The map shows th[illegible]ver systems of the eastern half of [illegible] country. They are split up into th[illegible] major basins, or watersheds, the Ohio-Mississippi, the Great Lakes, and the Atlantic. The Atlantic is, for the most part, made up of individual basins [indicated by medium thick lines] leading to the ocean. The Ohio basin, embracing a huge area, eventually joins with the Mississippi making this the greatest of all drainage systems. The boundary is shown by heavy lines. In the north the Great Lakes water basin covers a wide area, including part of Chicagoland. The Chicago river belongs naturally to this basin, but its natural flow lakeward is reversed by locks, making it an artificial indirect tributary of the Mississippi.

Science

Astronomers at Mount Wilson observatory, Pasadena, Cal., last week reported on the "star suicide" which they have been watching since Jan. 18. Through the world's largest telescope they recorded the end of a supernova, a big star, which increases its light and energy output tremendously for a short period. The supernova exploded at the rate of 4,000 miles a second. Its temperature was 300,000 degrees centigrade and its brilliancy about 20,000,000 times that of the sun before it faded into gas. The explosion occurred 7,000,000 years ago, but it has taken that long for its light to reach the earth. The star was forty-two quintillion miles away. The astronomers declared that this was one of the most colossal catastrophes of matter man has witnessed. It indicated, they said, what the end of the world might be like.

Eight and a third minutes after an explosion of the sun the earth would be a cloud of hot, drifting gases, the savants said. They estimate that the sun has about 1,500,000,000 more years to live, however.

A heavenly catastrophe struck close to home a week ago yesterday, however, when a meteor emblazoned the night sky over New Jersey and shook buildings in many towns. The flash of light was described as bluish white, yellow, green, amber and purple. Startled witnesses said they saw the meteor strike at various points between Virginia to New York. Since meteors, fragments of comets or small bodies, which travel in an orbit around the sun, usually are burned to gas when they enter the earth's atmosphere, scientists doubted that the meteor had crashed on this planet.

But last week Prof. George Winchester, Rutgers university head physicist, and his geology and astronomy associates examined a piece of pure iron, which had ripped through a Red Bank, N. J., garage, and agreed it was part of a meteor.

Eleutherios Venizelos, called the "greatest Greek statesman since Pericles" by his friends and a "dictator worse than Lenin" by his foes, died last Wednesday in Paris exile. Venizelos, seven times premier of Greece, was 72 years old. Influenza and a weakened heart caused his death.

Venizelos, born on the Island of Crete, emerged as a leader of the Cretan revolt against Turkish rule in 1897. He was called to advise the Military league in Athens and in 1910 became premier. He revised the constitution, reorganized public services and created a Balkan defensive alliance against Turkey, which eventually resulted in more territory for Greece. King Constantine wanted to aid Germany in the world war, but the allies forced him to abdicate. His son, Alexander, succeeded him. Venizelos, out of office, meanwhile raised a private army and fought the Turks and Bulgars.

Venizelos returned to the premiership and Greece declared war on Germany. King Alexander died in 1920 and George II. succeeded him. Venizelos went into exile but resumed the premiership when George II. was exiled. A plebiscite in 1924 established the Greek republic, Venizelos' goal. He soon resigned because of ill health. He returned to lead Greece out of a royalist-republican crisis in 1928 and served intermittently until 1933.

Venizelos opposed Gen. George Kondylis, who died recently, in support of a military revolt in March, 1935. The revolt was put down in 10 days and Venizelos fled. He was condemned to death in his absence but was granted complete amnesty by King George II., who was restored in a royalist stroke of state last October. Venizelos refused to renew his leadership after the victory of his party in a recent election of parliament. He will be buried in Crete.

Spain's violent political struggle between communism and monarchism continued last week while commentators predicted the rise of a Spanish soviet. Karl Marx, philosophical prophet of communism, once declared that Spain would be the first European country after Russia to go communist. The fanatical and revolutionary heritage of Spain and mass oppression of peasants and laborers are expected to result in government revolution. A republican government arose four years ago when King Alfonso was overthrown. A general election last February replaced conservatism, representing the Catholic influence, with radicalism representing the Marxism influence.

Much of the rioting was concentrated last week in the province of Logrono. At least 11 persons were killed and 40 wounded there in a clash between extremists and soldiers. The extremist mob was attempting to seize artillery. Four convents were burned and Red workers went on strike.

The Irish Free State observed the day of St. Patrick, its patron saint, last Tuesday, but one oldster said, "This is more like a day of national mourning than a day of national rejoicing." There were none of the processions and public demonstrations of 25 years ago. Said the veteran, "Since Ireland got her freedom you can't even drown the shamrock on St. Patrick's day. Today all the beer shops are closed and it is an offense against the law to be caught on licensed premises." An unidentified Dublin radio station broke in on President Eamon De Valera's broadcast to say: "Hello, comrades. You have been witnessing a display of British imperialism in Dublin." The station then dinned out the president's voice with static.

President Roosevelt at Washington announced that the inter-American peace conference would be held in Brazil, but he set no date. The President proposed the conference to reorganize the peace machinery of the western hemisphere. He previously has expressed himself ready to junk the Monroe doctrin. His plan would reinforce the world peace sought by the league of nations with treaty declarations of the conference. All American countries but Paraguay, which recently emerged as a Fascist state, have accepted the invitation.

The soviet production efficiency movement originating when a worker named Stakanoff mined more coal than his fellows was admitted to be a failure when the Russian government last week charged that sabotage and burocracy had hindered an increased output. Production even fell below previous standards. The government charged that collective dairymen had fed needles and nails to prize milch cows to prevent Stakanoffism.

Nazi authorities at Berlin warned Jewish welfare associations that their directors will be arrested as hostages unless they break off relations with German Jews who have fled to foreign countries. Whether the Jews abroad were helping to collect funds for needy German Jews was declared irrelevant. This appeared as a Nazi answer to the drive in London to raise $5,000,000 to finance a Jewish exodus from Germany.

Rudy

Up to and including Tuesday night's performance of George White's "Scandals" in New York City, Rudy Vallee, radio crooner, was one of the stars. One of his songs was: "Anything Can Happen." Something did that night.

Producer White poked Vallee on his recently reconditioned nose. Details were somewhat blurred, but it seemed—according to several chorus girls—that Vallee called White "a nasty name." Vallee's lawyer, Hyman Bushel, said Wednesday that the fight occurred because White had threatened to close the show in an effort to break a contract held by the dance team of Shea and Raymond, and that Vallee had held him to the contract.

White's agents said Vallee started the trouble by refusing to take a pay cut deemed necessary to keep the show going. Anyhow, Vallee was dropped from the cast. However, the American Arbitration association on Friday ruled that White must keep Vallee or close. Vallee immediately announced he'd not stay with the show, vindication being all he wanted.

Crucifixion.

Police of Ocala, Fla., felt they had a hard job on their hands Wednesday with the finding of George J. Timmerman, 39 years old, an unemployed bricklayer, nailed to a rude cross. He was found by James H. White, who notified police. Timmerman's lips were sewed together. Both hands and feet were pierced by 30 penny spikes. Timmerman asserted he had been ganged by several men and crucified. Sherif S. C. M. Thomas suspected the whole job after learning that White, who had found Timmerman, was a friend of his. On Thursday Thomas asserted the "crucifixion" was faked, that Timmerman was seeking notoriety or sympathy. He was held, as was Friend White.

BOONE KINSMAN.

Friends feted Nelt Webb, of Bottomfork, Ky., Tuesday, on his 95th birthday. Webb, a descendant of Daniel Boone, is known as Little Joe, midget of the Kentucky mountains. He is not quite five feet tall, and has never weighed more than 90 pounds. His father lived over 100 years; his wife is 93.

Labor

The two weeks' strike that disrupted service in 2,400 apartment and office buildings in New York, ended early Sunday when union and realty board agents reached a compromise agreement. But everything wasn't peaceful as the week wore on. James J. Bambrick, union chief, charged that the realty board had failed to rehire all strikers; he estimated that 3,000 were denied their old jobs. Arbitrators will try to iron out differences. Meanwhile, it was disclosed Thursday that the American Confidential Bureau, Inc., had made a net profit of $83,000 supplying men to break the strike. The bureau reputedly furnished 6,000 men at $4.50 each, a total of $27,000, and provided 2,000 guards at $2 a day each for 15 days, a total of $60,000. The grand total was $87,000. Total office expenses were $4,000.

Over in Akron, O., some 14,000 workers yesterday voted to accept terms of peace ending their month long strike against the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company. They have lost nearly $2,000,000 in wages. Each day brought some violence and threats of greater violence. On Monday, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins appealed to the company to "resume negotiations with your employés to bring about an adjustment of differences." [See financial section.]

Members of the Wholesale Drygoods Employés' union, in New York, went out on strike Tuesday. They want higher wages and shorter hours.

The Panama Pacific liner California was to have sailed from New York on a two weeks' cruise yesterday, but the sailing was canceled on Friday because of a strike of seamen. The California arrived in New York on Wednesday after being held up three days at San Pedro, Cal., by the same crew. Secretary of Commerce Roper called that tieup a mutiny. The seamen are demanding that the ship owners cancel a contract signed by certain union officials whom the seamen do not recognize.

Hauptmann

A few weeks ago Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, trying to satisfy himself as to the guilt or innocence of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the Lindbergh baby murder case, was demanding the arrest of Dr. John F. [Jafsie] Condon, a central figure. Gov. Hoffman wanted to question him about articles he had written stating that more than one man participated in the crime. But Dr. Condon was in Panama.

Dr. Condon returned to his Bronx, New York, home on Tuesday. But up to yesterday he and Gov. Hoffman had not gotten together. Dr. Condon stayed in the Bronx. He was quoted as saying that he'd be glad to talk to Gov. Hoffman in his own home over a good dinner and a box of cigars. This the governor refused. He said Thursday he'd not pay any social call to the doctor, that any time he talked with him he wanted a stenographer handy.

However, Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey, who prosecuted Hauptmann, called on Dr. Condon Thursday. He refused to say what they had discussed. Hauptmann's lawyer, C. Loyd Fisher, angrily asserted Dr. Condon should go to Trenton and talk with the governor "if he hasn't anything to fear."

On Friday Hauptmann moved closer to the death chair as Warden Mark O. Kimberling of the New Jersey state prison set his execution for March 31. Hauptmann in a new statement said he had seen Dr. Condon from a distance at Coney Island before and after the kidnaping. A trial witness testified he saw the two talking there. Hauptmann's statement, Fisher said, shows that the witness probably saw the two men separately and erroneously put them together. Yesterday Dr. Condon's spokesman, G. F. Coleman, said that Hauptmann's statement was, if anything, incriminating. Defense Attorney Fisher said he planned two moves to stay his client's death. [See main news section.]

Crime

When Alfred Molyneaux, 31 years old, of Lancashire, England, read of the birth of a son to Countess Barbara Hutton-Reventlow, last Feb. 24, he decided to make a little money out of the event. He wrote her a letter saying that two men were planning to kidnap the child for ransom. If she'd post an agent in front of the Gaumont theater, Manchester, March 16—last Monday—with 200 pounds, he'd tell the agent what he knew. A detective posed as the agent and arrested Molyneaux. Molyneaux then confessed his kidnap warning was a hoax, that he had a wife and two children to support on only $7.50 a week, and hoped to get some money from the rich countess through his letter.

Gladys Dillon, 14 years old, was sentenced to seven years in reform school at Hamlin, W. Va., Monday, when she pleaded guilty to poisoning members of her family. Ellsworth Payne, 16, her cousin, who allegedly conspired with her, but pleaded to a house breaking charge, was sentenced to the Boys' Industrial school. Gladys mixed poison in the flour at home because her mother refused to let her see her sweetheart. All of those poisoned recovered.

Michel Rosa, who was to have been guillotined for killing two men, was killed Monday in an attempted escape from the prison at Dijon, France. He leaped from a high balcony.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago on Monday affirmed the death sentence of George W. Barrett, 53 years old, a former Kentucky feudist. He was convicted and sentenced at Indianapolis on Dec. 14 for the murder of Nelson B. Klein, a federal agent, at College Corner, Ind. Klein was killed when he tried to arrest Barrett on a charge of taking a stolen automobile across a state line. Barrett pleaded self-defense, asserting he thought Klein was a feudist seeking his life.

Chicago justice was swift last week. A week ago yesterday Peter Krisoulas, 39 years old, was taken to the manager's office of the Mid-West theater, 3538 Archer avenue, on a charge of annoying Shirley Tupler, 12 years old. He broke for freedom, and in doing so shot and killed Irving Fehlberg, assistant manager. Police arrested him 12 hours later. On Monday, a coroner's jury held him for murder. Four and one-half hours later the grand jury indicted him. On Wednesday he pleaded not guilty before Chief Justice D. J. Normoyle of the Criminal court, and his case was assigned to Judge Peter H. Schwaba, who set April 20 for trial.

Chicago police early in the week rounded up a gang of eleven schoolboys, ranging in age from 15 to 19 years—and solved more than 50 robberies. True bills were reported voted against nine of them by the grand jury Wednesday.

Mrs. May Bannister was found guilty Wednesday by a jury at Dorchester, New Brunswick, of accessory in the kidnaping of Betty Ann, 6 months old, daughter of the slain Philip Lake. The conviction carries a 3½ year sentence. Her son, Arthur, 19 years old, was convicted of Lake's murder two weeks ago and sentenced to death. The case was known as the "baby doll" case. Prosecutors sought to show that Mrs. Bannister had carried around a baby doll in an effort to blackmail two men; that to further the plot she had caused the kidnaping of Lake's child. Lake was slain during this crime.

The Virginia Supreme court agreed last week to review the case of Miss Edith Maxwell, 21 years old, a mountain school teacher. She is under a 25 year prison sentence for the slaying of her father, Trigg Maxwell. She claimed self-defense at the trial, testifying that she hit her father with the heel of her slipper after he had beaten her for staying out late at night.

The Iowa Supreme court on Tuesday set aside the conviction of Harold M. Cooper, former chairman of the Iowa liquor commission, on a charge of violating the state liquor control act. Specifically, he was accused of illegally sending 204 state liquor seals to J. L. Farmer, a Cedar Rapids canner. He was fined $1,000.

A jury in Lansing, Mich., on Tuesday acquitted Patsy B. Martello of the charge of murdering Thomas Yelland. Testimony showed that Martello and his wife had been estranged and that Yelland, a friend of hers, struck her in Martello's presence. "I had to do something," Martello testified, "so I hit Yelland with a jack handle." The acquittal reunited the Martellos.

Education

Indications last week were that Glenn Frank would not be ousted or forced to resign from the presidency of the University of Wisconsin. Two weeks ago reports were that he would be out by June 1, and that Gov. Philip La Follette would be elected in his place. On Tuesday, however, Gov. La Follette stated in a letter that "if there were a vacancy in the university presidency I would under no circumstances be a candidate for it, nor accept it, if it were tendered to me."

Among the 236 students who were given degrees at the 183d convocation at the University of Chicago Tuesday was Mrs. Ethel M. Bennet, 52 years old, mother of three children. She had completed an undergraduate course after ten years' work at the downtown branch of the university. She received a bachelor of arts degree. Two of her children also hold college degrees. They are Merrill, a graduate of Purdue university, and Charlotte, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin.

Charges were made by Ray P. Chase, former Minnesota congressman, and now candidate for the Republican nomination for senator, that the New Deal is trying to turn land grant colleges into propaganda mills for the brain trust. The New Deal is trying to do this, he said, by giving federal funds to educational institutions, and using those gifts to dominate educational programs.

The Indiana state board of education last week adopted 12 new text books to be used in Hoosier schools during the next five years. Six elementary school subjects, among them American history, grammar, and geography, are affected. Ten old text books on these subjects will be discarded.

Religion

The Rev. Dr. David M. Steele, rector emeritus of the Protestant Episcopal church of St. Luke and the Epiphany, Philadelphia, suggested last week that Lent is too long under present day conditions. He advocated that its observance be confined to one week—a holy week. Such an arrangement, he said, would mean less profitless labor imposed upon the clergy and infinitly more benefit to the people."

Announcement was made by the Mexican government that all Roman Catholic churches except those designated by presidential decree for other uses, will be permitted to reopen. All churches in nine states and most of them in other states have been closed since the height of the anti-clerical campaign early last year. Churches which have been converted into schools, libraries, and similar institutions will continue as such.

Bishop Irving Peake Johnson of the Episcopal diocese of Colorado told a Chicago audience that the Episcopal church ought to be reorganized along traditional lines, with an archbishop as its head. He is chairman of a special commission working on reorganization. Bishop Johnson pointed out that church government at present is split up into bureaus, administered by a so-called committee. "Nobody can be loyal to a bureau," he said. "We must have a head of the church who is a person and not a committee. The presiding bishop of the church has a title, but no power."

The Catholic world, and especially its Irish members, paid tribute Tuesday to Ireland's patron saint, St. Patrick. Special services were held in many churches. In Chicago old St. Patrick church was the center of devotions.

Lincoln Legend.

One of the most popular stories concerning Abraham Lincoln was recalled Sunday with the death of Mrs. Hannah Armstrong Munsch, 71 years old, in Easton, Ill. She was the daughter of William B. [Duff] Armstrong, defended by Lincoln in a murder trial in 1857. Armstrong was accused of killing James Metzker in a brawl at a camp meeting in Havana, Ill., on Aug. 29, 1857. Armstrong's mother persuaded Lincoln to defend him. The trial was held at Beardstown. The principal prosecution witness was a man named Allen. Allen testified that he saw Armstrong kill Metzker with a slug shot. The moon was almost noon high that night, he said; he could see plainly. Then Lincoln went after him in startling fashion. He produced an almanac showing that there was no moon that night. The jury freed Armstrong.

NEW TAX PLAN FOR COMPANIES' PROFITS SET UP

Based on Sums Held from Dividends.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—Tentative agreement upon a plan to tax the entire net income of corporations upon the basis of earnings withheld from payment as dividends tonight paved the way for the start of open hearings March 30 on new tax legislation.

The new proposal, designed to avoid a "tax on taxes," was regarded as a sharp departure, mechanically, from President Roosevelt's original proposal, but as capable of carrying out his aims to force more corporate funds into circulation and provide $620,000,000 annually in additional revenue.

Plan Graduated Tax.

It also contemplates, through a graduated rate based upon the size of corporate earnings, helping small business build up depression reserves, while at the same time enabling large corporations to maintain what were described as "adequate" surpluses for hard times.

The schedule was worked out last night at a conference of Guy T. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue; Chairman Doughton [Dem., N. C.], of the house ways of means committee, and Representative Vinson [Dem., Ky.], a committee member.

Vinson, who discovered what he called a "joker" in the "tax on taxes" feature of original schedules, said the new plan had the treasury's approval. Tentative agreement upon it also was reached at a meeting today of the ways and means taxation subcommittee headed by Representative Samuel B. Hill [Dem., Wash.].

Varies from Roosevelt Plan.

Under proposals hitherto under consideration, existing corporate taxes would have been replaced by levies imposed only upon earnings not distributed to stockholders in dividends. That was the form of tax suggested in President Roosevelt's message. Vinson, however, discovered recently that this would have forced payment of taxes not only upon the undivided income, but also on profits withheld from disbursement to stockholders to pay such taxes.

The new proposal would substitute for the present corporate income tax, averaging 16.4 per cent, new taxes on statutory net income, but graduated according to the amount of such income withheld from dividends as corporate reserves.

Hill and Vinson explained that of 257,000 corporations paying federal taxes, 214,000 have statutory net income of $10,000 or less.

Lowest Rate 7½ Per Cent.

"We have a tentative schedule for those with net income of $10,000 or under, based on their withholding 10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60, and 70 per cent of net income in reserves," they said.

"For a corporation in this class, holding back 30 per cent of its net income for reserves, which has been about the average for 15 years, the rate would be 7½ per cent on the total net income, as against 20 per cent of total net income under our old tentative schedule.

"A corporation [in the $10,000 class] could put almost 50 per cent of the net income in reserves before it would be taxed as much as under present law."

Another set of graduated rates would be applied, Hill and Vinson said, to corporations with net income between $10,000 and $20,000. Using as an example a corporation with net income of $15,000 holding back 30 per cent of earnings for reserves, they said the corporation would have to pay a rate of 12½ per cent on its net earnings.

Stiffer Rates for Bigger Incomes.

A stiffer set of rates would be operative against corporations with net income of $20,000 or more, with gradual increases in lower brackets before the heaviest rates would apply.

"A corporation in the higher class," Hill and Vinson said, "would pay a 15 per cent rate on total net income if it held 30 per cent of net income in reserves. Such a corporation could put nearly 40 per cent of net income into reserves before it would pay as much as the present rate under existing laws."

It was explained that the proposal would get away from the "tax on taxes" by letting a corporation deduct the amount of its taxes from net income before declaring dividends.

The plan continues to embrace the President's suggestion to repeal the existing exemption of dividends received by individuals from the so-called "normal" income tax rates. Under the proposed new legislation, stockholders would be required to pay the "normal" rate of 4 per cent on money received as dividends as well as the surtaxes now imposed on such funds.

Banks' Money Used for New Deal Spending

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The statements of condition of the Chicago and New York banks published this week illustrate the extent to which the federal government's huge expenditures are being financed by banks. The publicity that attended the recent flotation of treasury securities tended to obscure the fact that it is not the general public that is buying the securities to finance the New Deal's spending.

With interest rates on government securities at record low levels the banks are the only investors that can afford to put their funds in government obligations. About half of the federal government's debt is represented by short term paper maturing within five years.

Sales to Public Uncertain.

When the treasury will be able to effect a proper redistribution of the debt through the sale of long term bonds to the general public is highly uncertain. It is apparent, however, that it cannot be carried out as long as money rates remain at their present low level.

The provision of the banking act of 1933 which prohibited the payment of interest on demand deposits by the member banks of the federal reserve system has been an aid to the government in selling its bonds to banks. This prohibition was extended to all member banks of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation in 1934. The banks can afford to buy low yield government paper with such deposit funds on which they are paying out no interest. Even with an average return of less than 1¾ per cent the investment proves profitable to banks, particularly when there is no other outlet for their funds.

Banks' Bond Holdings Heavy.

Analysis of the statements of seven leading Chicago and New York banks reporting their condition on March 4 shows investments in government securities ranging from 30 to 58 per cent of total deposits. The percentage relation of government holdings to total deposits and total capital of each of the seven institutions is shown in the following table [000,000 omitted]:

	Total deposits.	Total Capital accounts.	Govt. Securities.	Pct. Ratio of Govts. to dep.
Cont.-Ill. Nat...	$1,007	$108	$591	58
First Nat.-Chi..	874	57	318	36
Harris Trust....	187	15	70	37
Northern Trust	294	12	166	56
Chase Nat.-N.Y.	2,060	238	633	30
Nat. City.-N.Y.	1,060	168	499	30
First Nat.-N.Y.	496	90	221	44

The statement of condition of all reporting member banks of the reserve system in 101 cities as of March 11 showed total holdings of government securities at 9,832 million dollars, equal to approximately 30 per cent of the total deposits of 29,482 millions.

Train Will Show Movies to Entertain Passengers

Sound motion pictures as a regular entertainment feature for railroad passengers will be adopted tonight when the initial program will be given on the Columbine, Chicago-Denver train of the Chicago & North Western-Union Pacific railroads. A full length feature, a comedy and an educational film will be shown. If the plan proves successful it will be extended to other trains of the two roads.

Deadline for Filing Motor Rates and Fares Extended

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission today extended from March 23 to March 31 the deadline for filing schedules of rates and fares under the 1935 motor carrier act. Many carriers, the commission said, had urged an extension because flood conditions made it impossible to meet the March 23 deadline.

CONSOLIDATED GAS FILES $70,000,000 LOAN FOR REFUNDING

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—The Consolidated Gas company of New York has filed a registration statement covering a $70,000,000 refunding issue in an operation calculated to reduce fixed charges on outstanding obligations by about $1,387,500 annually.

The securities for which registration was asked are $35,000,000 of ten-year 3¼ per cent debentures, due April 1, 1946, and $35,000,000 of 20-year 3½ per cent debentures, due April 1, 1956. The net proceeds from the sale of the debentures, with other funds of the company will be applied to the redemption of the following:

$20,000,000 of 25-year, 5 per cent debenture bonds, due July 15, 1957, to be redeemed on July 15, 1936, at 103 per cent and accrued interest.

$50,000,000 of 24-year 5½ per cent debenture bonds, due Feb. 1, 1945, to be redeemed on or about May 15, at 103½ and accrued interest.

The premium payment to be made in calling these issues, on this basis, would be $2,350,000.

COMPANY SEEKS TO DEDUCT GIFT TO IDLE FROM TAX

Washington, D. C., March 21.—(AP)—The question of whether a corporation may deduct contributions for the aid of unemployed from its income tax report was raised today before the board of tax appeals by the McCall corporation, magazine publishers, in appealing a $17,697 tax deficiency assessed for 1933.

The corporation made a contribution to the Dayton, O., community chest which it said was used largely in relief of unemployed. Approximately the same amount, the appeal said, would have been levied in taxes had the contribution not been made. It argued the contribution therefore was an ordinary and necessary expense.

"It is significant," the appeal said, "that unemployment relief taxes have been enacted since the taxable year [1933] by the federal government and by many states, in an apparent assertion of the principle that big corporations should assist in unemployment relief as an ordinary and necessary part of their operations."

Most of the assessed deficiency, however, resulted from the internal revenue bureau's disagreement with the corporation's estimate of depreciation.

WESTERN UNION EARNINGS RISE TO $5.03 A SHARE

New York, March 21.—[Special.]—Net income of the Western Union Telegraph company amounted to $5,258,078, or $5.03 a share on capital stock, the company's annual report showed today. This figure is the same contained in a preliminary statement issued Feb. 13. In 1934 profit amounted to $2,243,084 or $2.15 a share.

Gross operating revenues totaled $89,868,573, a gain of about 3 per cent over 1934. Operating expenses declined $375,000 to $80,786,741, despite an increase of about $1,000,000 due to wage restorations and vacations.

Floods Cause Sharp Drop in Steel Output

Record breaking floods throughout the Pittsburgh, Wheeling and Ohio river steel districts have curtailed steelmaking operations so drastically that the national steel production rate, early last week placed at 60 per cent, has been sharply reduced, according to the Daily Metal Trade.

In some quarters it is estimated steel plant shutdowns necessitated by the floods have cut the national ingot rate at least 10 points, or between 15 and 20 per cent. Finishing mill operations are believed to be similarly affected.

It was pointed out that in the event of a transfer of tonnage to steel centers unaffected by floods, an improvement in the national ingot rate should follow.

Make Third of Nation's Steel.

The Pittsburgh, Wheeling and Ohio river districts account for about 35 per cent of the national steel ingot capacity and approximately 33 per cent of finished product capacity.

"Early in the week ingot production in the three districts was at the rate of about 130,000 tons weekly, or 20 per cent of the total weekly production for the nation," the Daily Metal Trade states. "The effect of the shutdowns in these districts on the national rate is obvious. While all of the mills in the flood area have not been forced to suspend, from available reports a conservative estimate of the curtailment brings the national steel rate down at least 10 points.

Production Below 60 Per Cent.

"If to the shutdowns in these districts is added suspensions and curtailments forced by flood conditions at eastern production points it is readily seen the national ingot rate at the close of the week is considerably under the 60 per cent mark.

"The length of forced curtailment in the affected districts, of course, is problematical. Whether the mills have been damaged to such extent that it will take considerable time to put them into shape for production again is any one's guess.

"Shipments will be delayed from some works, unquestionably, but whether these delays will be prolonged or only the matter of a few days cannot be determined at this time."

BANKING STOCKS RISE; TWO SET FIVE YEAR PEAKS

Chicago bank stocks were strong last week, with First National and Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company shares selling at highest levels since 1931. Both closed near their tops.

First National had high sales of 303 and closed at 299 bid, 303 asked, up 12 points for the week. Top sales of 181 were reported in Continental, although a reaction sent quotations to 172 bid, 174 asked, yesterday, a net gain of 9. Harris Trust and Savings rose 5 points to 360 bid, 375 asked. Northern Trust company closed unchanged at 830 bid, 850 asked. Chicago Title and Trust company closed at 188 bid, 191 asked, off 4 points.

FLOOD DAMAGE CAUSES DIP IN MANY STOCKS

European Situation Also Is Factor.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 21.—Bearish reflections on the mounting figures of flood damage and the more truculent attitude assumed by Hitler in the last twenty-four hours made traders more anxious to sell in today's short session on the stock exchange. Closing tables showed losses ranging from a fraction to about 3 points.

Industrials which have been leading the advance were the chief selling targets. Liquidation of the rails, a feature of the late trading yesterday, seemed to have dried up. Sales fell to around 840,000 shares, a total which compared with last Saturday's aggregate of nearly 1½ millions.

Effect of Flood Damage.

Although market letter and brokerage house comment pointed out that the extensive damage to industrial plants caused by the floods would set operations back some time owing to the necessity of repairing machinery and rehabilitating shops and mills generally, it was not forgotten that the markets for materials required in rebuilding will be quickened by this extraordinary call for supplies. The brightest spot in the picture was the domestic trade situation as portrayed by mercantile agencies, which said consumer buying is the best in five years.

Rumors that a rise in the price of crude oil may be expected shortly strengthened some of the oil stocks, but the group as a whole fared no better than the average. Standard of New Jersey ran into a flurry of selling orders in the late trading and sold off more than a point.

Farm Shares Strong.

Farm shares displayed some strength. Case was particularly buoyant, closing 3½ points net higher on the day.

Motors encountered light selling at times but the division underwent no great change on the whole.

In the airplane section, Curtiss-Wright sold off nearly a point on a run of heavy sales. Reasons for the reaction of the issue were not immediately apparent.

Steel company shares were mostly lower, "big steel" declining fractionally. The sharp drop in steel production, due to the flood, was responsible for a recent weakness in this group.

RASMUSSEN IS MADE CHAIRMAN OF NATIONAL TEA

George Rasmussen was elected chairman of the board of National Tea company yesterday and was succeeded as president by F. H. Massmann, formerly vice president. The position of chairman of the board is newly created. R. V. Rasmussen, a director, was elected vice president to succeed Massmann.

T. H. Rasmussen continues as treasurer, but relinquishes the office of secretary to B. J. Dickens, formerly assistant secretary and assistant treasurer.

At the annual stockholders meeting preceding the election of officers, directors were renamed and W. E. Russell, controler of the company, was chosen to fill a vacancy on the board.

Akron Rubber Strikers to Accept Peace Terms

Akron, O., March 21.—(AP)—The United Rubber Workers of America's local union voted late today to accept terms of peace reached by negotiation to end the strike of over a month at the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company. The vote was almost unanimous.

BUSINESS NEWS IN REVIEW

Business Much Concerned Over New Tax Plans—Opposes Levies on Surpluses—Federal Spending Increases—Retail Trade Expands—Stock Prices Slightly Higher.

Business, watching New Deal moves last week to levy heavier taxes to cover part of the steadily mounting government expenditures, turned anxious eyes to undistributed earnings of large corporations, on which President Roosevelt has proposed to place heavier impositions. [See Washington: Review Section.]

It argued that surplus earnings proved in depression years to be not merely reserves of the corporations themselves but, to a large extent, the "rainy day" reserves of thousands of investors throughout the country.

Research showed that prudently managed corporations which had accumulated reserves in good years by systematically resisting the temptation to pay out all their earnings to stockholders were able, when the lean years of the depression arrived, to draw on this surplus for dividend payments to stockholders at a time when they were most in need of funds, and when earnings of corporations had fallen below dividend requirements.

Protection.

Early in the depression the United States Steel corporation abandoned dividends on common stock, but directors recognized an obligation to maintain payments on the preferred as long as possible because these shares were held largely by trust funds, endowments, and the "widows and orphans" of investment tradition.

An outstanding example of the protection afforded by corporate reserves was found in the record of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. On Dec. 31, last, the company had 657,465 shareholders whose average holdings were 28 shares each. About 40 per cent of the stock was held directly by women, 34 per cent by men, 4 per cent in joint accounts, 19 per cent by trustees, insurance companies and others, and 3 per cent in the name of brokers. Because they are the beneficiaries of most trust and insurance funds, more than half of the company's dividends are paid to women.

Telephone did not earn its dividend of $9 a share, a rate dating back to 1922, for several depression years. To maintain the payment at the full rate it dipped into surplus to the extend of $5.36 a share in the four years from 1931 to 1934, inclusive. In 1935 it continued that course, earning $6.74 a share and drawing on surplus for $2.26.

Comparisons.

A summary of five year figures on per share earnings and dividend declarations on common stock for a representative group of ten corporations, with shares listed on the New York exchange, disclosed:

*Deficit.

Bankers and business men argued that to the extent the new taxes would discourage the accumulation of reserves in good years, and thus make impossible maintenance of dividends in lean years, the tax would tend to penalize what has been looked upon as sound corporate practice. As an example that the government itself has recognized the importance of accumulating surpluses they cited a provision of the banking act of 1935 which provides that each national bank "before the declaration of a dividend on its common shares must carry not less than one-tenth part of its net profits of the preceding year to surplus until the same amount shall equal the amount of its common capital."

Probe.

The New Deal's much touted probe of the American Telephone & Telegraph company [See Washington: Review section] started early in the week when hearings were opened in Washington. No sensational information was forthcoming beyond that brought out in an attempt by the government to prove that the utility's facilities were furnished to alleged gamblers in connection with race track services.

Walter S. Gifford, president, disclosed on the stand that his yearly salary is $206,000.

"I'm on a five day week, plus two," he replied to government counsel questioning. "A day never goes by but what I devote some time to the business of the corporation."

Spending.

The United States treasury department revealed the New Deal has spent $13,549 every minute each day, including Sundays and holidays, since the present fiscal year started last July 1, a total in excess of 5 billion dollars. [See Washington: Review section.] Although collections increased they could not keep up with the accelerated spending and amounted to only 2¾ billions for the period. Estimates placed New Deal spending in the coming fisca year, which begins July 1, next, in excess of 9 billion dollars, following the President's latest appeal for 1½ billions for relief.

The house ways and means subcommittee on Friday, discovering the treasury planned a "tax on taxes" in the scheme to assess corporate surpluses, started redrafting the administration's new revenue program. The committee learned, to its surprise, that in addition to taxing corporate income withheld from distribution a tentative schedule would also tax, at a high rate, the amount of net income held back to pay taxes.

The tax plan would have levied 15 per cent on undistributed earnings up to 10 per cent of the amount held back from stockholders, rising sharply to 55 per cent on all profit retained over 30 per cent. The subcommittee reached a tentative agreement to apply a blanket 22½ per cent tax on corporate profits which are not paid in dividends because of state or federal law or contractual obligations. It was also agreed to withhold 33⅓ per cent of dividend payments by American corporations to foreign stockholders until the investor filed an income tax return.

Retail.

The official arrival of spring Friday was accompanied by reports of a rush of retail buying as consumers covered immediate merchandise needs and Easter requirements. Neither floods [See Floods: Review section] nor adverse weather succeeded in stemming the rising volume of general business for the country as a whole.

FOREIGN TRADE SWINGS AGAINST U. S. LAST MONTH

Imports Top Exports by Ten Millions.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—[Special.]—The United States' foreign trade balance was unfavorable in February for the first time in seven months, commerce department figures disclosed today. The excess of imports amounted to $10,191,000, compared with an export excess in February, 1935, of $10,508,000.

February exports amounted to $182,630,000, compared with $162,999,000 in February, last year, and $197,950,000 in January, this year. Imports aggregated $192,821,000, against $152,491,000 and $187,440,000 respectively. The export gain over last year was accounted for largely by shipments of tobacco, petroleum products, machinery, and automobiles, while the large import gain was distributed over a wide range of products in every commodity group.

Calls Trade Trend Seasonal.

The trend, the commerce department said, followed roughly the usual seasonal movement after making adjustment for the extra day last month. Without such adjustment exports declined 7.7 per cent and imports increased 2.9 per cent from January.

A gain of $631,295 was shown over 1935 during the month in exports to Italy, the total rising to $7,487,939, compared with $6,856,644 last year. For the first two months of this year, however, exports lagged behind the same months of 1935, when the total was $13,044,391, against $12,762,507 in January and February, this year. The February gain over February, 1935, was accounted for entirely by increases in shipments of nonmetallic minerals, metals and manufactures, and machinery and vehicles.

February Shows Loss in Gold.

February gold shipments aggregated $23,637,000, against $46,000 in February, 1935. Gold imports for the month amounted to $7,002,000, compared with $122,817,000 a year earlier.

The excess of gold exports in February this year was $16,635,000, against an import excess of $122,771,000 last year. For the first two months of 1936 the import excess was $29,008,000, against $272,164,000 in the same period of the preceding year.

February silver exports totaled $141,000, against $1,661,000 in February, 1935. Imports were $17,536,000, compared with $16,351,000. The February import excess was $17,395,000, against $14,690,000 in 1935. For the two months ended with February the import excess was $75,625,000, against $32,528,000 in the first two months of 1935.

CHECK TURNOVER IN WEEK SHOWS SHARP INCREASE

The amount of business handled by check gained sharply last week, banking statistics disclosed yesterday. Debits to individual deposit accounts throughout the country amounted to $10,046,194,000 in the week ended March 11, compared with $8,437,106,000 in the preceding week and $8,023,667,000 in the corresponding period of 1935.

In the Chicago reserve district the total aggregated $1,223,055,000, against $1,074,867,000 a week earlier and $1,035,779,000 in 1935. Debits in the city of Chicago totaled $747,062,000 for the week, against $632,481,000 last year.

Bank clearings for the week ended yesterday totaled $285,900,000, compared with $297,600,000 in the preceding week and $232,100,000 in the 1935 period.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, March 21.—(AP)—The weekly statement of the New York clearing house shows:

Total surplus and undivided profits, $742,947,800 [unchanged]; total net demand deposits [average], $140,000,000 [decrease]; time deposits [average], $332,000 [increase]; clearings week ending today, $4,899,556,030; clearings week ending March 14, $3,915,710,902.

production. The national total closed the week at 50 per cent of plant capacity, after touching 60 per cent early in the week. Pittsburgh was hardest hit, with production skidding from 43 to 18 per cent. The Wheeling area dropped 23 points at 55 per cent.

Indicators.

Production of electric power gained contraseasonally, railroad freight trafic declined from the preceding week, and automobile output passed the 96,000 mark for the week. Bank clearings were the largest since 1931. Business failures increased slightly. Chicago banks, answering state and national condition calls, reported declines in deposits since the start of the year, expansion of loans and discounts, and a dip in cash resources. The changes were small.

More cigarets were made last month than in any previous February, the internal revenue department reported. Lumber manufacturers said March sales were gaining sharply. Building construction in Illinois during February rose 75 per cent, the state announced.

Securities.

Stock prices pushed slightly higher during the week as the European political situation improved. Some selling followed the disastrous floods in the northeast but this type of liquidation was not heavy enough to wipe out the gains. At first the market showed no reaction to the floods, save cautiousness, but late in the week railroad issues suffered on estimates that property damage would cut heavily into small profits now being earned by the carriers.

Bonds also moved higher. Railroad obligations felt the effects of flood fears, particularly Baltimore & Ohio, Boston & Maine, and liens of other carriers operating in the inundated areas. Foreign bonds recovered and United States government issues were strong.

Fears of franc devaluation increased as the French treasury was authorized to increase its short term advances by 5 billion francs without providing taxes to care for the increase. The franc fell below par in relation to the dollar. Other foreign currencies dropped with it.

Aviation.

The Farley air mail contract cancelation was reflected in the annual report of United Air Lines Transport corporation [See Flying: Review section]. While the company's loss of $1,393 compared with a deficit of $2,293,525 in 1934, W. A. Patterson, president, said last year's loss was due partly to inadequate pay for carrying mails. In 1934 no mail was carried for two and a half months. Following failure of the United States army to handle the mails safely contracts were renewed with the air lines at rates lower than those previously in effect.

Utilities.

Speedy decision on constitutionality of the hotly opposed public utility act of 1935 was asked when the first request for a ruling on the law was made on the United States Supreme court. The petition was filed by Burco, Inc., which asked a review of the fourth Circuit Court of Appeals holding the law invalid as applied to concerns engaged only in intrastate business. The suit involves the American States Public Service corporation. Burco owns $150,000 of the company's first lien bonds.

If the court consents to pass on the suit it will be the eleventh entrant in the box score between the administration and the court. The administration has won two of the eight major tests thus far, the gold clause and TVA decisions. It suffered setbacks on NRA, AAA, railroad pension act, Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium law, "hot oil," and rice millers decisions. Two suits are pending, the Guffey coal act, which sets up a "little NRA" for the coal industry, and the securities act of 1933—the "truth in securities" law. Another case that may be appealed for final ruling before the court recesses for the summer involves the right of the federal government to provide Public Works administration (See Washington: Review section) funds for public owned hydro electric projects.

Tinkering.

Money tinkering and low interest rates are useless as stimulants to restore normal economic conditions, Prof. Stuart P. Meech of the University of Chicago said in an address. Too many other factors confront business men which influence their ability or willingness to expand operatins, Meech said.

Financing.

Continental Can company announced its intention to seek $15,000,000 of new capital through the offering of rights to common stockholders and the sale of stock to employés. Stockholders will be given the privilege of buying one new share at $60 a share for each 15 held. Continental Can stock is currently selling around $80 a share. The deal is one of the largest recent stock sale plans to acquire new money. Most financing in the last year or more has consisted of refunding bonds into lower interest bearing obligations.

Wages.

Elgin National Watch company will boost the wages of its 3,000 employés 5 per cent on April 1, bringing basic rates to the highest level since 1929, the company announced during the week. General Foods proposed a plan which stockholders must approve to pay bonuses to managerial employés in addition to salaries. They would receive 10 per cent of net profits in excess of $1.80 per share.

High paid official of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. in 1934 was W. S. Carpenter Jr., a vice president, who received $106,270 salary for the year, the Securities and Exchange commission reported.

BANK RUNS HIT ALL OF GERMANY, FRENCH ASSERT

Reserves Shrink; Expect Inflation.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 21.—Runs on savings banks in the Rhineland following the German remilitarization have spread throughout Germany, according to French sources and non-Nazi German economists here, who are keeping a close watch on the Fatherland's resources.

On Monday, the first banking day after the entry of the reichswehr into the Rhine zone, Berlin and other centers were only lightly touched by depositor fright, but on Tuesday, with Germany's case looking more threatening, due, according to the French interpretation, to France's vigorous opposition, withdrawals increased and Wednesday were so heavy they were limited to 100 marks each.

Inflation Is Predicted.

That restriction proved inadequate, it was said, and on Thursday withdrawals were limited to 50 marks. It is expected the restriction will be lifted shortly, but in the opinion of Paris financial circles inflation will then set in. They point to already insistent rumors that inflation in any event is likely after the reichstag plebiscite March 29, with the mark depreciating as much as 70 per cent.

The Paris conclusion is that restriction of withdrawals must have opened the eyes of Germans to the low state of their bank reserves and that it is evident the Nazis used deposits to buy raw materials for rearmament. This has shaken the confidence of the German population, it was said.

German industry is evincing disquieting symptoms, according to Charles Reber, Parisian special writer on central European subjects. Rebelling against Nazi decrees which have forced the employment of great numbers of unneeded labor, manufacturers request permission to discharge 30 per cent of those at present employed—5,000,000 out of 16,000,000.

Urge Culling of Workers.

German industrial organs have been hinting at this for some time, the Deutsche Bergwerkszeitung declaring a fortnight ago that "the culling out of inefficient workmen has become necessary and would be salutary for the community and increase production."

Even Nazi labor chiefs have guardedly referred to this problem.

The fight over the Reichsbank, in which President Hjalmar Schacht is backed by Hermann Wilhelm Goering, minister of aviation and Prussian premier, and opposed by Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, and Rudolf Hess, deputy Nazi party chief, is becoming more violent, according to the Berlin correspondent of a French newspaper.

A member of Hess' staf named Forstmann wrote a pamphlet attacking Schacht as incapable. Forstmann was later arrested by the "gestapos" [secret police] on Goering's order, and later released through Hess' intervention with Hitler.

CHICAGO STOCKS MIXED; DULLEST WEEK IN MONTHS

The Chicago Stock exchange closed its dullest week of trading in three months with a turnover of only 23,000 shares in the two hour session yesterday. Prices were mixed and little changed for the day, while the week saw some of the preceding six days' losses recouped.

Volume of 328,000 shares last week compared with 370,000 the preceding week and 109,000 shares a year ago. It was the lowest figure recorded since the week ended last Dec. 21.

Although prices were somewhat mixed, the upward trend of the week is illustrated by the 91 advances, 52 declines, and 36 unchanged quotations on the 179 issues traded. In the preceding week only 38 issues advanced, 132 declined, and 21 were unchanged. Twenty stocks hit new highs for the year last week, compared with 22 the preceding week.

Two new tops were registered yesterday. Northwest Engineering rose a point to 24¾ in a 2,050 share trade, which made it second most active on the list. The other high was by Bastion Blessing, up ¼ at 11¾.

COMMODITIES VARY; GRAINS, BUTTER DIP, RUBBER, LARD ADVANCE

Commodity markets were unsettled the last week. Grains and butter were on the down grade, but May rubber sold at a new high for the season and lard and cottonseed oil scored substantial gains. May wheat sold at a new low for over a month. May corn the lowest since late in December and the May delivery of oats fell to a new low for the season.

SOIL SAVING PROJECT HAS LITTLE EFFECT ON COTTON

Cotton markets were apparently little affected yesterday by the announcement of the soil conservation plan to reduce acreage. There was no material pressure and prices held within narrow limits. Chicago, which closed one hour later than New Orleans and New York, was unchanged to 7 points higher and other markets were 8 points higher to 3 points lower. [A point is equal to 1-100 cent.]

Spot cotton closed unchanged to 5 points higher with New Orleans at 11.55 cents, Houston and New York 11.45 cents, and Galveston 11.40 cents per pound. Prices in cents per pound:

SHORT COVERINC IN LARD BOOSTS PRICES SHARPLY

Lard futures advanced to a new high level on the current upturn yesterday as the result of short covering and an unexpected upturn of about ¼ cent per pound in the Liverpool market. Closing trades were about the top with net gains of 5 to 22½ cents, September leading. Clear bellies [salt pork] closed nominally 20 cents higher.

Liverpool spot lard yesterday was quoted about 13⅝ cents per pound in American funds, an advance of nearly 1½ cents as compared with the level which prevailed early this month.

Cash lard in Chicago closed yesterday at $11 with loose and leaf at $10.50, loose being 52½ cents above Tuesday's finish. Clear bellies finished at $14.95 per 100 pounds. Prices in dollars per 100 pounds:

FOREIGN MONEYS AT LOWEST MARK IN TWO MONTHS

Europe Crisis Outweighs Distrust of Dollar.

New York, March 21.—[Special.]—The foreign exchange market today concluded a week of steady reaction with further declines to the lowest quotations in about two months. The pound sterling fell to $4.95⅞ and closed at $4.96, off ⅜ cent on the day and down 1⅞ cents from the closing level of a week ago. The franc fell to 6.61⅝ cents, off ½ point today and down 3 points in the week.

The decline in French francs lifted the American dollar to 100.24 cents against francs, compared with 100.18 cents yesterday and 99.39 cents a month ago.

Other currencies showed corresponding losses. The guilder at 68.22 cents was down three points on the day and 29 points on the week, the Swish franc at 32.75 cents was off 2 points on the day and 13 points on the week, and the belga at 16.94 cents showed losses of 1 point on the day and 6 points on the week.

Other Foreign Currencies Decline.

German marks dropped to 40.42 cents, off 6 points today and 9 points below its close of a week ago; the lira at 7.99 cents was unchanged from Friday and the week. Scandinavian exchanges showed losses of 1 and 2 points today, which put them 8 to 9 points lower on the week, while Japanese yen at 28.89 cents were up 1 point today and 9 points in the week. The Canadian dollar showed a loss of 11-16 cent today and 9-32 cent in the week, closing at a discount of 9-32 cent.

In contrast to the further cheapening of "spot" rates, the gold standard currencies strengthened in the forward market. The franc, which had been quoted at a discount of 23 points for 90 day forward contracts on Friday, hardened to 21½ points today. Guilders rose from 63 points discount to 50½ points, and Swiss francs from 37 points to 33½ cents.

Less Distrust of Dollar.

The week's action of the foreign exchanges indicated, bankers said, that the distrust of the dollar, which had been stirred up early in the year by the enactment of the bonus legislation and the invalidation of the AAA processing taxes by the Supreme court, had finally been outweighed by the growing concern over Europe's currencies provoked by the crisis over the Rhine.

For two years prior to last February the dollar had commanded almost constantly a substantial premium and upward of 2 billion dollars in gold had flowed here from abroad. The enactment of bonus legislation, however, coupled with the invalidation of the AAA, and the publicity given to demands for further devaluation disturbed this confidence about two months ago and led to an outflow of gold from this country in the first week of February. The gold flow ended quickly, however.

PRICES OF LIVE STOCK CONFUSED FOR LAST WEEK

Conflicting factors caused highly mixed live stock markets at the Chicago stockyards last week. Some classes suffered sharp price cuts as a result of floods in the east, which made it difficult for packers on the eastern coast to obtain supplies from the middle western markets, while others ruled strong to higher on good local support.

The various kinds of bovine stock finished the week from 50 cents lower to as much as 25 cents higher, the upturns occurring in the cheapest grades of light steers and the yearling hefers. Medium and heavy steers closed barely steady, but stock under 1,000 pounds was wanted at advances of 15 to 25 cents. Beef cows closed 25 to 50 cents lower.

A substantial cut in sheep receipts offset the drop in eastern shipping orders, and lamb prices for the six days averaged steady with the preceding week at $10 and equaled the highest since the middle of last month. There was a temporary setback in heavy lambs near the close. The extreme top for the week, $10.50, was paid for a small lot on Friday.

Local demand for hogs was the broadest in more than a month, and despite the drop in shipping orders and increase in receipts, which were heaviest since week ended March 22, the six day average moved up 10 cents to $10.30, the highest weekly average in four weeks.

GRAINS RECEDE FURTHER; REACH SEASON'S LOWS

Future Delivery Contracts Are Liquidated.

Scattered liquidation by holders of grain contracts continued yesterday. The declines were largely fractional but were sufficient to depress July wheat to 87⅝ cents, a new low since Oct. 29, while May and July oats, and September corn sold at a new low for the season. May corn touched 58⅞ cents, the lowest level since late in December, and for the first time this season the 60 cent quotation was eliminated on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Part of the selling early was attributed to overnight margin calls as there was comparatively little grain on commission house books at the close on Friday except possibly some May wheat which showed a profit of consequence. Buying against bids and short covering checked the decline and caused a moderate rally in wheat toward the close.

Deferred Wheat Options Lower.

Wheat finished unchanged for the May delivery and ½ cent lower for the July and September options. Losses on corn and oats were fractional, although both closed at practically the bottom prices for the day.

A forecast for rain or snow over the important dry area in the western and southwestern winter wheat belt had considerable influence on the new crop deliveries of that grain and some stop loss orders were uncovered on the way down. There was fairly persistent buying of the July delivery around 88 cents, the price at which it closed. Only once since trading started in the July option has it closed below that level. The September option came within ⅛ cent of the lowest price on the crop.

Outside Markets Unsettled.

Outside wheat markets were somewhat unsettled, but prices averaged somewhat lower. Messages from Winnipeg indicated further sales of low grade Canadian wheat for export to the Orient.

It was estimated about 350,000 bushels had been sold during the last week. Liverpool wheat was fractionally lower but pressure from Canadian offerings was largely offset by uncertainty regarding the European political situation.

Closing prices on the May delivery of leading grains, with comparisons follow:

	Saturday.	Friday.	Week ago.
Wheat	$0.97¾	$0.97¾	$0.99⅜
Corn	.59	.59⅝	.60⅝
Oats	.25⅜	.25½	.27⅞
Rye	.55⅝	.55⅝	.56⅝

Corn traders paid little attention to an official report on the new Argentine crop which indicated a yield of 377 million bushels, although this compared with the record breaking harvest of 452 million bushels in 1935. Houses with northwestern connections were again reported selling oats.

SUGAR

NEW YORK, March 21.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw was unchanged today at 3.50c per lb for spots and 3.65c for forward. No sales were reported. In light trading where there appeared to be little for sale, futures held generally steady on trade and commission house buying with the market closing 1 to 2 points net higher. Sales were only 1,550 tons.

*New 1936 high.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 21.—Treasury bonds were dull and steady today, while domestic rails, industrials and utilities were irregular in quiet dealings. At the opening treasury 2¾s of 1948-'51 and Federal Farm loan 2¾s of 1947 reached new high prices, but the market then became inactive and opening prices were shaded a bit in subsequent trading.

In the rails Baltimore and Ohio issues developed strength, several rising a point or more. There was a sale of Florida East Coast first 4½s at a new high. In the industrial division Marion Steam Shovel 6s advanced 2 points.

Bankers Test Market.

Feeling their way cautiously after the European situation had remained a disturbing factor for ten days, bankers tested the market this week with a major issue of gilt-edged utility bonds and found a ready response. As a result of this satisfactory trial other programs of refunding will be carried forward according to original schedules.

It is realized, however, that the market may not accord the same reception to industrial or other issues lacking in appeal to institutional investors.

Some May Be Delayed.

Deprived of the legal buying power of saving banks, insurance companies, and trusts, some of the issues now in the calendar of near future offerings will require real salesmanship, it was said. For this reason some of them may be postponed until investment sentiment has been more fully restored, in the opinion of bankers.

Meanwhile, the market for treasury securities is stronger than in some time. This week has witnessed an advance in several long term issues to new highs for the year.

The Building Industry.

Activity in the building trades is still slight compared to the 1927 boom, but there is evidence that a sound foundation exists for a revival in construction of certain types.

Families that were forced to live in crowded quarters during the depression years are seeking more space. Many tenants who have experienced an increase in income are seeking better housing. Furthermore, many structures have been razed because of obsolescence, depreciation, and heavy taxes.

This has brought about an increase in rents for residential properties and a rise in property values.

This, in turn, is expected to stimulate building. There is a large amount of money available to finance such construction. Life insurance companies have again entered the mortgage field. Interest rates are substantially less than they were six years ago.

Not only life insurance companies but building and loan associations, bolstered with cash by the Federal Home Loan bank; commercial banks, whose lending powers have been broadened by recent legislation, and individuals, seeking profitable investments, are potential buyers of such mortgages.

There has already been some increase in building. During 1935 building permits issued in the principal cities were 170 per cent greater than in 1934. Value of all construction was up 70 per cent. Nonresidential construction increased in value by 74 per cent, according to bureau of labor reports. Although these increases, measured by 1934 standards, are large, total building was still small compared with boom years.

The outlook for companies engaged in the building and related trades is promising. The market prices of stocks of these companies have already discounted the revival to a considerable extent. Such stocks are selling at high prices in relation to current earnings.

Among the companies which would benefit by a building revival are Crane, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum, American Radiator, Certain-teed, Devoe & Raynolds, Fairbanks-Morse, Glidden, Holland Furnace, Libbey-Owens-Ford, Long Bell Lumber, Minneapolis-Honeywell, National Gypsum, Otis Elevator, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Sherwin-Williams, Starrett, United Wall Paper, Williams Oil-o-Matic, Yale & Towne, Celotex, General Electric, Kelvinator, Servel, Westinghouse, and many small concerns.

UTILITY BONDS HEAD LIST OF NEW OFFERINGS

2 Issues Among Largest Registered with SEC.

Two utility bond issues, among the largest to be registered with the Securities and Exchange commission, head the list of corporate security offerings scheduled for this week upon expiration of the necessary twenty days after registration.

Two sizable Iowa utility bond offerings also are on the calendar, while a principal stock issue for the week is that of the General American Transportation corporation.

Pacific Gas and Electric company seeks to market $90,000,000 in first and refunding mortgage bonds bearing 3¾ per cent, probably tomorrow. The bonds are due Dec. 1, 1961. Proceeds together with treasury funds will be used to redeem $88,275,000 of 4½ and 5 per cent bonds at $94,865,000, including interest and premium. Blyth & Co. is expected to be principal underwriter.

Big Eastern Utility Issue.

An issue of $75,000,000 of 4 per cent first mortgage and collateral trust bonds of March 1, 1956, is eligible for offering on Wednesday by the Eastern Gas and Fuel associates. This will constitute the only funded debt of this group, which gives service in Boston, New Haven, and Philadelphia. The bonds will be used to retire debt of underlying companies, bearing 5 to 6 per cent interest, and to acquire securities owned by subsidiary and affiliated companies. The First Boston corporation and Mellon Securities company are named as underwriters.

The Iowa Electric company will market $3,750,000 of 4 per cent first mortgage bonds of 1961 and $1,040,000 of 4 per cent notes to mature serially, Oct. 1, 1936, to April 1, 1946. Higher interest bearing issues will be retired and some of proceeds used for corporate purposes.

Another Iowa Utility Issue.

The Iowa Electric Light and Power company has issues of $3,600,000 of 4 per cent first mortgage bonds of 1955 and $1,250,000 of 3 per cent coupon notes maturing serially to April 1, 1941. Proceeds will redeem $3,600,000 of 5 per cent bonds and apply on $1,175,000 of bank loans.

Harris, Hall & Co. is to be principal underwriter for offerings of the Iowa utilities, both of which are located in Cedar Rapids. Offering is scheduled for the middle or latter part of this week.

The General American Transportation offering, consisting of 169,600 shares of $5 par common stock, will become eligible Thursday. Proceeds of the sale have not been specifically allocated, but $1,165,000 may be used to acquire preferred stock in a successor to the Pressed Steel Car company under a proposed reorganization plan now pending. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. is expected to be a principal underwriter.

Brewing Company Plans Issue.

The Peter Fox Brewing company of Chicago seeks to issue 25,000 shares of $10 par 6 per cent preferred and 25,000 shares of $5 par common stock, probably late in the week. Underwriters are Webber-Simpson & Co. of Chicago, and Edward D. Jones of St. Louis.

Other stock issues on the week's list follow:

Monday—National Surety corporation, New York, 100,000 shares of $10 par capital stock; Essex Brewing company, Haverill, Mass., 40,000 shares of $5 par common; Kingston Products corporation, Kokomo, Ind., 288,772 shares of $1 par common; Mansul Chemical company, Jacksonville, Fla., 35,000 no par class A shares and 15,000 no par class B to be offered at $4 a share.

Tuesday—Burry Biscuit corporation, Linden, N. J., 10,000 shares of $50 par 6 per cent convertible preferred and 120,000 shares of 50 cent par common.

Wednesday—Canadian Capital corporation, Ltd., Montreal, 100,000 shares of $1 par special shares, 200,000 of $1 par ordinary shares, and 100,000 stock purchase warrants.

Thursday—American Business Shares, Inc., Jersey City, 2,500,000 shares of 50 cent par capital stock, at price of approximately $1.25.

Friday—Blue Lake Gold Mines, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., 500,000 shares of $1 par common to be offered at $1.50 a share. Zem Zem corporation, New York, 15,000 shares of $10 par class A preferred and 5,000 shares of no par class B common, to be offered in units of 3 preferred and one common at $50 a unit.

N. Y. Mortgage Lawsuit Carried to Supreme Court

Washington, D. C. March 21.—[Special.]—The New York state mortgage moratorium law of 1933 was challenged in an appeal brought to the Supreme court today by Joseph and Angeline Loporto, holders of a mortgage on a tenement house at 39 Henry street, New York City. They argued that the New York law violates the due process, contract, and equal protection clauses of the constitution.

DELAY NAMING OPEN MARKET REPRESENTATIVE

Chicago Bank Is Awaiting Full Voting Power.

Selection of a representative for the Chicago and St. Louis Federal Reserve bank districts on the new open market committee of the reserve system probably will be put off until governors of the system fill the two vacancies in the directorate of the Chicago Reserve bank.

George J. Schaller, president of the Chicago bank, is regarded as an almost certain choice, but "favorite son" feelings have brought about an impasse. St. Louis is said to be solidly back of W. N. Martin, president of the reserve bank there.

It was learned yesterday that the Chicago bank's directors have no intention of meeting with the St. Louis Reserve bank's directors until their ranks are up to full strength of nine members.

Not on Equal Basis.

As matters stand now, the St. Louis bank would have nine votes and Chicago only seven because the law has been interpreted as granting a vote to each director in naming representatives on the open market committee.

The Chicago group is determined to remain deaf to suggestions of a meeting to pick the representative until able to argue on even terms. At that time, according to general views, the Chicago bank would be considered in a favorable position because of its size and prestige.

In the event of a deadlock persisting between Schaller and Martin, a possible choice for the job is believed to be Howard P. Preston, first vice president of the Chicago Reserve bank and a veteran in the reserve system.

Will Have 12 Members.

The open market committee, which is to determine the reserve system policy on buying and selling of government bonds, is to consist of the seven members of the board of governors of the system and five men chosen by the twelve reserve banks.

Four of the five bank representatives have been selected from ten of the reserve districts. In addition to the Chicago-St. Louis bank vacancy, another one exists on the open market committee because the President has not named the seventh member of the board of governors.

The two vacancies in the Chicago bank's directorate result from expiration of the terms of F. C. Ball of Muncie, Ind., at the end of 1934, and of James Simpson at the end of 1935. The reserve board, which names three of the nine members of each bank's directorate, has not named successors to Ball and Simpson.

GOVERNORSHIP FIGHT SPLITS 40TH WARD

LEGAL BATTLE LOOMS IN EIGHTH DISTRICT RACE

Democrats Split on Nominations.

BY PERCY WOOD.

The powers who decide such things in Springfield are going to have to interest themselves judiciously in a dispute among Democrats of the 8th senatorial district before it will be decided whether each party will attempt to send two representatives to the house in November.

Republicans have decided to nominate two candidates in this district, which includes Lake, Boone and McHenry counties. Representative Richard J. Lyons, of Libertyville, enthusiastic Republican four-termer, is expected to lead the ticket. Five others are also in the race.

Representative Thomas A. Bolger [Dem., McHenry], staunch Horner supporter, is a candidate for a fourth term. The other Democrat who filed is Henry F. Wallenwein, of Waukegan, justice of the peace.

According to political gossip, Bolger's friends on the Democratic senatorial committee, Paul Doherty, Bolger's brother-in-law, and Edward O'Brien, of McHenry and Boone counties, respectively, signified their intention of nominating only one candidate, which would have made Bolger's reelection certain, in the event he was nominated.

Third Member Objects.

The third committeeman, Emmett Moroney of Highland Park, Lake county, held out for nomination of both candidates, and as an argument declared he held the balance of power by virtue of the superior Democratic vote cast in his county. The Lake vote in 1934 was 11,687, while Boone tallied 420 and McHenry, 4,663.

This tangle will have to be straightened out by Attorney General Kerner and Secretary of State Hughes.

Seek to Avert Contest.

Court proceedings have been instituted which, if successful, will return all representatives in the 27th district without contest.

This district, which runs northwest through the 26th, 27th, 32d and 33d wards, is a "setup"; that is, only two Democrats and one Republican are to be nominated. Nomination would be tantamount to election for there would be only three nominees for the three house seats.

Have 2 Opponents.

Representatives A. L. Auth and Edward J. Petlak, Democrats, have two opponents filed against them, Edmund A. Bolewski and Michael Zientek. Joseph N. De Grazio, the Republican, has no opponents and, thus, is already elected.

Last week, in behalf of Bolewski and Zientek, Attorney Benjamin S. Adamowski, who is also a representative and Democratic leader in the house, filed suit to restrain the election commission from printing their names on the ballot.

Reasons given were that it would be "contrary to the best public interest" and that "irreparable injury and embarrassment" would result if Bolewski and Zientek remained in the race. They declared they had filed a withdrawal request, but were informed it could not be accepted.

If the suit is successful Auth and Petlak will be in the same position as De Grazio—without primary opponents and assured of election.

Strenuous Campaign.

Perhaps as active campaigning as will be seen in Cook county is being carried on in the Seventh district, where the candidates must take the stump from Harvey and Flossmoor on the south, on around the western suburbs and into the Winnetka and Hubbard Woods territory.

The "shoestring" district has a contest this spring—that is, two Democrats and two Republicans will be nominated for the three seats which will be filled in November.

An unusual situation prevails as a result of the filings in this district, for none of the sitting representatives have first place on the ballot.

Mrs. Bernice T. Van Der Vries of Winnetka and Frank Foster of Harvey, the sitting Republicans, are in second and third place respectively, while the Democratic representative, Frank G. Ring of Harvey, is second on the Democratic ballot.

Arthur Olsen, 3916 North Odell avenue, Chicago, landed first place in the Republican column and former Representative Emmett McGrath of Brookfield the favored position on the Democratic ballot. In no other district were all representatives denied top place.

Tame Race in 25th.

The Twenty-fifth, another district in which northwest side voters are interested, is the largest in the state but its races are fairly tame this year.

Because only two Democrats and one Republican will be nominated April 14, there will be no election fight. The sitting Democrats, Benjamin S. Adamowski, majority leader of the house, and Raymond T. O'Keefe, are at the head of the ballot, as is the lone Republican, Elroy C. Sandquist.

Adamowski and O'Keefe have five opponents and Sandquist has thirteen. The Republican doesn't appear much worried, apparently believing his top position and the bewildering number

Wright Junior Co-eds to Parade as Manikins in Spring Style Show

A fashion parade will pass through the Wright Junior College auditorium, 3400 Austin boulevard, on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Spring styles will come to capture the hearts of the young women. There will be leg o' mutton sleeves, swishy taffeta weaves, and pert nosegays suggestive of spring. Four neat school frocks are shown here by four of Wright's attractive co-eds. From left to right are Miss Margy Nissen, Miss Patricia Kelly, Miss Shirley Long, and Miss Betty Jacques. Ingenuity Gives Leyden Park a Church Despite Adversity

BY MILDRED WILDS.

The congregation of "The Church of Our Father," after meeting all winter at 3950 Cullom avenue in a portable school, will soon have a church building. Theirs will be the first one in the Leyden Park district.

THE REV. IRWIN ST. JOHN TUCKER.

The little mission began its history when 129 Leyden Park Episcopalians petitioned the diocese for a church in their own community. Its members had been traveling five and six miles to the nearest church. The carfare for a whole family was hard on the purse and it was too far for small children to walk. The petitioners declared they would make their own church.

The furniture, even to the candlesticks, has been built and carved by the members in their leisure time. Now they have bought the frame of what was formerly the village hall, known as the "county house" and are moving it to the church lot at Grace street and Octavia avenue.

Moving Is Hazardous.

The only other expense thus far in the two year church history was the fee for renting the moving apparatus. But the moving cables are so rusty that they break under every strain. It has taken six weeks to move the building a block and several men have crushed their fingers.

The mission seems to prosper; the members have had other problems and won. On Oct. 28, 1934, the first meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Prohaska. Several weeks later the members rented the community hall, 3455 North Oketa avenue. By this time some of the church equipment was made but after each evening service conducted by the Rev. Irwin St. John Tucker of St. Stephen's, the hymn books, the pulpit and chairs had to be put away in the locker room. The jingle of the cash register in the next door grocery store and the housewives' conversation as they bought their Sunday dinner provisions annoyed the worshipers.

Then they moved into Mrs. John Brown's basement at 3833 Neva avenue. It was warm there during the winter. In August, the church moved into the old portable school lent them until the owner could find another use for his purchase.

This meeting place has no wall boarding except on one side. The ceiling is the roof. The floor could not be scrubbed with water in the cold weather but the women swept it clean with snow.

Inside the meeting place is a processional cross and an altar cross carved from wood and gilded by John Dragland. Mr. Dragland was a shipbuilder and a cabinet maker. Now he does odd jobs in carpentry. David Eichelman molded tall candlesticks from iron but they weighed 10 pounds so Joseph Prohaska carved a set from wood. Mr. Prohaska also carved two offering trays and padded them with velvet. Then he made a candle lighter out of tin and wood and finished it with gold paint.

The highly polished pulpit of mahogany was an old victrola, found in a neighbor's attic. The lectron was made from donated lumber and an old fishpole is now a dossal pole bearing the dossal curtains, fashioned by the guild women from sateen. Emile Baum made the hymnal rack from old boards.

Piano for an Organ.

Then they needed a musical instrument. Mrs. Louise Gerhardt obtained an old piano and was sorry it wasn't an organ. Leyden school had a pump organ but wanted a piano. After the exchange was made the church men made new organ stoppers and cleaned it. Mrs. G. W. Stratton is the organist.

All the men met one day to make the altar and the communion rail. The latter is fashioned of old orange crates. Children are baptised from what was once a utilitarian mixing bowl, a donation from a housewife's kitchen.

Last March the American Legion post, No. 612, gave a flag and the Episcopal diocese sent a missal. One wall of the barren building now holds the painting showing the progress in living conditions through the centuries.

Confirmation Goes On.

Bishop George Craig Stewart came to the church to officiate at the first confirmation on Feb. 9, one of the recent below zero Sundays. The snow was beating in through the cracks in the walls and the stove struggled against the cold. A gust of wind suddenly raised the roof about a foot and banged it repeatedly as if it were an unfastened door. The bishop in his long robes stopped during the service and put on his overshoes. Then a man from the congregation climbed to the roof and nailed it down. Twelve adolescent children were confirmed that day.

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

"THE Russian atmosphere" is Danny Newman's term of identification for himself in explaining his participation in The Mummers' forthcoming production, "Clear All Wires." That he might give the authentic touch to his several character rôles, Danny, who is 17 and William F. Madden's youngest Mummer, went into training two months ago to master the intricacies of the Muscovite tongue. He's ready now, he asserts, to "take on" any native son of the Volga vocally, cadence for rolling cadence.

DANNY NEWMAN.

In his spare hours after classes at Sullivan High school Danny serves as The Mummers' press agent. He dropped in last week with his latest release. This time his jaunty entry hinted strongly of Ted Lewis.

"My literary masterpiece," quoth Danny. "I'll bet the blaseest editor will have to sit up and take notice of this one."

"'Clear All Wires,' Danny had written, in part, "wittily presents an incorrigible correspondent as he perpetrates a Russian ruse, employs the services of Muscovite muscle men . . . and comes near spending the rest of his life gazing at the stars from behind the bars of a Moscow hoosegow."

The play is billed for April 3, 4 and 5 at the Chicago Woman's club theater.

M'KEONE BASES DRIVE ON G. O. P. 40 YEAR RECORD

Former Protege Now Rival for Post.

BY STANLEY ARMSTRONG.

Candidacies for ward committeeman will go into full stride this week now that decisions of the board of election commissioners on objections to nominating petitions have removed all doubt concerning whose names will appear on the ballot April 14.

The objections served to further embitter opposing candidates. Hearings on them also heightened the suspicions of Republican candidates, who are supporting Wayland Brooks for the Republican nomination for governor, that Democratic influences are working in some wards for the benefit of those opponents who are allied with the gubernatorial candidacy of H. Wallace Caldwell.

A clear cut fight between the Brooks and Caldwell committeeman candidates is under way in the Fortieth ward, the candidates being Committeeman John J. McKeone, the Brooks' worker, and William McKinley Gleeson, who has found favor with the Caldwell forces.

40 Years with G. O. P.

McKeone has been actively identified with the Republican politics on the northwest side for forty years. For the last 21 years he has resided with his family at 3214 Wilson avenue. For 14 years he was the representative of the Deneen organization in the ward, and for the past six years he has been committeeman.

He has taken an active part in the business and civic life of the community. Under his leadership various Republican factions in the ward have been brought together in harmony, and he now has the support of ward leaders such as Dr. Joseph C. Ross, who is serving his fourth term in the city council; Attorney Samuel Golan, William E. Johnson, former president of the Hollywood park district; Leo H. Lowitz, who is active in civic affairs; and William E. Morgan, former judge of the Municipal court.

The committeeman is talking about the need for Republicans to unit for success in November, and stating to the voters that Brooks as a candidate for governor will add strength to the Republican national ticket.

Battle In 35th.

Gleeson is a lawyer, and lives at 3101 Berteau avenue. He was put on the Municipal court ticket by McKeone in 1930, but was defeated. Sometime after his defeat he severed his connections with the McKeone-Ross organization.

Another intensive fight is being waged in the 35th ward. Committeeman Frank Peska, city prosecutor under a former Republican administration, is counted among the Caldwell people, and is finding stiff opposition in the candidacy of Marshall W. Olson, a young Republican who has lived most of his life at his present address. Olson has the support of the Brooks forces.

Olson is a surveying and construction engineer. He is supported by Frank R. Ringa, a former alderman, and a strong organization has been built up that they say is the only regular Republican one in the ward. The Democratic organization in the ward, according to Olson's followers, is asking the Republicans they meet to vote for Peska.

Rieger Gains Strength.

In the nearby 34th ward, Committeeman Eugene L. Nusser, a Caldwell man whose record in the city council several years ago constantly was criticized by the Municipal Voters' league, is being hard pressed by William Rieger Jr., who carries the Brooks' standard.

Rieger was born and raised in Chicago and has watched his district change from a prairie to a thickly congested residential area. For 20 years he was a commissioner of the Northwest Park district during which time it grew from a few unimproved lots into a system of 13 modern parks and playgrounds. He is in the real estate and contracting business.

Rieger was regarded as a minority on the board when it was controled by the faction of Eden T. Brekke, committeeman of the 36th ward and Caldwell's Cook county campaign manager. A scandal broke while Brekke was park secretary, in which it was charged that interest was paid on some unsold bonds, and outside interests took over the financial management. Rieger was given credit for doing all in his power to aid the economy program that followed.

Brekke Has One Opponent.

Brekke now is fighting to retain his committeemanship. He has one opponent, Arthur M. Romme, Deneen factionist.

In the 38th ward, Committeeman Frank M. Kalteux, who is one of the Caldwell-Brekke-Serritella group, is having serious trouble combatting the aggressive campaign of Edward H. Wigdahl, leader of the Brooks forces in the ward.

An electrical engineer and contractor, Wigdahl has resided on the northwest side for 40 years. He is the only ex-service man among the candidates, and has the support of more than 400 veterans in the ward. He is active in the community and

SEEK RAIL SPEED LIMIT THROUGH NORWOOD PARK

Civic Units Act in Drive for Track Elevation.

Express trains running on the ground level tracks of the Wisconsin division of the Chicago and North Western railroad between Bryn Mawr and Ozark avenues may be limited to a speed of 30 miles an hour if a campaign recently launched by civic organizations of Norwood Park is successful.

Representatives of seven community groups, appearing before the Illinois commerce commission in an effort to obtain elevation of the tracks in this section, are seeking enforcement of an unobserved city ordinance restricting speed limits in dangerous zones as a weapon to force an early decision in the case.

Railroad Opposes Work.

Counsel for the railroad, in opposing the elevation, declare cost of the construction, approximately $3,000,000, is prohibitive. Observance of the low speed limit is impossible in present day trafic operation, they say.

According to Lee Freeman, attorney for the commerce commission, similar cases in the past have not been affected by the city ordinance but have been referred to the commission for a decision. In that case, Norwood Park residents are endeavoring to show that speed attained by the trains, as high as 80 miles an hour, is unsafe past grade crossings. Streets involved are Bryn Mawr, Nagle, Raven, Newell, Harlem, Oliphant, and Ozark.

Trafic Safety Sought.

Objectives of the community are the protection of school children forced to cross the tracks, trafic safety, and the esthetic aspects of the improvement. The Norwood Park section of the tracks is the only remaining unelevated portion of the system in the northwest side of the city.

Organizations participating in the campaign are the Norwood Park Chamber of Commerce, the Norwood Park Citizens' association, the Austin-Higgins Improvement association, the 42d Precinct Improvement association, the Northwest Civic association, the Edison Park post, American Legion, and the Edison Park Kiwanis club. Chairman of the group representatives is Arthur E. Rex.

LEGAL BATTLE LOOMS IN 8TH DISTRICT RACE

Democrats Split on Number of Nominations.

of candidates against him will work to his advantage.

Adamowski is supporting the organization slate of state candidates, headed by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, and is criticizing Gov. Horner. In recent speeches he has charged the governor is accepting all credit for legislation passed during his administration and giving none to the legislature.

Adamowski is in a good position to explain what has been happening in Springfield the last three years, for he directed the course of most of the important measures passed.

Want Record Vote.

Republicans of the Twenty-third district are preparing to get out a big vote on primary day to give as impressive a show of support as possible to candidates for the Illinois house, following the senatorial committee's decision to nominate two men.

Since the Democrats have resolved to attempt reëlection of Representatives Arthur M. Kaindl and Stanley A. Halick, the Republican decision means the Twenty-third will be a battle ground in November, both parties striving to send their two men to Springfield.

Primary Fight Averted.

Representative Daniel A. Roberts and former Representative William G. Thon of Oak Park are in the lead for the Republican nomination. When it appeared only one nomination would be sought, a hot primary fight between them was promised. That battle has been postponed until fall. There is a third candidate, Charles E. Smith of Oak Park, so Thon or Roberts is bound to be nominated, probably both, say observers.

Thon has been assured the support of Edward F. Moore of the Thirtieth ward, secretary of the Republican county central committee, and a backer of Wayland Brooks for governor. Thon is also a Brooks man while Roberts is supporting H. Wallace Caldwell.

While Thon is well known by the record he made in nine terms at Springfield—halted in 1934 when he was defeated for the senate—Roberts has been making himself popular with his constituents during his first term in the house.

An unusual report to the voters was prepared by Roberts at the close of the 1935 regular session, showing his vote on all important measures. It had no self laudatory preface or summary—merely a brief digest of the bills and the vote.

Law Student in Race.

Kaindl and Halick are running against five men, three of them announced as Horner supporters. Kaindl and Halick, organization men, are backing Dr. Herman N. Bundesen against the governor. One of their opponents is Merion R. Samborski, 25, a law student making his first try for public office.

Former Senator William F. Gillmeister is another Horner man. The third is Gerald H. Driscoll of Oak Park.

WRIGHT COLLEGE DEAN HONORED IN ELECTION BY NATIONAL GROUP

Miss Josephine Doniat, head of the foreign language department and dean of women at Wright Junior city college, was elected chairman of the junior college section of the National Association of Deans of Women at its recent 20th annual meeting.

MISS JOSEPHINE DONIAT.

The junior college section is the newest group in the association and thus far its meetings have been attended largely by deans of eastern finishing schools. Miss Doniat will attempt to introduce the problems of the large municipal junior colleges of the middlewest and the Pacific coast to attract the deans of this type of school.

She is also a member of the executive committee which will plan next year's convention.

Miss Doniat is a graduate of the University of Chicago where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. She also studied at the University of Grenoble where she received the degree "des hautes-etudes." Three months ago she was honored by the French government, receiving the academic palms for her work in French.

40TH WARD G. O. P. RIVALS DIVIDED OVER GOVERNOR

his campaign already has made heavy inroads into the Kalteux strength.

Report Violence in 32d.

On the Democratic side there are some lively scraps also. Horner candidates are handing out state jobs in their efforts to defeat the regular organization incumbents. Violence already has been reported from the 32d ward where the old timer, Stanley Henry Kunz, Horner candidate for committeeman, who is out also for a congressional nomination, is opposing Ald. Joseph P. Rostenkowski, who has regular Democratic support.

In the 39th ward Ald. Lyman L. Brody, who also is committeeman, is finding the opposition of Joseph P. Corr more serious this year than in 1934. Corr had no patronage to disburse two years ago and the advantage was entirely Brody's, but this time Corr carries the Horner banner with state jobs to offer. He also has labor support.

2 Night Run Will Open on Wednesday.

This modern comedy, under the direction of Mrs. Gertrude Dudley Gromer, will provide contrast to the more serious fantasy, "Death Takes a Holiday," the guild's opening play. Produced first by Jed Harris at the Selwyn theater, New York, in 1927, "The Royal Family" was an immediate hit.

BOYS' CLUB LISTS NEW MUSIC, ART, STAGE ACTIVITIES

Lincoln Park Branch Maps Program.

Plans were completed last week at the Lincoln Park branch of the Chicago Boys' club, 1725 Orchard street, for what was said to be the most extensive dramatic, music and art program ever sponsored by the north and northwest side club headquarters.

Not only will more boys participate, according to Miss Vera M. Sones, club manager, but the variety of classes and activities will be greatly increased.

A local committee, assisted by professional talent from the central office of the Chicago Boys' clubs, 120 South La Salle street, has been placed in charge of the Lincoln Park branch program.

Members of Committee.

This committee is composed of Walter Alston, 844 Grace street; Howard Tooley, 411 South Wabash avenue; Sol Zimberoff, 3259 West Evergreen street; Jack Swartz, 100 East Division street; Edwin Lowell, 1207 Astor street; George Biggar, 1230 West Washington boulevard; Melvin Lartz, 1723 Orchard street, and Roscoe Thayer, 4042 North Kenneth avenue.

Operettas, pageants, plays, minstrel shows, comedies, burlesques and concerts are among mass productions planned to give a maximum number of north and northwest side boys and girls an opportunity to take part.

"We plan to give every boy and girl a chance to express himself or herself," said Mrs. Tooley, who will direct the program. "I believe youngsters today have a greater potential talent than previous generations because they are keyed up to creation more through motion pictures and the radio."

Large Bands Anticipated.

Music will vie with drama for interest in the program. According to Miss Sones, the Lincoln Park branch anticipates the time when it will have more than 200 boys in one or another of its bands.

"Give a boy a bass horn, a cornet or a saxophone, and it will help to make a man out of him," she said. "Band playing will afford him a safety valve. It holds him strictly to his task, disciplines him, gives him self-assurance, teaches him team play and gives him a sense of having part in something big."

TWO CLUBS JOIN FOR CARD PARTY THIS AFTERNOON

The Ever Ready and Inter Nos clubs, whose members are residents of Logan Square and Avondale, organized for charitable and educational purposes, will hold a card party this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the clubrooms of the Illinois Club for Catholic Women, 111 East Pearson street. There also will be a tour of the clubrooms, including a visit to the new chapel, a donation of Francis J. Lewis. Miss Agnes Schaefer is chairman and is assisted by the following co-chairmen: Mrs. Marie Shanahan, Mrs. Walter Litzka, and Mrs. F. J. Tomczak. Mrs. T. S. Schaefer is secretary.

WPA SYMPHONY TO PLAY IN MAINE TOWNSHIP HIGH

75 Musicians to Appear Wednesday Night.

Max Bendix, former concert master of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will direct the seventy-five piece Federal Symphony orchestra when it appears in concert at the Maine Township High school, Dempster and Potter roads, Des Plaines, Wednesday evening.

MAX BENDIX.

Members of the orchestra, a WPA project, were selected from more than 1,000 unemployed musicians. The group has practiced with Bendix for five hours each day since November. During the last few weeks it has given concerts at Austin, Roosevelt, Hyde Park, La Grange, and Proviso High schools.

Came Here in 1890.

Mr. Bendix as early as 1885 served as concert master under Frank Vander Stucken and Anton Seill. When Theodore Thomas was invited to come to Chicago in 1890 to organize the Chicago Symphony orchestra he brought young Bendix with him as concert master and assistant conductor, a position he held for five years.

Following this Bendix became concert master of the Metropolitan opera and the Hammerstein Grand opera. Later he appeared as conductor at the St. Louis fair in 1904 and at the San Francisco exposition in 1915.

School Chorus to Sing.

During the intermission of the concert the Maine Township High school festival chorus of more than 200 voices directed by A. M. Harley will sing two selections, "By the Sea," by Schubert, and "Roll, Jordan, Roll," by Cain.

The concert is sponsored by the Boosters' club, the Maine Parents' council, and schools of the township.

NORTHWEST SIDE WOMEN ASSIST BENEFIT DANCE

Ten northwest side women are heading committees for the annual dinner-dance of the Chicago branch of the National Home for Jewish Children to be held tonight in the Grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman. Mrs. Harry J. Iverson is president of the Chicago division.

Mrs. Fannie Lorber of Denver, Colo., national president of the organization, will be a special guest. Judge Samuel Heller will preside. An added feature of the dinner-dance will be the celebration by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Baumstark, 2950 Cortland street, of their silver wedding anniversary.

Proceeds will go toward the maintenance of a home in Denver for Jewish children who are subject to tuberculosis. Northwest side women working on the arrangements are Mrs. Martin Wolf and Mrs. Jack Schwerdlin, co-chairman of the committee on dinner arrangements; Mrs. Nathan Gilbert and Mrs. Sam Trachtenberg, co-chairmen of the ticket committee; Mrs. Marie Kaplovitz, chairman of the ways and means committee; Mrs. Human Roth, Mrs. Albert Slutzker, and Mrs. Philip Bell, co-chairmen of the program committee, and Mrs. Max Gilbert, financial secretary.

HUMAN SLANTS ON RADIO STARS IN THE STUDIOS

Glimpses That Don't Get Into Microphone.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Wandering around the studio a radio reporter gets a lot of slants on the stars that the microphone misses altogether.

Take Nelson Eddy, for example. Catch him between his turns at a rehersal and he will tell you he doesn't mind being pestered by the ladies—not at all, so long as they don't endanger his life. . . . "Yes, I've done about everything on a newspaper—including a year on the copy desk," he explains, "on the Philadelphia Bulletin that was." . . . Eddy clenches his fists as he sings a rousing passage and while he's resting he entertains the musicians with a demonstration of his skill at sword swallowing. . . . He uses a baton Bill Daly tossed aside to make a sword.

Sitting with Margaret Speaks in the control room I learned from her that she enjoys flying. . . . That her chief interest is her 8 year old son. . . . She tells you her husband's name but asks you not to print it because he is in business and doesn't like to see his name in print.

Beery No Party Goer.

Then there's Wallace Beery who moves over to another corner of the studio when girls ask him for autographs . . . and fails to appear at a party afterwards in his honor, just because he doesn't like parties. . . . George Olsen and Ethel Shutta, always pleasant and smiling, even when dead tired . . . and excited over the prospect of going to California for the spring and summer.

Dropping in on Lum and Abner [Chet Lauck and Tuffy Goff, respectively] the night they broadcast the Pine Ridge prize fight, we found them in tuxedos ready to go to the Ted Lewis opening at the Morrison [which turned out to be a very entertaining evening]. Chet was flashing a maroon bow tie and carnation. Tuffy dapper as usual. And their young wives looked on—perhaps a bit impatient to be on the way when the boys stopped to argue over the merits, or lack thereof, of NBC's sound effects department.

Then there's Ralph Ginsburgh, positively boyish in his enthusiasm. Always eager to play a favorite number for a guest. Shows a great deal of pride in his ensemble—and justifiably so. On our last visit there my partner remarked: "He's as nice as his music." Ginsburgh says nice things about other people in radio—about Vivian Della Chiesa, with whom he worked for many weeks, for example. . . . Vivian is a buoyant, vibrant youngster who does everything with a flourish. . . . Magda Neeld, Jack Hylton's soprano, was rather shy when she arrived in Chicago but seems to be getting over it. . . . Billy Mills, the conductor, is fat and jolly. Nothing seems to disturb or upset him. Everybody about him may be having the jitters, but Billy calmly lights a cigaret and sits down. . . . Pianist Howard Neumiller always conveys the impression, even when he is about to go on the air, that he has nothing to do—that he is done for the day and just killing time.

O'Malley Full of Wit.

Pat O'Malley is full of sallies and funny stories while standing around awaiting his turn at the microphone. . . . Effie Atherton appears blase. . . . Alec Templeton's agile mind keeps him occupied. The blind lad may often be seen chatting at a table with a new found friend. He much prefers conversation to food or drink. . . . Harold Stokes likes to make the rounds of studios and offices telling stories and hearing them told when he finds time. . . . Though not many entertainers enjoy watching their competitors at work, Cyril Pitts is an exception . . . you may often see him watching a rehersal.

Fibber McGee and Molly, that is Jim and Marian Jordan, seem to get a lot of kick out of doing their stuff. Bruce Kamman, who directs the Fibber show, raises his 250 weight and lowers it again to his chair in the control room about a hundred times in the course of the broadcast. Seems to ease his nervous energy.

Dowling, Dooley, and Goodman.

Eddie Dowling is more nervous before going on the air than the night he opens one of his shows on Broadway. He enjoys chatting with reporters and is full of stories about celebrities of the stage and in public life. He has some pips about the late Huey Long. . . . Ray Dooley, his baby-talk heckler, sits on the floor between turns. She is tiny and it doesn't seem like she could possibly be the mother of a grown son who is a local reporter. . . . Bespectacled Benny Goodman, the swing swami, who turns out torrid music for the Dowling revue, looks exceedingly earnest during rehersal respite his polo shirt and slacks. . . . Flashing eyed, black haired Helen Ward, his torch balladeer, sits unobtrusively on the sidelines after doing her piece.

Jack Hylton never hogs the spotlight as many another band leader does. . . . In fact, he permits Clive Erard to pose as Hylton and announce himself as such on many of his air programs. I don't think it fools many persons though. . . . Rico Marchelli, Charles Previn, and William Daly would make Leopold Stokowsky green with envy. They toss their arms and go through a lot of gymnastics in leading their orchestras. . . . Rudy Vallee gets hot occasionally while brandishing the baton but when he turns to the microphone to do some talking he puts on a pair of spectacles and looks mild mannered enough.

Baggiore Is Dramatic.

Attillio Baggiore's microphone appearances are freighted with drama. Audiences always get a kick out of his microphone address, or shall we say as they do in golf, stance? . . . Horace Heidt, tall, straight and good looking, always appears to have the situation well in hand. He has plenty of assurance, but its the pleasant, friendly kind. . . . Jerry Bowne, his singing trumpeter, has a jack in the box air about him—just ready to pop out at any minute. His whole crew gives the impression of enjoying their work. . . . That's true of the Waring troupe, too. . . . Fred, himself, is an exceedingly informal, old-suite type of person. He has a genius for remembering faces, and what is more difficult, names.

W. Z. Nourse on Spring.

William Zeigler Nourse will present a talk on "When Spring Comes to Chicago" over W-G-N at 1 o'clock today in a program sponsored by the Garden club of Illinois.

"BEHIND THE CAMERA LINES"

KAY KYSER ON W-G-N TRIANON HOUR SATURDAY

Virginia Sims, Art Wright with Orchestra.

Kay Kyser and his versatile orchestra will open a limited engagement over W-G-N-MBS from the Trianon ballroom next Saturday evening. Kay's crew will take over the regular broadcast period at 11:15 nightly except Mondays, and at 5:20 on Sundays.

Returning with the popular maestro will be all the singing stars who first attracted nation-wide attention over W-G-N from the Blackhawk last season. Pretty Virginia Sims, Arthur Wright, Sully Mason, Mern "Isch Kabbible" Bogue, Bill Stoker, and the Kyser Singing ensemble will be starred in his broadcasts.

The idea of singing the titles of the songs originated with Kyser several years ago on the west coast. Applauded by listeners who enjoyed the variety occassioned by his lack of announcements and continuity of music, Kyser brought the idea east.

Since the conclusion of his Chicago engagement Kay has been featured at the Chatterbox in the Hotel William Penn in Pittsburgh, and from which spot he has been broadcasting over the Mutual Broadcasting system to W-G-N audiences.

STORY OF KOCH ON 'TITANS OF SCIENCE' TODAY

A tragedy of pushing scientific research too fast in order to gratify national pride will be related in the University Broadcasting council's "Titans of Science" series at 3:15 p. m. today over W-G-N and Mutual system when the life and work of Robert Koch is dramatized.

Robert Koch was a German physician whose work first gave definite proof of germs being the cause of disease. The national rivalry which existed in Germany against the French at the time led other German physicians to consider one of Koch's experiments on tuberculosis antitoxin as complete and they injected a number of their patients with it before Koch had completed his tests. The result was the tragic death of the patients.

ELSON TO REPORT GOLDEN GLOVES FROM NEW YORK

When the Chicago team of Golden Gloves boxers squares off against the champions of New York in Madison Square Garden tomorrow, W-G-N and the Mutual System will present a broadcast of the championship bouts beginning at 10:30 p. m. and continuing until the last punch is thrown. Bob Elson, W-G-N's sports announcer, is on his way to New York to broadcast the bouts with Dave Driscoll, WOR and Mutual network announcer, to assist him.

Elson has just returned from the west coast where he visited both the White Sox and Cubs in their training camps and watched the teams in the three games they played. While in the ball camps Bob gathered material which he will use on his daily baseball broadcasts during the summer.

Jimmy Fleming, who has been filling Elson's post on the Sports Reviews will continue until Elson's return from the east.

Charles Previn will lead the orchestra in Mari's "Czardas," and "Puck," by Greig.

FRED ALLEN WRITES

Dear Larry: The Hungarian song that causes suicides has invaded America. Peter Van Steeden, "Town Hall Tonight" maestro, is betting it's just a European version of "The Music Goes Round and Around." . . . Strange that some ingenious Park avenue matron, spurred by the elevator tieup, hasn't crossed her Maltese with a pigeon. Then she could put out the cat by merely tossing her off the penthouse roof. . . . Many a politician's derby is living on the fat of the land. . . . Portland says: "I don't see how people can get things so mixed up. It isn't March that comes in like a lion. It's an M-G-M picture." Cordially,

FRED ALLEN.

ALEC TEMPLETON GUEST ARTIST ON MARDI GRAS

Templeton, one of the wonders of the music world, will present two of his famous "Impressions" series, "A French Cabaret Girl," and the "Royal Conservatory of Music of London." He also will offer his version of "Handel's Oratorio" and perform his stunt of combining four tunes together in one selection, and he will play the beautiful "Reflections on the Water."

Bob Hannon will do a special arrangement of the old favorite "I'll Follow My Secret Heart," from Noel Coward's "Conversation Piece."

The quintet from the orchestra composed of Theodore Yeschke, flutist; Ollie Thomas, clarinetist; Gilbert Boerema, oboe; John Schon, bassoon, and P. Dilecce, French horn, will play the "Harmonica Player."

Bushman and Katherine Krug, stars of the "Movie Personalities" program heard over W-G-N and the Mutual network daily except Sunday at 11:30 a. m., will present a dramatized preview of the picture "Rose Marie" on Wednesday, and "These Three" on Friday. On other days they will dispense gossip of Hollywood, and biographies of Jeanette McDonald, Nelson Eddy, and Merle Oberon.

The "Movie Personalities" personalities recently conducted a poll to find out the favorite stars and pictures among the listeners, and Shirley Temple, Jeanette MacDonald, and Irene Dunne topped the feminine stars, and Clark Gable, Robert Taylor, and Franchot Tone led the men. The two pictures that met with the widest acclaim were "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "Magnificent Obsession."

Judy and Her Jesters, popular young rhythm trio, will be featured on the Friendly Neighbor's House Party as guest stars this week over W-G-N at 10 a. m. daily.

SUNRISE SERVICE TO HAIL EASTER AT SOLDIER FIELD

Record Crowd Expected to Attend Ceremony.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Preparations are nearing completion for the fourth annual Easter sunrise service, to be held at 6:30 a. m., in Soldier field, when the younger groups from all Protestant denominations will greet the Resurrection morning. Arrangements are being made under the leadership of Harry G. Saulnier, chairman of the Greater Chicago Easter sunrise service committee.

Similar services will take place in other principal cities. These were patterned after the Rose Bowl sunrise service at Los Angeles. Four years ago, when Chicagoans assembled on Easter morn in the court of honor of the hall of science, it was the first large gathering to assemble at A Century of Progress, then nearing completion.

Expect Large Crowd.

Last year, despite unfavorable weather, more than 20,000 people met in Soldier field. This year, with Easter falling at a later date, even more may be expected, according to the sponsoring committee. Ministers have been contacted and their congregations visited by "flying squadrons" sent out by the committee in charge of arrangements. The field has been donated by the Park board and all transportation companies have combined to afford every facility in handling the crowd.

Plan New Feature.

A feature of this year's service will be a responsive reading, verse by verse, between a reader, to be announced later, and the congregation, of the story of the Resurrection selected from the gospel narrative. Hymns will be conducted by Prof. Arthur McKee of Northwestern Bible institute, Minneapolis, Minn., with Merrill Dunlop of Chicago, as pianist, and a brass band directed by Richard J. Oliver.

Dr. Walter L. Wilson, founder of the Kansas City Bible institute, will be the principal speaker. The Kansas City institute is patterned after the Moody Bible institute.

Stanley Martin, president of the Chicago Choirmasters' association and organist at St. Mark's Episcopal church, Evanston, will accompany the annual festival lenten service of Episcopal choirs this afternoon at St. James' church, North Wabash avenue and Huron street. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Harold L. Bowen, asociation chaplain and rector of St. Mark's.

Choirs Participating.

Among the choirs will be All Saints', Ravenswood; Church of the Ascension, Chicago; Church of the Atonement, Edgewater; Christ church, Winnetka; Emmanuel, La Grange; Grace, Oak Park; church of the Redeemer, Hyde Park; St. Alban's school, Sycamore; St. Bartholomew's, Englewood; St. Margaret's, Windsor Park; St. Mark's, Evanston; St. Paul's, Kenwood; St. Paul's-by-the-Lake, Rogers Park; Trinity, Highland Park; St. Angarius, and St. Mark's, Chicago.

Cruickshank's Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis will be the canticle settings, Noble's "Go to Dark Gethsemane" the offertorium, and in Gounod's motet, "Gallia," soloists will be Holland Hill of St. Bartholomew's, and Robert Hebden of All Saints, Ravenswood. Five hundred men and boys will participate in the massed choirs.

Prefacing the national convention of the Baptist Young People's union, F. L. Jensen, director of Christian education for Chicago Baptists, has designated next Sunday as Convention Sunday when all ministers will discuss the topic "I Am the Way," organization's motto.

Rabbi Samuel Schwartz of Washington Boulevard temple, 25 North Karlov avenue, announces that as a feature of the current activity "Go to Temple Month," Rabbi Samuel Volkman of B'nai Jehoshua congregation will preach Friday evening at B'nai Abraham Zion congregation.

The Rev. John S. Higgins, rector of the Episcopal church of the Advent, 2900 Logan boulevard, has invited the young people's groups of St. Ann's, St. Stephen's and St. Peter's Episcopal churches to attend the service this evening which will be conducted by the Advent chapter of Gamma Kappa Delta. The Rev. John B. Hubbard, of St. Mary's, Park Ridge, will preach the sermon.

Beth Israel Sisterhood Group Meets Tomorrow

The religious problems group of the Sisterhood of Temple Beth Israel of Albany Park will meet tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Dr. and Mrs. B. M. Gasul, 4505 Manor avenue. Rabbi S. Felix Mendelsohn is leader of the group.

The minuet will be danced again as a part of the musical melange to be presented by the Albany Park Woman's club as a home talent program tomorrow afternoon at the River park fieldhouse, 5100 North Francisco avenue. Members of the cast are (from left to right) Mrs. Herbert E. Waterman, Mrs. Curt A. Mundstock, and Mrs. Edward B. Churchill.

ARMY BOMBARDS ICE JAMS TO HALT POLISH FLOODS

Villagers Are Hard Hit by Spring Thaw.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW.—[By Mail.]—Spring arrived with Lent in Poland this year and the ice is already floating down the Wisla, which flows northwest through Poland into the Baltic. In the lower reaches the river is confined by enormous levees and ice jams seldom cause damage, but above Warsaw the countryside is unprotected and dangerous jams are fought by batallions of artillery who bombard the ice with high explosive shells to prevent floods.

At Solcem and Sandomierz the artillery bombarded for two days before the ice released the water which carried down past Warsaw where thousands crowded the bridges to watch huge floes splitting on the granite piers and making the bridges tremble with their impact.

In the eastern part of the country peasants were unable to collect their hay stacked on hummocks in the swamps of Polesia. Live stock died and the government assigned $20,000 to help hard hit villages. Collections were begun throughout Poland, but the peasant's fight for existence is an old story.

Warsaw today is rapidly becoming a beautiful city. The former royal castle, now the residence of the president, is being renovated and is now one of the most attractive buildings in the city. Together with other buildings and monuments it is floodlighted on holidays and when Warsaw is the host to some distinguished visitors. Work is also progressing on the old palace of Count Bruhl on Pilsudski square now occupied by the foreign office.

The renovation should have been completed last autumn but a careless worker dropped a cigaret in a pile of shavings in the attic and by the time the fire department had finished its work the building was flooded and the work of decorating the rooms had to be done over again.

Knowledge of English is spreading rapidly in Poland and the chief cause of its popularity is the talkies, according to English teachers. When the American talkies are run in the Polish movies a Polish translation of the more important part of the dialog is shown at the bottom of the film. But often a large section of the audience laughs at jokes and wisecracks which either cannot be translated or which are not flashed on the screen, and this shows that that many Poles have acquired a working knowledge of English during the past few years.

The American Methodist Episcopal church South, whose activities in Poland were recently threatened by the Polish government, which ordered them to liquidate their organization, operates the largest English school in Poland with 700 pupils and 15,000 graduates in Warsaw. The energetic action of the American secretary of state resulted in the liquidation order being withdrawn. A number of municipal officials who were planning a private rakeoff through administering and liquidating $400,000 worth of Methodist property have been threatened with the loss of their jobs.

The newspapers are publishing pages of news concerning the bill to abolish kosher slaughter methods and the strong fight being made by the Jews to retain the meat monopoly in Poland. The anti-kosher bill even overshadows the Polish foreign policy. The famine relief fund is not even mentioned.

An investigation conducted by the Kurjer Warszawski has revealed that Poland's depression has hit the university student hard. The students recently called a one day strike to protest the high tuition fees of the universities, which now approximate $60, a large sum for Poland. The average student's monthly income, according to the paper, consists of $2 in cash, $4 in food and $6 obtained fro moutside work, whereas expenditures per month come to $21 if room, food, books and miscellaneous expenses, laundry and tuition are considered. It is an unpleasant fact, continues the paper, that many students go hungry and cannot purchase necessary books and meet their tuition fees. The student demand fees be decreased 35 per cent.

The investigator regrets the false pride of the European university student prevents him from accepting work which the American student is glad to accomplish to obtain money for his studies. Since the average student cannot expect additional assistance from home and reduction of fees will only partly solve his problem, the paper urges the Polish student to forget his pride and find a job, even if it is menial work, and assist himself instead of campaigning for government help.

Poland's roads, which are the despair of motorists, are being slowly improved in the vicinity of Warsaw. Because of the large horsedrawn trafic Polish engineers are experimenting with roadbeds and they have found an original combination which promises to be both economical and durable.

Upon the roadbed surface they lay a heavy foundation of heavy gravel mixed with concrete. When this has hardened, a two inch layer of fine sand is spread over the rolled surface and upon this octagonal 12-inch granite or cement blocks are laid, which are bound together with tar. Considerable manual labor is required, but labor is cheap in Poland and besides the government is anxious to create more working days.

Poland's large expenditures on her army have handicapped the road building program. At present the bad roads are actually considered a part of the country's defense and while Germany has machine guns mounted on motorcycles Poland has them mounted on buckboards drawn by a team of cavalry horses which are able to negotiate bad roads with light loads quickly.

NEW FACING WILL CHANGE HOME AT MODERATE COST

Brick, Shingles, Stucco Equally Effective.

Are you interested in giving your bathroom a change of face this year? Mrs. Bargelt offers a new booklet, "New Beauty for the Old Bath." It is 3 cents by mail and 2 cents at Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

It is news these days as 1936 moves into action, when houses begin to appear in handsome new overcoats; overcoats of brick or stone, siding, shingles, or matched boards, stucco or concrete. For a long time now our already built homes have had to rest content with their old overcoats, no matter how loudly their existing walls may have been demanding care and repair. But no more! Not if we believe in the signs of returning home building and remodeling all around us!

In both of the homes shown today the new overcoat has been tailored to fit in deep red shades of brick veneer.

Handsomer or Stronger.

New overcoats are usually given to homes for two reasons. One reason is to add new beauty to a structure which is sound and decidedly worth while, but which has lost its appearance of youth and modernity. Sometimes the new garment will be a coat or two of good paint. But whether of paint, masonry, wood, or composition material, the fresh coat can be relied on to recapture the vanishing youth of a house.

Again the old walls may need more than beauty added to them. They may have been so lightly built that they form a scant protection against the elements. When an existing house is sorely in need of weatherproofing, a new overcoat, applied directly on the existing walls, is an excellent remedy for its too light, drafty, vibrating walls, and hard to heat interior spaces.

Need Changes for Brick.

In most cases the frame of the house, unless the construction is exceptionally poor, will carry the weight of shingles, siding, or stucco. With brick veneer, the foundations usually have to be broadened to carry the extra weight.

In Judge Cecil C. Smith's home, in Beverly Hills, there were a number of both interior and exterior changes besides the new overcoat. The old front porch was torn off and the living room enlarged by removing the former wall between porch and living room. A new ornamental iron stairway was given to the front entrance, and a new roof of slate colored composition shingles laid.

In the kitchen, the wall next to the butler's pantry was removed, and the space was used for built-in cupboards. The wainscoting in the kitchen is now of ivory tile, and the walls above it are covered with washable paper. There is new inlaid linoleum on the floor.

Basement for Recreation.

The living room walls and woodwork are now painted a cream white, with a mulberry shade of carpeting on the floor. The dining room floor is also carpeted. It has painted white woodwork.

The bathrooms were modernized with new fixtures and decorations. The basement has been changed into an interesting and useful area. There is a large bar at one end of the long recreation room. At the other end is a combination ping-pong and pool table. There is a handsome red and green composition tile floor, and lounging chairs and davenports add to the comfort of the room. The house is now heated by an effortless, fully automatic, oil fueled furnace.

An Inexpensive Veneer.

In the recently modernized home of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Peary in Maywood, a one inch, reinforced brick veneer with steel backing was used. Rubblestone was employed in the gable. The bricks are variegated in tone, a commingling of tans and browns intermingled with deep reds.

This type of brick veneer is less expensive than the conventional type of brick veneer. The bricks are of the same material as regular bricks, and they may be smooth or rough textured. Each brick is light, weighing only about one-fifth as much as a regular brick. In applying this veneer the builder first covers the wall with waterproof papers and then a metal backing is attached to surface. Then mortar is applied to the steel backing and paper. This mortar embeds the steel, covers the back of brick, and forms the joints between the brick. These bricks are slotted on their backs to receive metal supports and mortar which is used in laying them up.

Next week will be shown a modernized home in Glen Ellyn which was given new walls of flagstone.

Mrs. Bargelt will speak over W-G-N next Wednesday at 2:15 p. m.

'SAVE LAWN' DRIVE BACKED BY KIWANIS HEAD TO SAVE PARKS

Stimulus for the "Save Your Lawn" campaign recently launched by the Chicago Park district and a number of civic organizations, was created in a resolution submitted before a recent meeting of all Chicago Kiwanis clubs, by Marion G. Kudlick, president of the Northwest Town Kiwanis club. Mr. Kudlick, who is a candidate for clerk of the Municipal court, proposed the resolution to combat what he said was a recently noticed tendency to disregard signs posted to protect new growths of grass in the parks. All Kiwanis clubs are being urged to support the compaign.

THE pick of the season's crop is at your dealer's now. Big luscious beauties, golden as Florida sunshine, heavy with juice, matchless in flavor yet priced so low the most modest budget can afford them.

Colds will vanish, health improve, energy revive. For grapefruit has a definite alkaline effect on the system. It helps to counteract the acid-forming tendencies of other foods, strengthen resistance. Absolutely essential in a reducing diet when there is extra danger of acidity.

Buy Florida Grapefruit Today! And always, when you're buying grapefruit, buy Floridas. They're a choicer variety with that wonderful richness of flavor and abundance of juice characteristic of all Florida citrus fruits. They're fresher, too, for they can reach you faster. 1 cup sugar
5 tablespoons cornstarch
½ teaspoon salt
Grated rind 1 lemon
1¼ cups boiling water
3 eggs
½ tablespoon butter
¾ cup Florida grapefruit juice
¼ cup lemon juice
Baked pie shell.

Mix sugar, cornstarch, salt and grated rind in top of double boiler; add boiling water gradually and cook over fire, stirring constantly until thickened. Place over hot water and cook ten minutes longer. Separate eggs, saving whites for meringue. Beat yolks slightly, add to mixture and cook 1 minute. Remove from fire and add butter, grapefruit and lemon juice. Cool, and turn into a baked crust. Cover with meringue made of 3 egg whites beaten until frothy, sprinkled with ½ teaspoon baking powder, and then beaten stiff, cut and fold 6 tablespoons sugar into whites. Brown slightly under oven broiler 1 minute.

FLORIDA GRAPEFRUIT À LA GRILLE
Cut each Florida grapefruit in half, core and remove the seeds. Sprinkle one tablespoon brown sugar and a little cinnamon over the top of each half. Place three cherries in the center and add a little of the juice. Preheat the oven broiler for about ten minutes. Place grapefruit under the flame for seven to ten minutes. The sugar will melt and spread to give the grapefruit a lovely browned surface and a delightful new flavor.

THE LIGHTS FLASHED ON AGAIN. MRS. VAN DE VAN WAS HYSTERICAL. "MY NECKLACE!" SHE MOANED. "AS THE LIGHTS WENT OUT, SOMEONE STOLE IT." "I'LL TAKE CHARGE HERE," ASSERTED CAPT. CAROLY. "ONE OF US IS GUILTY!" MISS DEERING, GEORGE SANFORD AND WINNIE STOOD NEARBY IN AN AWED GROUP. "I ASSUME NO ONE LEFT THIS ROOM," CONTINUED THE CAPT.. "ONE OF OUR PARTY LEFT," SAID SANFORD. HE LEERED AT WINNIE. "DON DICKSON SNEAKED OUT!" WINNIE'S HEART SANK. WAS DON DICKSON A THIEF? CAPT. CAROLY LED THE WAY TO DON'S STATEROOM. IT WAS EMPTY! "SEARCH THE BOAT!" ROARED CAROLY. THE CROWD DISPERSED. HEARTSICK, WINNIE SOUGHT HER STATEROOM. PASSING SANFORD'S CABIN, THE OPEN DOOR REVEALED SANFORD HANDCUFFED TO DICKSON. "I'M A DETECTIVE," DON EXPLAINED. WINNIE EXPRESSED HER SUSPICIONS OF MISS DEERING. "MISS DEERING IS MY WIFE," HE ADMITTED. . . . LATER, CAPT. CAROLY CONSOLED WINNIE. HE ASKED PERMISSION TO CALL. DELIGHTED, WINNIE ASKED, "WHEN WILL YOU CALL?" "AFTER MY SCHEDULED WORLD CRUISE," SAID CAROLY. "I'LL SEE YOU IN ABOUT A YEAR."

THE END.

WELL, DON SURE HAS FALLEN HARD FOR LITTLE SISTER SUSIE!
DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES PREVENT YOU FROM STEPPING OUT
YOUNG people in their teens and early twenties are very likely to be plagued by skin blemishes.
At this time, after the beginning of adolescence—from about 13 to 25 years of age, or even longer—important glands develop and final growth takes place. This causes changes throughout the system. The skin, especially, becomes highly sensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin, causing unsightly pimples to break out.
Many doctors prescribe Fleischmann's fresh Yeast in treating adolescent pimples. It clears these skin irritants out of the blood. Then the pimples disappear!
Eat Fleischmann's Yeast regularly—three cakes a day, before meals. Eat it plain, or in a little water until your skin is clear. Start today!

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Turkey Style Parade

WITH the Bourbon Red turkey gobblers holding a sort of spring style parade, guinea hens converting the roof of the barn into a sunbathing spot, and Binks, the fox terrier, staging his first woodchuck digging contest, the Tribune Experimental farm this week has shown many signs or reacting to the subtle influences of spring. The song sparrows are singing around the pond on the Wheaton farm even though there is plenty of ice on it, and the swans are starting to build nests.

If the Bourbon Red gobblers aren't tired of just posing and strutting these days we're surprised. The other day we saw the vain gobblers stand or slowly walk back and forth, their tails spread and wings outstretched to catch every ray of sunshine, as if they were demonstrating what the "well dressed turkey" will wear this spring. And within several feet of them were some guinea hens apparently looking on this demonstration of fine feathers with an air of envy.

A pair of hens surprised us when we were standing in the barnyard by taking to wing and landing on the roof of the barn. After sizing up the situation for the moment they relaxed, settled down on the shingles and decided to take a sunbath above the noise and confusion of the poultry yard.

Clean Hog House.

At the Yorkville farm we found the boys busy cleaning out the hog house because the plan is to construct a number of individual pens in the house for sows and their litters of little porkers. But we didn't tarry long around the barnyard, even though Binks was putting on quite a show playing a game with six of the white face steers lined up at the water tanks. We hiked for the river and the spring in the lower woods to see the only green on the farm . . . the new crop of watercress growing in the spring and the creek leading out of it.

Even though there is a March chill in the air and the landscape is colorless it's beautiful around the spring these days because the song sparrows serenade you, and the vivid green of the 1936 crop of watercress is a winding thread of color between the dark browns of dead vegetation.

Just one plant besides the watercress has nerve enough to come out of the ground as well as actually grow flowers this early in the year. That is the lowly skunk cabbage. We sloshed around in the soft mud to see if these plants were above the ground. Three had reared their heads about four inches out of the wet earth, so the picture of early March is complete on the Yorkville farm.

Maple Grove in Action.

While we were sitting on the sunshiny hillsides in the woods, watching Binks make the dirt fly as he dug at a woodchuck den, and talking with the boys about the kind of crops to be planted on the Yorkville farm and the way the Herefords were putting on weight, Louis Thurow mentioned the fact that a neighbor was "cooking" maple sirup. So away we went to the Hollenback farm just a short distance from the experimental farm to see a maple grove in action.

After a short drive, and a hike through a beautiful hard maple grove, we found the sirup gang at work. The grove presented a beautiful picture with the sunlight streaming through the tall trees, about 480 of them tapped and decorated with buckets to collect the sweet sap . . . the team hauling the tank wagon collecting the sap . . . the cooking house with its numerous flat pans full of the boiling hot liquid from which rose a cloud of fragrant, sweet smelling steam . . . and the finished rich brown sirup, which we sampled while still warm. . . . To make this spring picture complete we counted seven robins in the maple grove, all hunting for food beneath the brown leaves which cover the moist ground.

Another Bargain Sale

In 1934 we sold nearly 50,000 acres of land for dairy farms, raising small grains, root crops, garden truck, small fruits. Many could not buy then, so another sale will be held. Now we offer 40,000 acres of good land, 40 acres average $150 each. Same soil and quality land hundreds of farmers paid $1,200 for 40 acres before the depression. Come to the fertile valley of the pretty rivers "Chippewa" and "Flambeau." Here be independent in a farm home. Fish, hunt, trap in the lakes, rivers, forests. Last chance to buy this land at bargain prices. Deal with big responsible company who established hundreds of families here during past 20 years. Come where you'll find good roads, schools, churches, hustling towns. Not a backwoods country. Good neighbors. Enjoy life here. Thousands vacation here where they find charming scenery. Lovely locations on rivers and lakes for summer homes or for cabins. Places for hunting and fishing clubs. These lands border the Chequamegon National Forest. Write for literature and pictures.

How Do They Borrow?

Many people borrow on their automobiles. More of them put up stocks and bonds. But most people borrow simply on character — that is their own signature plus the signatures of two friends. When the borrower receives his money a bank account is opened in this bank. He deposits a fixed sum each month, so the money is on hand to pay off the loan when it comes due. This plan turns borrowers into savers, helps people to get ahead in the world. That is one reason why thousands of Chicagoans endorse and recommend the lending policy of this unusual bank.

Why Do They Borrow?

For Every Good Reason Under the Sun, Here Are Just a Few of Them:

- TO PAY TAXES
- TO IMPROVE HOME
- TO MOVE FAMILY
- TO GROUP DEBTS
- TO PAY DOCTOR BILLS
- TO ASSIST PARENTS
- TO PAY FOR INSURANCE
- TO BUY A HOME
- TO BUY A HORSE
- TO PAY UNDERTAKER
- TO BUY ROOMING HOUSE
- TO PAY OFF MORTGAGE
- TO DISCOUNT BILLS
- TO PAY ATTORNEYS
- TO PAY TUITION
- TO PAY UNION DUES
- TO FURNISH HOME
- TO PAY CHURCH
- TO BUY TROUSSEAU
- TO BUY CLOTHES
- TO ASSIST RELATIVES
- TO MODERNIZE STORE
- TO INSTALL PLUMBING
- TO BUY OUT PARTNER
- TO BUY SECURITIES
- TO REPAIR AUTOMOBILE
- TO PAINT HOUSE
- TO VISIT RELATIVES

How Much Do They Borrow?

Any amount required: $50.00, $250.00, $500.00, $1,000.00, $5,000.00, or more.

What Does It Cost to Borrow?

These costs and terms on one year co-maker loans speak for themselves. If you care to put up banking collateral the costs are even lower.

Do They Pay Back?

We try never to lend a person more than he can reasonably be expected to repay. Our terms are generous, our rates are low and our method of dealing with people is fair and liberal. As a result in practically every case, borrowers are able to repay us Johnny-on-the-spot.

A Low Cost Auto Financing Plan

Why make a good deal on a car, new or used, only to be penalized by high financing charges?
We have broken down the barriers of tradition and have ushered in a new era of sensible rates for cars bought on time payments. These new rates apply on used car sales, new car sales, or a loan on your present car.
No mystery charges, no extra fees. You simply make a reasonable down payment when you buy, and we finance the balance. Here are typical examples of the low cost under our plan:

Balance to be financed.	Total yearly charge.	Total amount of note.	12 monthly deposits.
$100	$12.08	$112.08	$ 9.34
200	19.00	219.00	18.25
300	23.04	323.04	26.92
400	29.00	429.00	35.75
500	35.08	535.08	44.59

Only Fire and Theft Insurance Required.
Buy It Through Your Own Broker and Include the Premium in the Loan.

YOUR CAR IS THE ONLY SECURITY REQUIRED. NO OTHER COLLATERAL—NO CO-SIGNERS. NO WAGE ASSIGNMENTS.

1936 Spring Coats Loose of Silhouette

Not a Snippet of Fur Allowed; Interest Centers in the Tricky Sleeves.

By Rhea Seeger.

SPRING COATS without a snippet of fur, tricky of sleeve, loose, casual, and infinitely smart of silhouette are the youngest sort of spring wraps unpacked in years. They are made of soft wools that take to clever details and seaming as easily as do soft, heavy satin or suede silks. Colors are abundant, for coats are part of a telling contrast stunt, as the top layer of a combination that includes the inevitable suit or slim, sheer wool dress, or printed silk dress or suit.

Watch your sleeves, or rather the sleeves of the newest arrivals, for they are the irrepressible mark of a brand new 1936 spring model. They have such amusing details as a buttoned three cornered flap like an envelope half way up to the elbow, straight, outstanding plaits that give a dashing width to narrow shoulders, fine, full flares to the backline, buttons, trimmings of whorls and braids of the fabric itself or a row of buttons marching down the front closing just as close together as buttons can be managed.

Warm Sulphur Yellow Dramatic Accent for Navy.

Colors are refreshingly new and different without being spectacular. Good old navy blue is better than ever, especially when worn with sulphur yellow accessories; with handbag, gloves, and even hat of vivid hunters pink suede; or with accessories of pale dusty pink. It is subtle beyond description with accessories in powder blue or the darker cornflower blue. Gray coats come in every concievable tone of gray from the swanky oxford grays to the sophisticated dove and pearl tones. Again you acquire your distinction with costume accessories of deep blue, deep gold, bright blue, dark, imperial purple, or copper tan.

Plaids and checks are combined with some grand results. Soft flecked tweedy mixtures are going strong for these furless new spring models featuring new sleeves and straight, simple stream lines. They make the best buys, the practical, always-good-to-wear foundation coat of any well planned wardrobe. They are the necessary tops for trim, tailored suits the first coolish days when it is too warm for the fur coat and too chilly for only the suit.

Green Gold and Raspberry Challenge Fashion Experts.

Green gold and raspberry are two spring colors to watch among the many coat collections. Then there is raspberry in a soft grayed tone, greenish gold with a subtle emphasis on the green cast, both sufficiently different and amendabe for some extremely interesting color contrasts with either wool dresses or suits.

Camel's hair coats, without which no wardrobe is complete, are as swanky as in years gone by, and outstanding because of impeccable tailored details, feather weight, large seaming, roomy sleeves, plenty of pockets, high collars, the sash belt to cinch tightly at the waistline, and the vent at the back.

Plainer models stress even a more spartan streamline. They are straight, minus the belt. They have a different position for the double sets of pockets and narrow collar. But the new favorites are the sable toned, the midnight black numbers that are going out with record speed. Next in popularity come the navy blues in the swagger style with rather full but still simple tailored sleeves and a couple of pockets cleverly concealed. These are all lined with a fine, slippery satin. There is no struggling, frantic pushing and pulling if you wear sticky wool suits or dresses.

Plain Sleeves Stress Fur and Fabric.

When the new spring models are furred they become the spectacular affairs they are because of the treatment of the fur. Huge, flattering collars may be of light colored furs—smoky gray on pastel blue or gray wool, for example. Or one may find dramatic cross fox on green-gold wool, or sleek, shiny black against beige or dusty pink. Fine black dress parade coats are flattering because of the frosty loveliness of silver fox. All the fur is used at the collar line. Plain sleeves stress the fabric and fur.

Four models have been sketched, all obtainable in a famous boulevard shop. At the left . . . an effectively checked wool coat called hopscotch plaid. You can have it three shades of gray flecked with white, in brown, and in beige; or there is a knockout model in navy blue and white. The wool mixture is warm and soft without being bulky when worn. The back flare is unusually swanky, and the long length makes this coat particularly good as an all-purpose wrap for any wardrobe. The sleeves are loose and moderately wide.

Center . . . a gold-green wool, rather dress parade coat, with the most flattering of fur collars, a huge affair of cross fox accentuating the green-gold tones of the wool itself. The coat is long. It is made with a smart back flare and lined with a harmonizing silk crêpe to match the color of the wool. This coat can be worn all summer and used for daytime as well as decorative evening wear.

Camel's Hair Comes in Inky Black.

At the upper right . . . the rage of this spring fashion showings . . . an inky black featherweight camel's hair coat. You've all been used to the severely tailored coats of this warm and soft wool with pockets tailored seams, belts, and large collars. This is the newest idea of the travel coat or topcoat to wear over suits. A new length, concealed pockets, unusual sleeves that end snugly at the wrist, and a back flare make it a perfect find and deserving of all the popularity it is earning. It also comes in navy and golden beige shades.

Lower right . . . a raspberry red, soft wool coat buttons circumspectly high around the neck and falls in loose, simple silhouette. Its sleeves boast the new envelope flap with a covered button. The pockets and collar closing are trimmed with a braided motif of the material made into cord. This wrap is lined with harmonizing silk crêpe. Worn over pale gray, dusty pink, powder blue, and almond green wool suits or dresses, it assures you one of the most exciting of spring combines or contrasts.

[For information on any item described in this article call Rhea Seeger, Superior 0100.]

Miss Seeger's column also appears in The Tribune on Monday and on every other day throughout the week.

CHIC SAFEGUARDS AGAINST SPRING BREEZES

Here Are Tips to Do Justice to Spring Hats

Neckline, Coiffure, and Method of Putting on Chapeau Are Important.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

THIS year, girls, resolve that you are not going to have your clothes closet cluttered with hats you can't wear. Resolve that you're going to have the right one, s'help you!

How are you going to get it? Where are you going to get it?

Here's your cue! And take this cue from one of the smartest hat designers in the whole business, Mme. Nicolé, who hats the best of them from Maine to California, including your favorite screen sirens upon whose chapeaux rests more than a little of their box office appeal. Take it from Mme. Nicolé that it's you, your neck, your hairdress, and the way you put a hat on that makes the hat. It's not the material that goes into the hat, the lines of it, nor its trimming. These come after what you do about yourself from your neck up. No, not from the neck up! From the ground up, for that concoction that crowns your head for good or ill is a vital part of the standing silhouette.

Don't choose a hat from a sitting view, you're warned. Stand up and walk around with it. Glance upon yourself suddenly and get the effect. Does it look "in the picture," or like something clinging ridiculously, perhaps, to the top of the picture frame?

But that's not all. If you are going to wear a 1936 spring model chapeau, why raise Reno prospects immediately by wearing it with a 1920 hair style, or '25 or '30, even. Incompatibility, of course, will result, if not incongruity or both.

"Where do all the beautiful hats go?" cries Nicolé. "I make beautiful hats. Others make beautiful hats. But where do you see them, except on the occasional woman?

"Ah, yes, the occasional woman is the answer! She knows how to put her hat on. And that is, more than anything else, what makes the hat a success. Let me show you what you can do to the grandest kind of hat!"

Mme. Nicolé proceeds to illustrate the old southern belle, still seen around in hatted replica, with her hat far back on her head. She shows me Mrs. Bostonesse with her traditional regard for the rigidly conservative, straight line of hat adjustment; Mrs. Somebody Else with the hat "riding the waves"; then, the woman who tilts her hat at a jaunty enough angle but spoils all by pulling the hair out frowsily on the exposed side, or all around the face, for that matter. Then, the identical hat on a well dressed head of hair, put on with care and chic, is represented as infallible evidence that it is the woman, nine times out of ten, and not the hat, that piles up our millinery mistakes.

It must be so! We like the hat when we buy it. We get it home and it doesn't look the same, so that the caution urged for this spring's decorative headpiece is to learn to put the hat on correctly. It's a trick, but quite conquerable. It means adjusting it, not cramming it down. It means getting the right angle for the particular face.

Women invariably report at a millinery establishment or store section that they want a hat to wear with such and such a colored outfit. All right, as far as it goes. But what they should seek, according to our authority is a hat to wear with the particular face and throat, too. In the lines of a hat, and the adjustment thereof, there is infinite opportunity for lengthening the neck."

Consider, for example, the heavy, short-necked woman, Nicolé says, "Squat a small, evenly adjusted toque on her head and she looks further 'jammed down.' But put on a toque high up on one side, sleek the hair back off the temples, give the hair an uplift movement in the back, and you have something infinitely more effective."

Indeed, it is a commendable idea to choose your hat from the base of the throat up, looking to slimming or filling out cheek contours with chapeau aid. There's a powerful beauty secret in the becoming hat. So don't choose it spontaneously. Nicolé calls a hat the external soul of a woman from which countless blessings flow. Study your cheeks. Study the contour of your face, your jawline, the length, the breadth, and thickness of your neck, and make the hat serve to beautify all. And don't, you are petitioned, underestimate the importance of the 1936 hairdress for the 1936 hat.

These remarks are addressed to the more mature group of hat customers. The young ones can wear a tomato can and get away with it. It's the older ones who are up against the becoming hat problem these days. Only for the trim, neatly coiffed heads, set upon a slim neck, are the tricky, cockeyed hat indulgences. And don't try to look too—too young, our wise informant cautions, for then one succeeds only in looking ten years older and silly.

Miss Donnelly's authoritative articles, counseling women in matters of beauty and charm, appear every day in the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune.

PLAID WOOL

Blue and maroon plaid wool makes this clever two piece outfit that is accented with unusual buckles and buttons. These important small accents are of bright red lether.

Slip Covers Must Be Adapted to Decore of Room

SLIP covers—and robins—are sure harbingers of spring. Nothing perks up a room more than crisp, fresh, gayly colored covers for the furniture. Just the knowledge that they can be tubbed makes them attractive after a long winter of hard wear on upholstered couches and chairs.

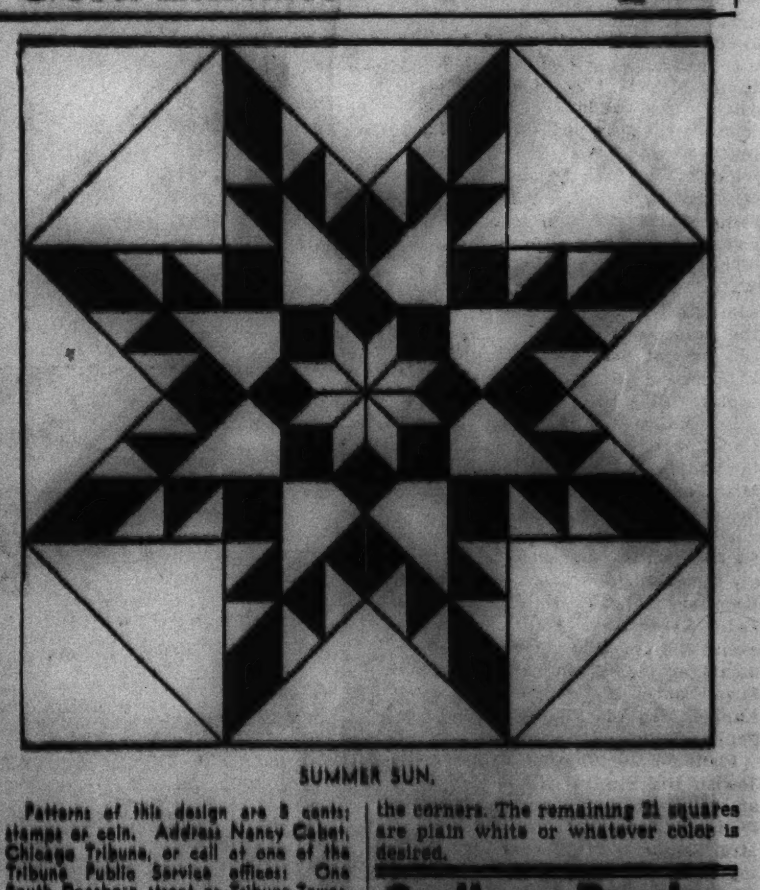
If you have plain toned walls and a broadloom rug on the floor you can go the limit in splashy designs of chintzes, linens, or cretonnes. But if you already have pattern in your draperies plus a definite one in your floor covering go slow about adding more. There are always stripes and plain material with texture interest to employ instead.

Some of the stores are making tempting offers at this time. They will make slip covers for a chair and couch at a certain fixed sum, allowing you to choose from an ample array of materials. Or, if you are clever with a needle, you can make your own. Of the large field of textiles for slip cover use the following are among the most popular: chintz, printed linen, cotton crash, cotton corduroy, sateen, printed and plain flat mohairs, denim, jaspé, and heavy, ribbed piqué.

Cabinet Under Sink Increases Kitchen's Efficiency

THE space under a kitchen sink was wasted space for years. Now all this has changed. Sometimes it is possible to buy or have made a convenient cabinet to install under an existing sink. Or, if the kitchen is in process of modernization, look into what the market offers in the way of sink units with cabinets built under them; roomy, sizable cabinets, with large drawers and cupboard storage space.

Warm Shades of Yellow and Gold Enhance a Novel Quilt



SUMMER SUN.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents; stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

By Nancy Cabot.

THE colors used in this beautiful "Summer Sun" all are the rich warm shades of yellow, orange, and gold, set against a snow white background. There is no interesting history to this beautiful block. It is not older than Methuselah, but it is a most unusual design. The center star, with squares set around it, grows through a series of eight pointed stars to a complete square measuring 19½ inches. Only five pieced blocks are required and they are set together with one pieced block in the center, and each of the four blocks touches the center square at the corners. The remaining 21 squares are plain white or whatever color is desired.

Organized in 1880 when a group of women headed by Mrs. Emma B. Mandle met to sew for the orphans at the Home for the Friendless, the club originally was known as the Baron Hirsch Woman's club. The Winfield sanitarium, the Ruth club, the Home for the Friendless and Working Girls, and the Home for Convalescent Men and Boys are among the institutions which have received aid from the club. The bandage unit at Michael Reese hospital, the occupational therapy department at the Billings Memorial hospital, and its north and south side sewing units are activities of the club, and the Co-Workers' finance scholarships for students in various professions and supply school children with milk and penny lunches. Recently a group of juniors, sons and daughters of members, was formed.

Mrs. Michael Steindler is president of the club, which meets every month at the Standard club. Other officers, besides Miss Frankenstein, are Mrs. Herman Korach, Mrs. Marcus Levi, Mrs. Joseph Ginsberg, vice presidents; Mrs. Max Braun, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Paul Greenstein, treasurer; Mrs. Sam Chapman, financial secretary. Mrs. Ilka R. Hayman is publicity chairman.

Horse Show Will Close Aiken's 1936 Season

Hunter and Polo Pony Event Draws Society from Many Resorts.

AIKEN, S. C. Activities at Aiken are on the increase as the season draws toward a close. It will be officially ended by the Aiken horse show April 1 and 2. The majority of the winter colony here will leave for Washington and points north and west. The hunter and polo pony show, which is the climax of the winter's activities here, attracts not only the local vacationists but visitors from Camden, Augusta, Pinehurst, and other nearby resorts. Many of the colony cottages are also crowded with guests from Virginia, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York.

This show is for local charities. Everybody is expected to pay. No winner gets anything but an inexpensive trophy, though these inconsequential rewards are valued highly.

The first day's showing will be restricted to one open jumping class. This is necessary because there are many hunters and jumpers stabled at Aiken and the entry will be large. Possibly no better showing of class jumpers is seen outside of the Devon Bryn Mawr and Madison Square Garden horse shows than one sees at Aiken, and it is almost completely restricted to amateurs. But these amateurs are the equals or superiors of any of the professionals seen in any other show.

The second day's classes include those for children, best riders under certain ages, hacks, hunters, and polo. The atmosphere prevalent during these two days is a most informal one, though the critical interest is not only keen but informed. Even the children have been educated to form a more or less practical idea of the manners and qualities necessary in a good horse show. The more mature element is capable in most cases of judging the classes.

A most congenial feature of this show is the absence of formality. Gay picnics are continually in evidence during these two days. No one could desire more picturesque surroundings than the Hitchcock woods, where the show is held.

To mention a few of the social and horsey activities that have taken place recently, of course the drag hunting and polo are of daily importance. The point to point three miles over stiff post and rail fences saw seven starters, and Howard Fair riding Mrs. Grace Eustis entry, The Mole, to victory, followed by Capt. D. M. Ivanenko on his own gelding Vauxtor, with Howell H. Howard third on his horse, Mr. Ginge.

One of the most interesting events here this season was the costume roller skating party given by the Fermata girls and the boy's preparatory schools. Not only all the students at these centers of learning, but many of their parents, participated with the result that the numerous competitions were abundantly filled and keenly contested. F. A. M. Tabor, the guiding spirit of the schools, invited different members of the cottage colony to arbitrate each class. The girls were obviously far superior to the boys in almost every event. Most of the winners were those girls who were distinguished riders in the drag or the horse shows. They included the Misses Elizabeth Austin, Barbara Cox, Jane Flaccus, Geraldine Higbie, Mary Stuart Houston, Evelyn Johnson, Louise Owen, Peggy and Phyllis Stevenson, Roberta Johnstone, Dorothy Wagstaff, Ann Foster, Peggy Salvage, Emily Stevenson, Lilly and Carrol Warren, Norah Baulden, Helen Niblack, and Dolly Vonstade.

The Aiken Boys Preparatory school also organized a sports' day which included everything from sprints to relay racing. The entire cottage colony attended.

Dunbar Bostwick sailed on the Europa for Liverpool this week to watch his brother G. H. [Pete] try to ride the winner of the Grand National on his own horse Castle Irwell, while Allan Case, the Toronto racing authority, has been absent most of the last three weeks judging at hunt meetings and horse shows in the south.

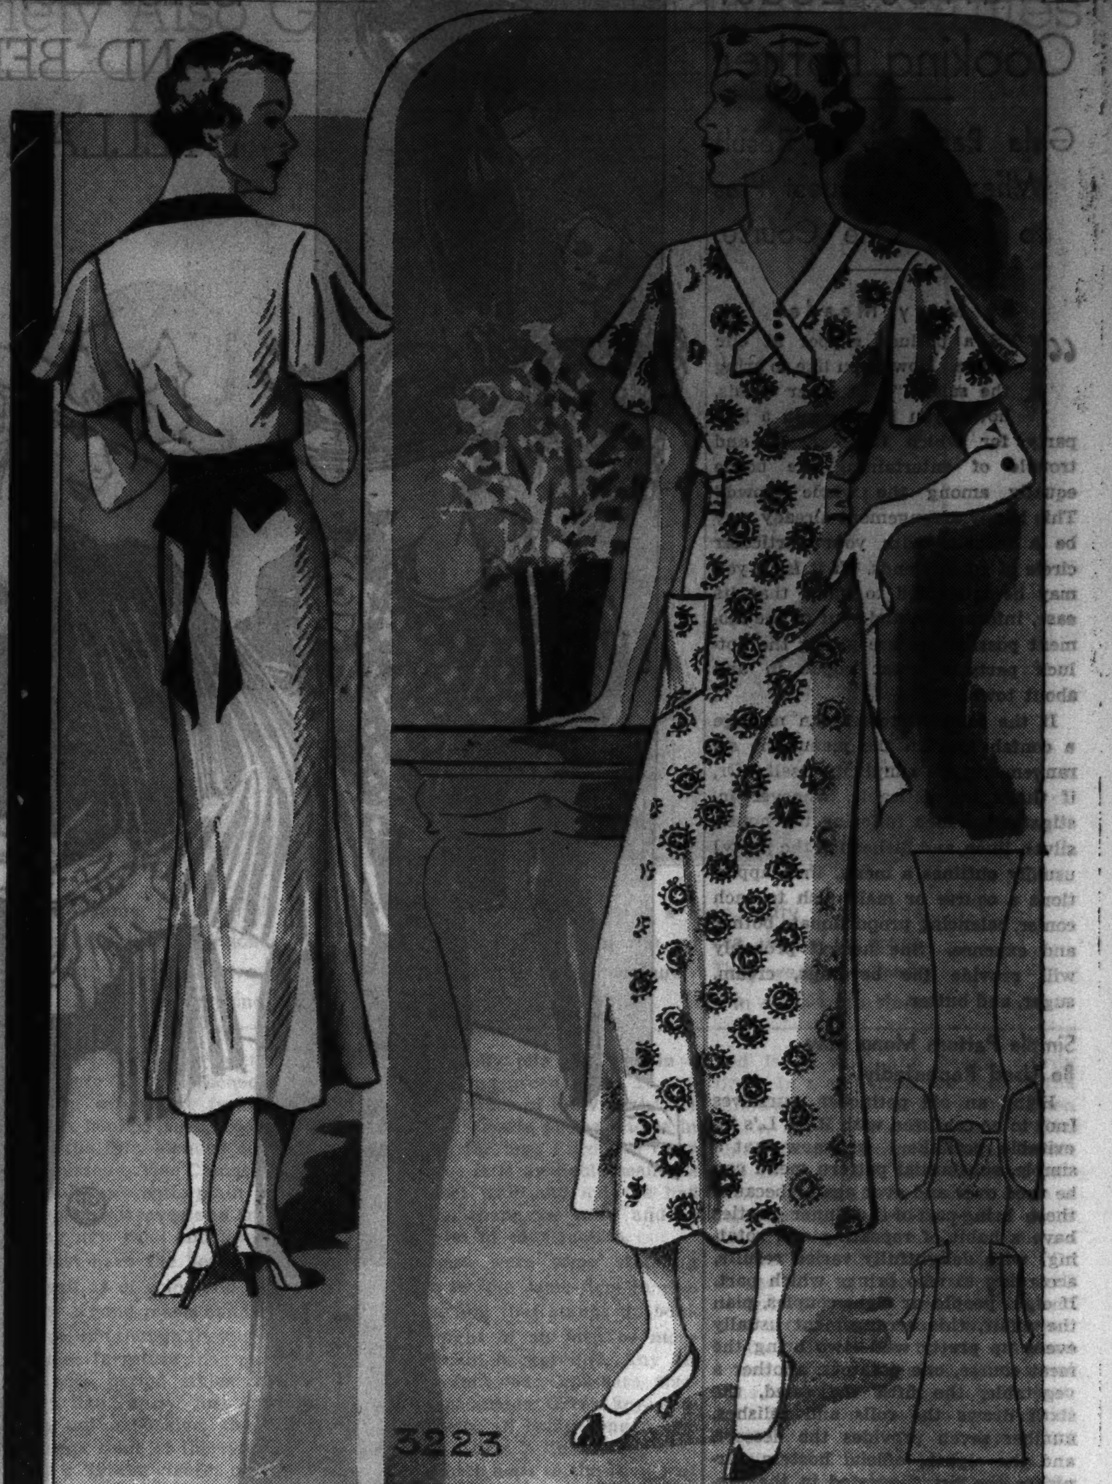
CHIC is not exclusive. It is not confined to smart occasions nor even to business attire. It is a necessity, as well, in the kitchen, for marketing, and the many hours the housewife spends in her home. The house frock illustrated today, pattern No. 3223, is rich in the special brand of smartness that makes for trimness, practicality, and slimness.

The original of this simple dress is especially attractive in a cotton fabric with a weave resembling linen. Its print is spring violet and white. This color combination is one which flatters the stouter than average figure, and is recommended for daintiness. But should violet not be compatible with your complexion tint, select a print which unites your favorite colors, and trim the dress with white or one shade of the print. If you don't favor prints at all, choose your favorite monotone color, and trim the frock with another color which harmonizes with it.

This frock has another virtue in addition to its practicality and chic. It is extremely easy to make, as it is cut in one piece. The belt, which extends only across the back, allows for an uninterrupted panel in the front, which makes for slenderization. The short cape sleeves flare gracefully for comfort, and do not impede one in the numerous household tasks which require plenty of reaching. A capacious pocket is another asset. In considering the practical aspects of this dress one must not overlook the fact that its lack of detail makes it extremely easy to launder and press.



Style No. 3223 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, and 52 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch material, with ½ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

Potluck Meal Involves Least Cooking Bother

Gala Parties Are Result When Each Guest Has to Bring One Course.

By Mary Meade.

"IT'S a potluck supper at our house. How'd you like to bring the salad?" In other words, how'd you like to join a gay party for which the expense and trouble of entertaining are borne equally among the whole crowd? This happy arrangement already may be a favorite with your particular circle of good friends. If it isn't, you may be interested to know that its ease, informality, and spur of the moment possibilities are giving the potluck party a great vogue in and about town.

If the joint hostesses can manage a confab to plan the menu, the arrangements are simplicity itself. Or, if that's impracticable, whoever instigates the idea [offering the house, silver, linen, and dishes for the party] usually outlines a menu, then apportions a course or main dish to each comer, balancing proportionate bother and expense. She herself probably will provide the beverage, cream, sugar, and butter.

Simple Pattern Menu May Be Used Repeatedly.

Being an old potlucker ourselves [not to be confused with R. H. L.'s inevitable potlikker] we know that a simple, substantial pattern menu can be used over and over again [because these bring-part-of-the-dinner parties have a habit of repeating and rotating] with delightfully varied results, according to who brings which part. If eight people, or eight couples, plan the affair, this arrangement usually evens up pretty well—two bring the meat course, one potatoes, another a vegetable, the fifth the salad, the sixth draws the rolls and relishes, number seven provides the dessert, and the eighth, official hostess, furnishes the list suggested in the preceding paragraph.

You may have worked out a different or more satisfactory setup. Or maybe you'll be potlucking in a group of four, or four couples, in which case you may favor this division—hot main dish for one, salad and rolls for another, dessert for the third, and the same official hostess provisions, plus a few relishes and preserves.

Italian Delight Is Hit as That Main Hot Offering.

If you're invited to an informal supper like this, and asked to bring the main hot dish as your ticket of admission, you'll want to choose one that can be transported and reheated easily. An escalloped meat and vegetable casserole always is a good choice. Baked beans is another, or you may favor a meat and spaghetti combination. The latter, in the form of this Italian Delight, is a grand dish for a big crowd, and may win you the vote as the best cook in the party.

ITALIAN DELIGHT.

1 package spaghetti
4 tablespoons fat or drippings
1½ pounds hamburger
½ pound pork sausage
½ cup chopped onions
½ cup chopped green pepper
1 No. 2 can tomatoes
1 No. 2 can corn
Salt, pepper cayenne

Cook the spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender. Melt the fat or drippings in a large skillet, and brown the ground hamburger and sausage, along with the chopped onions and green pepper. [A chopped garlic clove may be added.] When the meat is well browned turn the whole mixture into a large kettle with the cooked, drained spaghetti, the canned tomatoes, and corn. Simmer slowly for 1½ hours [this can be shortened, but long cooking makes it better]. Season to taste and serve hot.

Molded Salad or Spring Greens Easily Transported.

If the salad is your lot you may decide on a tossed affair of mixed greens, wrapped in damp cloths for the journey to the party, and mixed in your hostess' kitchen just before serving time. Or you may bethink you of a fine molded salad [such as the one we're suggesting below]. This is easily transported right in the mold and given the necessary last minute attention just before dinner-time.

SPRING SALAD, MOLDED.

1½ cups concentrated tomato soup
½ cup cream or cottage cheese
1 tablespoon butter
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon onion juice
1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
¼ cup cold water
½ cup mayonnaise
½ cup chopped celery
1 cup diced cucumber
1 cup red radishes, thinly sliced
1 cup tender young onions, thinly sliced

Heat the tomato soup, cottage or cream cheese, butter, salt, and onion juice in the top of a double boiler until the cheese is softened. While hot add the gelatin, which has been softened in the cold water. Cool and, when slightly stiffened, fold in the mayonnaise and chopped vegetables. Turn into a large ring mold and chill.

If you prefer a fruit salad remember that favorite combination of crushed pineapple, grated American cheese, mayonnaise, and slivered blanched almonds folded into a stiffening lime flavored gelatin. It's rich and creamy, yet not too much so, and it's sure to be a favorite.

Cake Is One Dessert that Takes Well to Traveling.

Perhaps no dessert travels as easily as does a cake. Here's one so good and so unusual that it really deserves a whole column to itself instead of being tacked on at the end of another story. [You may remember our whipped cream angel food of a year or so ago and dismiss this as something you already know, but look again! It's quite different, although equally delicate and delicious.]

Whipped Cream Cake Is Delicate and Delicious.

WHIPPED CREAM CAKE.

1 cup heavy cream
3 eggs whites
1½ cups sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup cold water
1 teaspoon vanilla

Whip the cream until stiff, fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Sift all the dry ingredients together and add alternately with the cold water, folding in lightly. Fold in the flavoring. Bake in an 8 by 12 inch cake pan at 375 degrees F. and, when done, spread with the following topping and place under a slow broiler until slightly brown:

6 tablespoons melted butter
10 tablespoons brown sugar
1 cup shredded coconut
½ cup broken nut meats

Mix all together and spread on cake.

SASHES, BOWS, AND BELTS IN STELLAR ROLES

● No. 1: Molyneux makes the blouse and lines the jacket of this suit with blue and white gingham checked taffeta. A bouquet is worn on the lapel and there are blue gloves. ● No. 2: This black satin accordion plaited jacket from Molyneux is making fashion history, and the black crepe dress with a wide sulphur yellow girdle held by pink and blue flowers is not negligent either. Pink gloves go along. ● No. 3: Color harmonizing as done in Paris is shown in this midnight blue Molyneux ensemble. A bouquet of rose and blue and yellow flowers, yellow gloves, and a belt are the bright details.

Paris Makes Waistlines Decorative

Couturiers Vary in Point of Concentration, but Not in Beauty of Design.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The spotlight focus of the new Paris styles is on the waistline in both day and evening clothes. Notice is served that any woman who tries to carry on this season with a waistline that is not an attention getter is out of the fashion parade.

Waistlines are being placed up under the bosom for evening, and Schiaparelli makes daytime jackets and coats with high empire waistlines, too. Molyneux lets them slide down to the hipbones, and then highlights them with striking wrapped girdles and sashes. Mainbocher, Vionnet, and others leave them where nature put them.

Molyneux ties full length soft sashes around low waistlines or wraps them in gaudy wide workman's sashes.

Lanvin puts gigantic geisha girl bows at the left side front of waistlines, or five white pique arum lilies that measure 10 inches across the top.

Marcel Rochas fits tight corselet belts, wide in front, and puts comic or sentimental scenes on the wide front. And there are other striking ways of making the waistline stand out from the crowd. Mainbocher does it with printed silk sashes. Schiaparelli does it with wide, encrusted lether belts. Jean Patou does it with shiny colored patent lether belts. Alix does it with colored ten inch tie belts on black dresses. Molyneux thrusts rows of six bright tulips through the front of dress belts.

Waistlines Made to Look No More Than 23 Inches.

Waistlines, when normal, are made to look no more than a 23 inch span. This is done by the big topped sleeves every Paris dressmaker puts into jackets and by the new circular skirts. Mainbocher has laced up bodices on day dresses that slim the waistline. Alix gets the slimmest waistline effects with real whirling dervish skirts—a full circle of cloth. Patou has suits with high topped skirts to make the waistline seem small.

Jodelie spotlights the waistline of swim suits by setting in ten inch wide cloth girdles tied around tightly. Schiaparelli does it in one piece printed suits with bloomer trunks no longer than the top of the thighs and an equally short circular skirt tied around over the suit. Alix ties a silver fox peplum around the waist of a fitted black dress.

Short English Schoolboy Jackets Appear in Suits.

Suits as Paris makes them bring in a new waisted silhouette, launched by Jeanne Lanvin, with a fitted to the waist and flared below, wrist length jacket, like a riding coat, belted in contrasting color around the waistline. Short English schoolboy jackets, with flaring topped sleeves also give the waistline prominence. Robert Piguet gives these short jackets full length panel fronts, thereby making them incredibly graceful.

Marcel Rochas puts brilliant, short jackets with accordion plaited black chiffon skirts to make the most striking afternoon suits of the season. Jackets and skirts have left off matching in most of the high powered Paris collections. The jackets are the brilliant members of the suit. They are seen in giddy, vivid pastels, plaids, checks, and printed silks.

Gingham Checked Taffeta Makes a Smart Blouse.

No. 1 is a Molyneux suit that illustrates the attractiveness of the print and plain suit, in the classic way. Molyneux makes this suit of a soft, dark blue wool. The jacket is one of those new, short, fitted jackets of the Eton type, and it has revers and collar and lining of big navy and white gingham checked taffeta. On the lapel Molyneux places a bouquet of a rose, blue forget-me-nots, and yellow daisies, and short blue gloves are worn to match the forget-me-nots. The sleeves are the smart, top heavy sleeves everybody makes.

No. 2 is a big hit ensemble from Molyneux. It has a black satin jacket entirely accordion plaited, with three-quarters length sleeves and no collar. It has a simple, black crêpe frock buttoned on three plaited enamel rosette buttons. A wide, sulphur yellow workman sash girdle is placed low, and has pink and blue flowers at the left side. Bright rose pink gloves are worn, and a big sailor with a spreading taffeta bow.

No. 3 has a jacket and dress of midnight blue rough silk crêpe, the jacket being only waistlength, with big topped sleeves. The dress is tucked to make the waistline, which is low, and important. A sulphur gloves are worn. yellow patent lether belt and suede

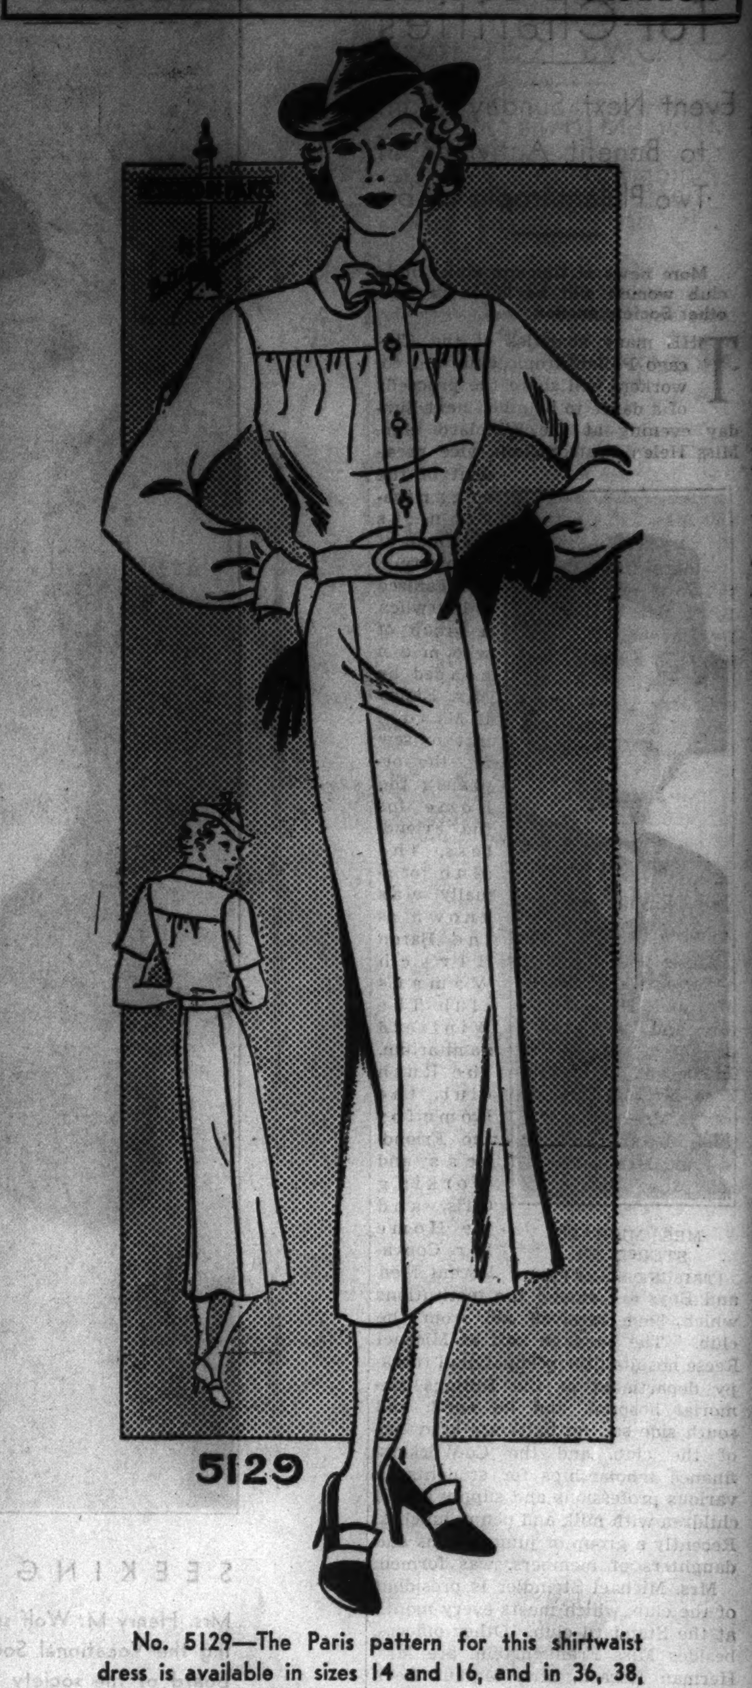
Paris Pattern Shirtwaist Frock Uses Sheer Fabrics



No. 5129—The Paris pattern for this shirtwaist dress is available in sizes 14 and 16, and in 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS. — [Special.] — The shirtwaist frock, or robe chemisier, as it is called in Paris, pops up in French styles again this year, but so different you'd scarcely know it, because this spring and summer it is made of sheer materials. The great Paris dressmakers use organdy, cotton eyelet embroidery, sheer silk crêpes, chiffon jersey, and even regular chiffon to make shirtwaist frocks. One bold designer makes them of net and another of linen lace.

This pattern and a few yards of sheer fabric will set you up in the front ranks of the fashion parade for the coming summer. Pick any sheer material with enough body to "stay put." I don't recommend chiffon except in the hands of an expert. Choose your color, printed or plain, and then get the belt and the tie in some vivid color that goes well with your material. You'll have a charming dress to wear all summer.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

EVERY one seems to feel an urge to be outdoors as much as possible with the coming of the first warm spring days. When the mercury in the thermometer soars and the winds become mild and friendly, babby buggies appear almost as quickly as spring flowers. However, many of the wan little infants from the tenement and slum districts must have their fresh air via open windows because, in most instances, their mothers are weak, undernourished, and unable to carry them to parks and squares, and financial difficulties make the purchase of buggies impossible. So today we're issuing an SOS call to all who have discarded carriages or strollers on hand. Let's mobilize them and put them back to work transporting some of the many pale, delicate babies of poverty-stricken parents and give them the benefit of fresh air and sunlight for a change.

From Mr. J. C. on the west side: "Dear Miss Brown: I am an ex-soldier out of work and on relief. I have two children, babies 6 years and 22 months old. We have no carriage for them and our caseworker is unable to help us to obtain one. As a result the babies don't get out much, as my wife can't handle them alone for any distance. If you could get us a buggy through your department my wife and I would appreciate it beyond words."

"Dear Miss Brown: I am the mother of three small children, including twins just 5 months old, and am in desperate need of a buggy. My husband has been without work for the last two years, and buying a carriage is out of the question, so I am coming to you with the hope that some reader has a discarded twin buggy we could have."—Mrs. J. P.

Mrs. P. lives in a western suburb of Chicago.

"Dear Miss Brown: Can you help me to obtain some suits, size 4, for my 10 month old baby boy? My husband recently fractured his arm and was unable to work and now we are on relief. However, we receive only $4 per week, and it is impossible to provide any clothing on that amount. The baby has been ill and needs fresh air and sunshine. I will be grateful if you can help me get a buggy for him."—Mrs. C. B.

The address is on the northwest side of the city.

Mrs. R. K. also has appealed to me for a buggy for her child. The baby now is 19 months old, but due to a premature birth always has been sickly and delicate and is, as yet, unable to walk. The husband is employed on PWA work, and his salary is insufficient to permit the purchase of a carriage.

Rounded Corners Add Efficiency to New Saucepan

THE newest alumium saucepan to be seen in the stores has rounded corners, smooth bottom, and a streamline handle. This smooth bottomed saucepan omits the old fashioned circular ridge which at times made cleaning rather difficult. The rounded corners are another "easier to clean" feature, and the streamline handle adds a distinctive touch of beauty.

The makers of this smart looking and convenient new saucepan also have put on the market a new sauce pot, for use in making soups and stews, which has straight sides and flat grip handles and is equipped with a steam seal, for fuel economy. This utensil also has the perfectly smooth bottom and rounded, easily cleaned corners.

Both pieces of equipment are sold in leading Chicago department stores.

Correct Wall Color in Laundry Room Cuts Electricity Bill

THERE are a host of soft and light reflecting colors for the walls of that sometimes forgotten room, the basement laundry. A light daffodil yellow, a soft blue green, pale pinkish buff, cream, or ivory, all tend to give added brightness and cheer to a home laundry. It is maintained that the use of light colors on walls saves nearly 200 million dollars annually to users of electricity the country over. Now this is a point worth remembering when we are considering how to modernize and how to freshen up our homes this spring.

Nor should the laundry floor be forgotten when the "renewing" program is at hand. Cement paints come in a variety of charming hues: jade green, chocolate brown, deep blue, and red. There are paints which are especially manufactured to adhere to damp, concrete basement floors.

The Kitchen Forum

Mr. E. L., Chicago: "I should like a recipe for 'burgoo.'"

For some time this recipe proved elusive, but we finally located it in the "Southern Cook Book," published by the Culinary Arts press. To quote: "Kentucky burgoo is the celebrated stew served in Kentucky on Derby day, at political rallies, horse sales, and other outdoor events. This recipe is from a hand written copy by Mrs. J. T. Looney of Lexington. Mr. Looney is Kentucky's most famous burgoo maker . . . invited to all parts of the country to prepare the dish for large gatherings. This is not a dish to be prepared by an amateur, although it may be prepared in smaller quantities . . ."

Following this prelude is the recipe, which nets 1,200 gallons of burgoo, and begins by calling for 600 pounds of lean soup meat, 200 pounds of fat hens, and 2,000 pounds of peeled and diced potatoes!

However, we also found instructions for making the burgoo in smaller lots. Any meats and fowl may be used, along with any garden vegetables desired. The meat is cut in inch cubes, mixed with dried vegetables if desired, and then put into a large stewing kettle. Fill the kettle half full of water, and place over heat to come to a boil. Peel and halve onions, scrape and dice carrots, pare and cube potatoes. When liquid in kettle is boiling, add vegetables, lower heat, and continue to simmer until the vegetables are tender. Season just before serving. There always should be enough water to cover the vegetables. Whole canned tomatoes and tomato puree may be added for flavor, as may chopped fresh cabbage and canned corn.

Mrs. D. G., of Battle Creek: "My candied orange peel seems bitter and hard compared with some I've tasted. Can you tell me how to make it so that it will be waxy and sweet?"

First remove all the white membrane from the orange peel, wash it [you can store this for several days in a covered container until you've acquired enough] and then slice it with a sharp knife or scissors. Cover the sliced peel with cold water, bring to a boil, cook for 2 minutes, and drain. Again cover with cold water and repeat. Then drop the cooked peel into a sirup made from twice as much sugar as water, and cook until the sirup is thick and the peel tender and clear. Remove from the sirup, and sprinkle with granulated sugar, separating the strips with a fork. The cooking in plain water first removes the strong, bitter flavor, and if you like it especially mild, this process may be repeated a third time.

1936 Produces Classics in the Hand Knit Suit

By Jean Macdonald.

TAILORED suits are by way of being classic this season in the field of hand knits. The suit illustrated today is an example of designing which allows a knitted ensemble to take on the lines, details, and fit of a fabric suit. The new yarns of nub variety with heather and tweed mixtures are especially suitable for tailored suits and are most adaptable for the simple knitting patterns.

The double breasted, wide lapelled, hand knit model pictured uses ribbing from the hip to above the waistline for its touch of individuality and to create that simple straight line so essential in all well tailored suits. Brown wooden buttons hold the lapels and ribbing in place and offer the only contrast on a green suit of pompadour wool.

The wide band of ribbing on the slick, tight sleeves carries out the theme of the waistband. The skirt is straight and narrow, finished around the bottom with the usual single crochet. This suit may be worn without a blouse, with a contrasting silk or knitted scarf, or with a knitted sweater or piqué vestee.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instruction for knitting the tailored suit with wide lapels illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter. Be sure to include the following measurements:

Tribune Will Show New Paris Gowns in Color

Their Gorgeous Hues to Be Reproduced in Rotogravure Next Sunday.

"NO sobriety in dress!" When Paris designers began plotting spring fashions for 1936, they found they all agreed on this edict, and they formed a united front to promulgate it in the style-conscious world. Black and blue, brown and gray, they announced, would be allowed. But never alone or with only demure white for relief. Every ensemble must be highlighted by trimmings and accessories in brilliant or rich or soft colors.

Next Sunday THE TRIBUNE will publish a full page of color photographs of new Paris gowns in its picture section. Improved color reproduction processes have made it possible to capture every nuance of shade and every intricacy of pattern. The gowns to be shown next Sunday are vivid styles introduced by leading Paris couturiers at their spring openings this year. They were selected especially for this presentation by Bettina Bedwell, Paris fashion writer for THE TRIBUNE, and the exclusive color photos were taken by the famous Scaioni of Paris.

Mauve Decade Signals Its Comeback in Evening Coat.

How the mauve decade has staged a comeback in the fashion world will be illustrated by an evening coat in parma violet faille silk, with violet gloves to match. The marvelous freshness of Paris styles is captured by a pink chiffon evening gown by Robert Piguet. And daisies in green and white lie softly against a black background in another Piguet evening gown, the beauties of which are subtly shown in the color photographs to appear next Sunday.

In some realms somber hues have been banished entirely by Paris. Evening clothes this year are virtually 100 per cent colorful. Nary a dark gown is to be seen among the couturiers' collections. Black and navy blue maintain their popularity for daytime ensembles, but all dark or demure accessories have been sent to the attic. Blouses and scarves, collars and cuffs, belts and bows and sashes worn by fashionable women run the gamut of the rainbow.

Petticoats of Colored Tulle. Three Inches Longer than Gown.

Petticoats are a favorite with designers who emphasize the feminine note, and none are more lovely than those in colored tulle in a hue to contrast with that of the afternoon or evening gown with which they are worn. They are cut to show about three inches below the hemline of the dress. Long flowered tulle gloves and flower clusters at the nape of the neck carry out the scheme started by the petticoat in many an evening ensemble. Bright flowers, indeed, are used in profusion at all decolletes and waistlines.

Swishing petticoats of striped and polka dotted taffeta go under daytime frocks.

Color captures even the most sober, practical accessories. Shoes for daytime are bright suede boots, reaching the ankle bone. Gloves are bright green or red suede or wool.

Wool and Linen Are Woven Into Charming Rugs; Hooked Variety Also Gains New, Richer Beauties

In this dining room is seen a handsome, hand tufted wool rug in an 8 by 10 size, having a wide, fluffy wool fringe. The background is a soft maize, the tufting which is raised an inch or more from the surface, being in green. Rugs in this line are both new and smart, and are suitable with period or modern furniture. They wear excellently and are not high priced. The right floor covering goes far to make any room beautiful. Sold in a Chicago store.

Equally Suitable in Rooms of Modern, Period, or "Mongrel" Decoration.

"Furnishing Your Home on a Modest Budget," a new booklet by Claire Winslow, tells how to have attractive rooms without running up large bills. It is full of helpful suggestions. Price, 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street, and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Claire Winslow.

FLOOR coverings become more artistic and interesting every season. Women are realizing that a carpet or rug is not just something to spread over the floor and place the furniture on, but is an integral and important part of the room's decorative scheme.

In the old days there was not much to choose from besides Brussels carpets, orientals, and gaudy patterns of the overornate Victorian school. But in 1936 you can select from lovely hand made hooked rugs, room size, that have the soft, blended colorings of old Aubussons, from Chinese styles, from broadlooms both plain and in the new, pebbly weaves, and from the fascinating new wool and linen rugs.

These last have the beauty of texture as well as of color and pattern. They have a hand made, hand loomed appearance, and though they are 'deal with modern furniture they may also be used with period styles or in a room that, like Topsy," just growed." They are not expensive, they wear like iron, and some of the types even boast that a lighted cigaret may burn itself out on them without injury.

Chenille-like Tufting an Inch or More High.

These wool rugs come in a variety of patterns and sizes. One that appealed especially to us had a marvelous, deep woolly pile and was in a beautiful, spring green tone. It was made of thousands of individual tufts of wool yarn closely placed and is in a class with the best European hand tufted rugs. It is available seamless up to 24 feet wide and may be had in any size, shape, or color and in several styles of construction.

Then there were some stunning rugs made by the same firm in chenillelike tufting that stands up boldly to a height of an inch or more from the plain background. Any design can be followed: Crossbars, diagonal striping, plaids, Greek key, endless chain, etc., all being done in this wool hand tufting. A fluffy, deep wool fringe to match adds to the beauty of the effect. Sizes range from small scatter pieces to room size rugs.

Jacquard Brocade Comes in Three Designs.

A third floor covering in this same group is called a jacquard brocade and is of wool and heavy, sturdy linen. In a soft plaid it comes in the following colors: Apricot and linen white, apple green and linen white, china blue and linen white, brown and linen white. In a diamond pattern, instead of the plaid it is in a soft biscuit tone with white, colors that can be used in any room, no matter what the color scheme. Or choose it in a graceful, circular shell design in one of three shades and with a three inch woven wool frame. In fact, any of the twenty standard colors may be selected. The usual sizes are 3x6, 6x9 feet, 8x10 feet, 9x12 feet. Or you can get special lengths in any of the following widths: 3, 6, 8, or 9 feet.

The picture today shows one of the rugs having a plain ground and raised, wool tufting in color. It is edged on all four sides in wide, fluffy wool fringe.

All the models described today are available in a Chicago store and in cities all over the country.

Marion Miley Will Defend Golf Title at Georgia Resort

AUGUSTA, GA. Two major sport events and a brilliant ball at the Bon Air hotel will be featured in Augusta during the coming week. The near record influx of winter visitors at the three resort hotels will be augmented by an even larger crowd who will arrive for the approaching golf and tennis tournaments. The fifteenth Augusta women's invitation golf tournament, to be played at the Augusta Country club next week, will attract the leading feminine golfers of America. Indeed, it ranks as one of the leading golf events in the United States. Marion Miley will defend her title in a brilliant and colorful field which will include such notables as Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, Jean Bauer, and Mrs. Opal S. Hill. Mrs. Harold E. Foreman of Chicago is one of the initial entrants in the tourney.

Others include: Miss Kathryn Hemphill, winner of the annual Bellair women's tournament in Florida; Miss Dorothy Kirby, Georgia champion; Miss Alice Rutherford, Aiken and New York; Miss Grace Armory, Palm Beach, and Miss Emily Lawrence, New York.

Another important sport event of the week will be the South Atlantic States tennis tournament, which will be played on the clay courts of the Augusta Country club March 26 to 29. Numerous social events are being planned in honor of the ranking players who include: Arthur Hendric, Artin Buxby, Charles Harris, Mel Tarpley, Gardiner Mulloy, Russell Bobbitt, Marion Reese, Malon Courts, Frank Guernsey, John Foreman, Arthur Maryott, Vernon Marcum, Tyrus Cobb Jr., Wilmer Hynes, and Clayton Burwell.

The social event of the week will be the carnival night ball to be held Thursday evening at the Bon Air hotel, by the directors of the children's hospital.

Numerous luncheons and cocktail parties are being planned by the winter colony at the Augusta National Golf club. Drives around the city and inspection of the beautiful gardens provide entertainment in leisure moments.

Final plans are being made for the third annual masters' invitation golf tournament to be held at the Augusta National Golf club March 2 to 5. This event will be the only competitive golf in which both Bobby Jones and W. Lawson Little Jr. will appear during 1936.

John B. Foreman of Glencoe, Ill., is a guest at the Bon Air hotel. Mr. and Mrs. David A. Noyes of Chicago are at the Forest Hills hotel.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, March 23.

The rugosa roses may be pruned now. Cut out the old wood and cut back the newer canes part way. The latter will furnish flowers this summer. The virgin's bower [clematis paniculata] should also be pruned back, and almost all shrubs may be pruned for shape and the removal of dead or surplus wood. Shrubs that flower on the old wood must be carefully pruned, else the flower buds will be removed. These may be pruned after flowering. It is wise to look over shrubs each year, certainly every two years, because young, healthy growth produces the best flowers and foliage. Watch the hotbed and see that it is well ventilated and not allowed to dry out.

Tuesday, March 24.

Moon flower seeds may be started. Soak them first in water and shave the end of each seed with a knife, as they are extremely hard. Soaking all hard seeds will hasten germination. Use annual vines to take the place of the hardier kinds that may have frozen back. The hyacinth bean, cobæa, morning glory, of which the newer kinds are delightful and easy to grow, the cypress vine, and cardinal climber and others are useful and should be more generally planted.

Wednesday, March 25.

Clean up the garden by piling all refuse and burning it. Many insects will be destroyed and their haunts or hiding places done away with. Cover a few hills of rhubarb with boxes or barrels and they will soon send out long, tender stems. Grass seed should be sown as early as possible. Scatter seed over the old lawn to thicken the grass in thin spots. Sowing seed over hard, packed ground will do little good. Chip up the soil first after topdressing it with rich soil.

Thursday, March 26.

Plant trees, shrubs, and vines as soon as conditions are favorable for digging. Make the holes large for the spread of the roots. Plant the trees in the middle of the holes, slightly deeper than they stood in the nursery. Work good soil between the roots, tamp it down with the feet, leave a depression when the work is finished, and water well. Stake to prevent loosening by the wind. Always buy a specimen tree. It may cost a little more, but it is worth infinitely more when so few are used on the average lot.

Friday, March 27.

Dahlia tubers may be started now if the young growths are to be used for cuttings. Place them in boxes of sand, keep them in a warm place, and when the growths are three to four inches long cut them, trim back the foliage, and put them in the sand. After they are rooting pot them up and let them keep on growing until planting out time in May, or until after danger of frost.

Saturday, March 28.

Do not allow pot hydrangeas, azaleas, primroses, and other flowering plants to dry out. The amaryllis, when through blooming, will send out its leaves and continue to grow until fall. Keep it well watered. A bit of plant food occasionally will be beneficial. Examine the perennial border to see that the mulching material is not smothering the plants.

Boldly Modern Furniture Work of Kem Weber

American Designer Thinks Period Pieces Now Malapropos as Hoop Skirts.

"What's Wrong with Your Rooms," a booklet by Edith Weigle, explains several methods of furniture arrangement in the home. It was written in answer to many questions of puzzled amateur decorators. Price, 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Edith Weigle.

KEM WEBER, one of our front rank designers of modern furniture, says he "was born in America at the age of 24 and therefore had the particular advantage of having a greater capacity for observation than his fellow citizens." Before that time he had been studying and growing up in Europe. At the age of 17 he had entered the classes of Bruno Paul, a leading designer there, and remained until he left for the United States. He remembers trips through England, Holland, and Belgium, years of "trying to clarify the difference between picturesqueness and art."

Then, he says, "America, where no one knew who Frank Lloyd Wright was. He was known in Europe as one of the world's leading architects living in America." Mr. Weber's account of his first impressions and experiences here is told in such an amusing manner that we wish we could quote all of it. Space not permitting, we give excerpts.

"I had just married and lived in Mill Valley, no job and no money. On the ferry boat to San Francisco I read the paper and found that a chicken farmer was wanted. Not knowing anything about chickens I thought this might be the right job for me." He applied for it and got it. "On the way home I bought two books on chickens. . . . If you have never milked a cow and then have to milk four of them in order to save your face; if you find out that the farmer had left because the chickens had the 'roup,' and if you have to eat with the rest of the servants in the kitchen you soon discover that there are other things in life besides such questions as ornament or no ornament, or Feininger versus Brangwyn."

After an interlude of strict application to money earning Mr. Weber finally got back to his vocation, and in 1917 and 1918 had a studio of modern design in Berkeley. In Santa Barbara a little later he began to build his own furniture. In 1921 he was art director of a large furniture store in Los Angeles, remaining there for seven years until he represented America in the Exhibit of Arts and Industries in New York in 1928.

Since then, with the exception of a year and a half as set designer in the movies, he has maintained his own studio "in an effort to work for progress in design." For the last four years Mr. Weber has conducted an interesting experiment with the assistance of the Art Center school in Los Angeles training young men and women as industrial designers.

"Historical objects," he claims, "have no value in reproductions and are as unfit to our surroundings as a hoop skirt in a roadster. I advocate the roadster, and fortunately we are past the time when a serious industry spends its money to advocate the hoop skirts. I wonder how many American women realize how utterly ridiculous their fashionable selves look all done up in a French provincial frame."

Mr. Weber believes that within the coming ten years "so-called traditional or period influence in American family life will die and the beauty of modern progress live."

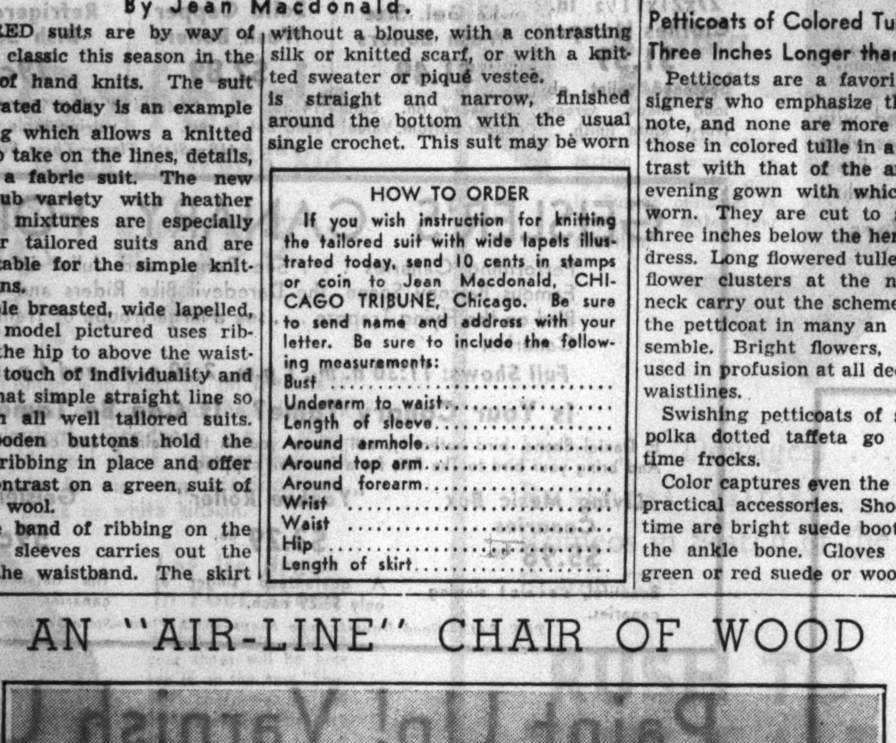
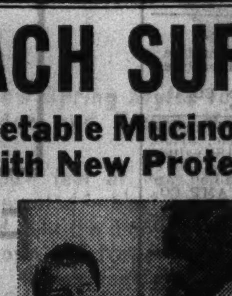
AN "AIR-LINE" CHAIR OF WOOD



This "aïr-line" chair of wood was scientifically designed by Kem Weber to give strength far out of proportion to the lightness of the individual parts. Mr. Weber believes there is no place for traditional furniture in the modern American home.

STOMACH SUFFERERS

New Vegetable Mucinoid Provides Stomach with New Protective Coating



Drugless!

Medical Science reports a revolutionary new treatment called V. M. for Acid Stomach, gastric and intestinal irritations and other distress caused by excess acidity. Many Doctors who have had experience with this treatment now prescribe it instead of soda bicarbonate, bismuth and other alkalies.

NO ALKALIES!

Medical authorities know that long-continued dosing with "acid neutralizing" ingredients leads to harmful after-effects. Such alkalies, though they may give temporary relief, tend to stimulate more acidity. Also, many gastric ailments are caused by lack of acid—and in such cases alkalies often bring serious after-effects. The effect of V. M. is to coat the stomach and intestinal linings with a mucilaginous vegetable substance, thus furnishing a protection against food roughages and excess hydrochloric acid. In this way, irritations of stomach and intestinal linings are afforded opportunity to heal—quickly and naturally.

A leading Hospital and a Scientific Research Institution cooperated in developing this treatment. It is known to physicians as VegeMucene. Now under the name of V. M. it is offered in convenient tablet form by leading drug stores the country over.

We might tell you of amazing results secured with V. M.—of severe and long standing cases which responded to treatment with V. M.—of benefits secured in many cases almost immediately after treatment was started—as reported to us by competent, experienced doctors in all parts of the country. Instead, we refer you to the V. M. Book of Doctor and Hospital Reports—yours free at any good drug store.

We haven't room here to tell of the thousands of cases that have been helped by the use of V. M. However, the V. M. Book of Reports gives you the SWORN-TO facts. Get a copy of this important booklet. Better still, get a liberal treatment of V. M. today, for only $1.00.

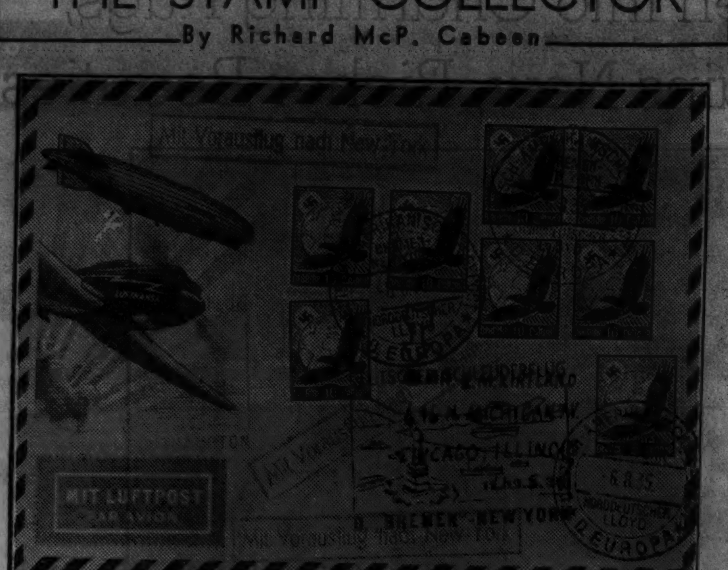
THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen.



This beautiful catapult cover, which was loaned by R. M. Kirkland of Chicago, illustrates how the speed of that service may be utilized in an emergency. The cover was mailed on board the Europa, east bound, and postmarked August 6, 1935. It was carried to Southampton by catapult plane in time to be placed on the Bremen, west bound, and went ashore at New York City, also by catapult plane, on night of Aug. 11.

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold as the Postage Stamps and Coin advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

A PREVIOUS article has explained that the issue of 1912 of United States stamps, resulted from a change made in the issue of 1910, to enable postal clerks to readily distinguish between the low and high values. All designs were altered except those of the 3, 4, and 5 cent values.

Within a few weeks after the first new designs appeared in sheet form, the 1 cent and 2 cent values were placed on sale in coils and in imperforate sheets. Since no change was made in the three, four and five cent values, those coils are listed with the issue of 1910. All of the coils at this period are perforated 8½, and show all of the paste-ups, center lines, etc., of the flat plate sheets from which they were made.

The two cent, carmine, in vertical coils, perforated horizontally, was placed on sale March 8, 1912, to be followed March 18, by the one cent, green, in both vertical and horizontal coils. Three days later the two cent value appeared in horizontal coils.

Imperforate sheets of the two cent value went on sale Feb. 23, 1912, with the one cent following on March 19. As in previous cases these imperforate stamps were for use in special vending and affixing machines, and stamps may be found with the private perforations known as Schermack III., Mail-O-Meter I, and III., Brinkerhoff II., and Chambers I., II., and III.

The one and two cent stamps for endwise coils were printed from special plates with a wide space between the horizontal panes. Since these stamps could not be used for horizontally wound coils, or for sheet stamps, without changing the standard perforating machinery, the plates were boldly labeled "Coil Stamps" along the margins. The inscriptions and all plate numbers were trimmed off in the coiling operations, and would never have been found in collections had not the introduction of rotary printed stamps destroyed the usefulness of the special plates and caused the remaining stock of stamps to be fully perforated and issued in sheet form.

The 8½ perforation used on the coils of this issue was adopted by the bureau of engraving and printing to reduce the wastage which occurred when coiling stamps perforated 12, and while the new gauge was suited to the problem at the bureau, it did not work well in vending machines for the coils would not separate through the punched holes but were just as apt to tear through the center of a stamp.

After a little more than two months the gauge was changed to 10. Since the gauge of all sheet stamps as well as of coils was altered to 10 during the year, it is customary to treat perforated 10 stamps as a single issue. These will be described in a future article on the issue of 1914.

Both the one and two cent values were issued in imperforate coils, wound both vertically and horizontally. These were for special vending machines which did not require perforated coils. It is not easy to separate stamps from these imperforate coils from other stamps cut from imperforate sheets and hence they are not collected to any great extent.

Europe's Fear of War Grows as Its Distances Shrink

Trouble Lies in Endless Chain of Secret Pacts

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

EUROPE IS SHRINKING! Distances which yesterday lent a certain degree of protection, or at least gave a sense of security, to this nation or that, today have been shortened to the point where there is no more safety, where literally all the countries of the continent are stewing in one mess. And that mess is a fear of war.

Speedy communication by air and swift travel by land and sea have reduced the distances shown on the accompanying map—not in miles, of course, but in hours and minutes required to cover them. Every capital in that part of Europe west of Russia today virtually is within air bombing range of every other capital. Every navy base is within easy striking distance of any hostile European fleet. Frontiers are edging closer together in the measure of distance by time of mechanized artillery and cavalry and infantrymen who roll to war in lorries.

This shrinking of the continent naturally increases the dread of war. Recent crises in Europe have brought the fact out plainly. Countries which lie figuratively upon each other's doorsteps even in normal times are jittery over the chances of invasion. These times being not exactly normal, fears of wars and threats of wars are even more prevalent than usual.

The crisis arising out of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's remilitarization of the Rhineland has been smothered for the moment in oratory. What new crisis may come this week or next? Constantly nations bluff and diplomats intrigue. But no nation apparently now is willing to call a bluff, for none actually can afford a war. No power halts the activities of its diplomats, for Europe, after all, thrives upon intrigue.

A major war in Europe today, as the nations now are aligned, would involve one or more or possibly all of the five great powers, the navies and air forces of which are compared upon this page. Hostilities between lesser powers almost certainly sooner or later would bring into the arena some or all of the more important nations.

Despite their rattling of the saber as they threaten each other, the nations of Europe still are staggering under the burdens of the great war, which cost the world roughly 300 billion dollars and 40 million lives. No nation in Europe, therefore, wants to go it alone in any sort of a war. No nation apparently would launch itself into a conflict without assurances of [Continued on page eight.]

'All the World's My Stage Setting,' Says Burton Holmes

43 Seasons as Travel Talker Is His Record

Character Sketch of a Veteran Entertainer Who Does Not Grow Old.

By Charles Collins.

THIS is a story about a man who has been giving public performances for nearly half a century without pretending to be an actor. He has been an important factor in the amusement life of the nation, but he has no affiliation with the drama or the song and dance trades. Whenever I want to forget about the theater and the eternal round of shows, he is my best bet. He can lift the curse of my own special brand of ennui more effectively than any other performer in the world.

This man is Burton Holmes, the travel lecturer, who is now ending his forty-third season of professional appearances in Chicago. Dwell upon that stretch of time for a moment—forty-three years of travels during which the world's history has been in a ferment of violent change! He has lived through them in the active practice of his educational and recreative specialty, almost unchanged in his own personality although always keeping his point of view up to date and his manner fresh as the traditional daisy.

Several generations have "sat under" him, in Orchestra and many other halls, and each has passed on to its successor the torch of loyalty to Burton Holmes. All other vogues in mass amusements have changed from year to year, but Mr. Holmes, through his forty-three years, has changelessly held his place in public favor. This is an astonishing fact; it deserves a quotation from Shakespeare:

But I am constant as the northern star,
Of whose true-fixed and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.

For Burton Holmes, Life Begins at 66.

Mr. Holmes is now 66 years old but he can smile on his birthdays, for he is still as debonair as he was in his youth. When he makes his brisk entrance at the start of a lecture, dress-suited, and white-tied in the style of one of Michael Arlen's idealized club men, he seems to be young Burton the Gadder who pleased his fellow townsmen back in 1890 with a clever début as an amateur travel talker.

There are no footlights, of course, to glare up into his face, revealing the touches of frost with which the years have spangled his head and closely trimmed beard. The conditions of his work are kinder than those of an actor's. And yet the step is that of a spry young fellow; the figure is slim and paunchless; the voice is gay, unclouded with the sobriety of age. Let's call him the Wandering Gentile, for he seems to live under a spell—happily not malign—of freedom from the heavy touch of time.

When he comes to Chicago, he comes home. His official place of residence for many years has been in New York, where he has an apartment, enriched with the plunder of all the climes, overlooking Central park; but he was born here, his career started here, and he is, quite definitly, a Chicago tradition. Whenever he passes the Congress hotel he can point to it as his birth place, for his family homestead stood on that site.

Seeing Life with Texas Guinan.

Wherever you find him [and that may be anywhere in the world except the polar regions] he will be the best dressed man in the place—and also the best natured and best mannered. There is an unaffected grace in his personality which has been an important factor in his long sustained success on the platform. He is innocent of posing; he is always the eager sightseer, endowed with a gift of communicating his casual observations as a tourist in a human, unpretentious way. Much rolling over the globe has put an extremely high polish on him as a civilized being; he is my idea of the perfect man of the world.

My last nonprofessional meeting with Mr. Holmes was in the first summer of A Century of Progress, upon which he had swooped, camera and notebook in hand, with glee. That night the late Texas Guinan was opening a joint on the Midway—a huge and bleak arena that had started in life as a carnival dance hall called The Ship.

All of the higher and lower orders of night club life, big shots and riff-raff, were in attendance to give the loud and gaudy Miss Guinan a rousing sendoff. The tables were jammed together so closely that rapid drinkers didn't have proper elbow room. Every John Doe in the place who had a job that could be named was called upon to stand up and receive the great big hand that went with the Guinan style of entertainment. The place was as hot as the bedroom of a Hindu bride; and I was as dismal in spirit as Dante watching the writhing sinners in the lake of fire.

Read His Life in Fifteen Volumes.

But there was Burton Holmes, in immaculate white linen with a jaunty polka dot bow tie, the soberest man in the joint and also the happiest. He was seeing life and enjoying it. Not even the fake whoopee of Texas Guinan, the most flagrant bore who ever afflicted the cabaret epoch, could quench his natural gayety of heart.

He inherited the travel lecture tradition from John L. Stoddard, a famous descriptive orator of the '80s and '90s. He faced with equanimity the lively competition of the eloquent Dwight Elmendorf and the aggressive E. M. Newman. The former now is only a memory; the latter is seeking to recapture his following after withdrawal from the rostrum during the worst years of the depression period.

He has visited every civilized or semi-civilized country in the world except South Africa. He has published the memoirs of his many odysseys in fifteen volumes. He never pretends to have had any adventures or hair-breadth escapes; and his pilgrimages, in general, have displayed a preference for the well traveled tourist lanes where good food and comfortable lodgings may be found.

But if he felt that his audiences had a keen interest in the tribal habits of the cannibals of New Guinea, he would immediately set forth for the noisome delta of the Fly river, wearing the nattiest suit of explorer's garments that those pestilential swamps have ever seen. Upon his return, he would chat about his trip as casually as if he had just taken an amusing walk around the block.

Morgan Sings at Chez Paree

MILTON BERLE has left the Chez Paree to make way for a new show which opened last Friday with Helen Morgan, the singer; Gus Van, formerly of Van and Schenck, and Paul Draper, the tap dancer, as its stars. The new entertainers will remain at the Chez for an engagement of three weeks, since Harry Richman opens on April 10.

Miss Morgan has not been seen in Chicago for many months. All her time recently has been devoted to her own supper club, the House of Morgan, in New York, and to motion pictures.

● George Olsen and Ethel Shutta will end their run in the College Inn of the Hotel Sherman next Thursday night. They will have a week's engagement on the stage of the Chicago theater, and then go to the Pacific coast. The Olsen group will be followed by Anson Weeks' orchestra. Kay St. Germaine, prima donna; Frankie Saputo, guitarist, and Larry Lemont, tenor soloist, are featured in Weeks' organization. The ice skating show will continue.

● Manya and Drigo, dancing stars of the "Springtime Revue" in the Empire room of the Palmer house, have designed a new number in honor of their Chicago debut. They call it "Empire Nuance." Another of their dances is "The Maple Leaf Rag."

All of the dances presented by Manya and Drigo were designed exclusively for them by Alberto Gallo.

Also in the "Springtime Revue" are Bob Hall, the singing rhymester; Giovanni, in sleight of hand tricks; Freddy Dosh, imitator; the Abbott dancers, and Ted Weems' orchestra.

● Della Carroll, exotic dancer, has begun an engagement as star of the floor show at Harry's New York cabaret. She appeared on the stage two years ago with "Fifty Million Frenchmen." Tex Morrisey, Jack Irving, the Beatrice Gardner girls, and other acts continue.

● The popularity of Phil Levant and his dance music in the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel has caused an extension of his engagement. He brought his orchestra into the Walnut room on Jan. 17 for an eight weeks engagement. Also featured in the Walnut room is George Nelidoff's new floor show, first presented last Friday night.

La Cornell in "Saint Joan" on Broadway

A Creature of Inspired Moods, She Exploits Fully the Shaw Opus.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Predictions and prophecies have a way of going wrong in the New York theater. Half the plays that are reported from the tryout territory as being quite wonderful reach Broadway only to flap a few hopeful flaps and flop ingloriously into a convenient storehouse. The other half is divided between unexpected successes, expected failures, and the occasional sensation.

In the case of Katharine Cornell's revival of Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," however, all that was expected of both play and player came magnificently true. The First Actress proved that she was, indeed, an ideal Maid of Domremy, a creature of inspired moods and eloquent faith, a perfect embodiment of the sensitively spiritualized heroine who led a faltering nation to victory in war, crowned a weak king, and suffered a martyr's death.

The play, first produced by the Theater Guild in 1923 with Winifred Lenihan in the name part, has of recent years, when Shaw's powers as philosopher and dramatist have been normally on the wane, been accepted as one of the playwright's outstanding contributions to the theater. Many speak of it now as his greatest play. It does not, to me, quite meet this supreme classification, but it certainly stands high in the list. . . .

Verbosity Still Rears Its Ugly Head.

In the matter of popular appeal it is still handicapped by being overlong. Three hours of even Shaw at his best is a little wearying to playgoers of an average mentality. But in this instance the beauty of the setting, the perfection of the casting, and the inspired eloquence of Miss Cornell do much to minimize the handicap. Only through the middle section, when the Bishop Cauchon and the Earl of Warwick indulge in a fifty minute discussion covering a wide range of subjects, centering on the sale of Joan to the Burgundians, does it become a little trying. So long as Miss Cornell commands the stage it is throbbing drama; from her entrance as the awkward peasant to her most dramatic trial and condemnation. Even the disturbing epilogue, with Joan in shining armor, takes on a compensating beauty.

The quite remarkable company includes Arthur Byron, eloquent as the inquisitor; Maurice Evans, an English importation, playing the Dauphin; Brian Aherne, as the perfectly poised Warwick; Charles Waldron, the archbishop, and Edward Ciannelli, the Cauchon. The gothic setting by Mielziner provides a handsome background. . . .

"Star Spangled" Tries to Razz Polish-Americans.

Gather closer while I tell you of a wild piece called "Star Spangled," which Arthur Hopkins produced this week. Incidentally, if they should be lacking a riot in Chicago I recommend this comedy as one to stir the Polish-American people to such a revolt as has never before been staged on the northwest side of that city.

"Star Spangled" was written by a young man named Robert Ardrey, who, I hear, is by way of being a protégé of the novelist Thornton Wilder. With it he undertakes to make extravagant fun of the Polish-American citizen group of a major American city.

The comedy is the story of the Dzieszienewskis, a widow and four children. Mother is a lady of unconventional morals. Her daughter Anna is a movie theater usher who bites gentlemen in the audience in the cause of gaining a publicity she hopes will get her to Hollywood. Her son Vincent is a racketeering lawyer who hopes to buy his way into the legislature with $3,500 and the beauty shop racket on the south side. Her son Gregory is out of Michigan City penitentiary, taking a week-end vacation while he bumps off Czysko, Polish-American boss, who sent him there. [Greg, incidentally, must be back in prison by Sunday because he has borrowed the gun of the vice president of the Killers' society, who is expecting to shoot his way out on that day.] And her fourth son is Stan, ivory topped professional ball player of the Texas league, quoting a variety of Ring Lardner wise cracks.

Hinges on Farce That Brazenly Insults a Race.

The group in action has a terrible time keeping Gregory, the killer, away from Czysko, the boss, who loves his "Polish pipple," and who can put Vincent in the legislature. Czysko is comically saved, Stan goes back to prison, and mamma returns to her boy friends.

"Star Spangled" is one of those ineffective combinations of farce and satire that misses with both barrels. The auditor is forced to believe the farce if the satire is to amount to anything, and if he believes the farce the play is a brazen insult to the citizen-group exposed.

Young Mr. Ardery is revealed as a promising writer of comedy, however, and the play does have moments of a mild and well earned hilarity. . . .

"American Tragedy" Bobs Up on Stage Under New Name.

We went experimental in a big way in this week's theater. The result was an entertainment of curiously mixed appeal. "Case of Clyde Griffiths" is the title, but the play is really only Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" in a new dress. Two German playwrights, Erwin Piscator and Lena Goldschmidt, have undertaken to reconstruct the tragedy along Greek lines, presenting fate in the form of the law of economics as the chief villian.

Clyde Griffiths murdered Roberta Alden, in the new statement, not because he was a weak thing and she stood in the way of his attaining a rich marriage and social distinction, but because the evil influences of a capitalistic form of government so warped his character he could do nothing else.

To make this prefectly plain, "Case of Clyde Griffiths" is produced as a sort of lecture-drama. One known as a speaker stands in the orchestra pit and explains the reactions of the players on the stage, interpreting the causes leading to their decisions. Occasionally he speaks a word of warning directly to them, and they answer in bitter argument, seeking to justify whatever course they have decided upon. Sometimes he addresses the audience as a citizen group, blaming it for the economic situation that is devastating the world. Sometimes he represents Individual Conscience, and again he speaks as Karl Marx, prophet.

The result is interesting as an experiment but rather flat as drama. The narrative value of a story is destroyed once it is broken in upon by an interpreter. The interruption in itself is distracting, and the advice of the speaker as to those conclusions at which the auditors should reasonable arrive has a tendency to resolve the auditorium into a lyceum with the audience in class.

Harald Kreutzberg Gives First Solo Recital Here Tomorrow

Modern Dance Artist to Give Recital Here

Kreutzberg's Program Scheduled at Orchestra Hall Tomorrow.

By Edward Barry.

THE mysterious forces that govern the scheduling of concerts and recitals are working in an especially strange and fascinating way this month. The week just past was almost empty of anything of earth shaking importance; the one to come crowds four such events into half its span. Those of our citizens who gave five of the last six evenings to Monopoly [for lack of a great musician to draw them from their homes] must forget rentals and waterworks tomorrow and get down to sterner things. The miracle of bilocation will be required Wednesday, when two concerts of the first order run simultaneously [in different theaters, of course].

PERCY GRAINGER.

Harald Kreutzberg, whose shaven head is a world-wide symbol of modern dancing in a high state of development, comes to Orchestra hall tomorrow night for his first solo recital in this city. Mr. Kreutzberg is the German dancer who has taken a leading part in the struggle to free his art from the shackles of the decorative ballet of another day and adapt its technique to a broader range of esthetic ideas.

Reinhardt Engaged Kreutzberg for Salzburg Production.

There is a story about that hairless head of his, but not as interesting a one as you might suppose. It is not intended as a protection against the evil eye nor the seductions of the classical sirens. Good business sense, with just a grain of superstition, accounts for Kreutzberg's strange looking upper story.

It seems that his first major rôle with the Berlin Staatsoper was that of a jester [in a ballet based on an Edgar Allen Poe tale]. He was supposed to look poor and unhappy and, at the same time, rather inscrutable. Wig after wig was tried and discarded, until the dancer, in desperation, went down and ordered his head shaved clean.

The effect turned out to be just what the director had been hopelessly looking for. The character of the jester was a noisy success, and the plaudits of Berlin carried to the always cocked ear of Max Reinhardt. The great impresario engaged Kreutzberg for the part of the master of ceremonies in Gozzi's "Turandot," which was going into production in Salzburg. When the dancer remarked casually that he would go into retirement and grow a head of hair for the coming performance, Reinhardt seized the contract with one of his stormy gestures and pretended to be about to tear it up.

Kreutzberg Won't Tempt Fortune by Letting Hair Grow.

Once more Kreutzberg played with the shaven head, and scored a huge success. From then on it was a sort of trademark, for the man knows the value of such a distinguishing badge as a hairless pate, and retains enough of the race's primal superstition to be unwilling to tempt fortune, who had smiled on him in this guise, by turning to her beaming face a full head of hair.

Both the jester's dance and the master of ceremonies are on tomorrow night's program. Another item is "Soldier of Fortune," a rather complex characterization of a drinking, fighting, loving rake of the fifteenth century. The music for the last is the work of Kreutzberg's co-worker and accompanist, Frederick Wilckens.

Five dances never before seen in Chicago are scheduled for presentation on the same program. One of them uses an excerpt from Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" as background.

Kreutzberg is a man of about 34. He was born in a small place called Reichenberg, in Germany.

Myra Hess Probably Most Prominent Woman Pianist.

So much for Monday. Two nights later a great English pianist whom we were to have heard Christmas week, but who was prevented by serious sickness from crossing the ocean in time to keep her engagement, plays a recital packed with interest at the Studebaker theater. Myra Hess is probably the most prominent woman pianist in the world. The qualifying adverb is prompted by the fact that Guimar Novaes is still concertizing. [What has become of Elly Ney?].

Miss Hess was a pupil of Tobias Matthay and formed some features of her style on his precepts. You may remember that John Blackmore, the pianist who died here a year ago or less, was among the most distinguished American exponents of the Matthay principles.

The program promises the Bach B Flat Partita, Beethoven's D Minor Sonata, and the Brahms-Handel Variations for its three high points. The middle one is the sonata which, in its composer's mind, had some vague connection with Shakespeare's "Tempest." Or perhaps he was only trying to put off some importunate questioner when he suggested a reading of the play as a clew to the meaning of the sonata. It is good to remember that the great ones of the world sometimes toss off a phrase without thinking and that these phrases, unlike the many we use to smooth the path of everyday life, are crystalized in the minds of succeeding generations as profound bits of wisdom or truth.

While Hess' exquisite piano is filling the Studebaker, Orchestra hall will reverberate with the benign and noble music of Mendelssohn's "Elijah." The Swedish Choral club has chosen the deathless oratorio for the first downtown appearance of its twentieth year of existence. The concert will be dedicated to the memory of the club's founder, Gustave Holmquist.

Portion of Chicago Symphony to Assist at Choral Concert.

He is the man who conceived the idea of uniting the excellent choirs of Chicago's Swedish churches into one impressive chorus capable of presenting some of the most exacting works in the répertoire. With the help of Edgar Nelson and Charles S. Peterson the plan became a reality.

"Elijah" is the story of the prophet of Israel who carried the fame of his Jehovah into the very temple of Baal, and brought back his wandering people to the familiar worship of their fathers.

The Swedish Choral club will have the assistance Wednesday of a portion of the Chicago Symphony orchestra and of a promising corps of soloists — Mary Ann Kaufman, Betty Power, Wesley Summerfield, and Howard Preston. Stanley Martin is scheduled for the organ accompaniments.

Choral Director to Conduct from Procious Manuscript.

Harry T. Carlson, present director of the club, is a man of excellent musicianship. The organization over which he presides reflects this quality to a remarkable degree.

Here are two sidelights which you may find interesting. The Swedish Choral club has not only made its example felt in Chicago, but has exerted a powerful influence in the old country. Two tours of Sweden resulted in the formation there of organizations similar in type.

Item number two. The printer's proof of the "Elijah" score, with Mendelssohn's corrections and revisions in his own handwriting, will be on the conductor's rack next Wednesday night. Carlson will have the overwhelming honor of being the first to use the precious manuscript since the great composer laid it aside. Mendelssohn conducted his last concerts from it just before death blacked out all his bright promise.

Percy Grainger Scheduled for Thursday Concert.

Which brings us to Thursday, and to Percy Grainger who appears as pianist and conductor with the Chicago Symphony orchestra that evening and the next afternoon.

As a composer, Grainger is best known for those lilting tunes of his that find a place on so many thousands of radio programs in the course of a year. "Country Gardens," "Mock Morris," and the rest of them prove the keenness of his liking for gay, open-hearted melody. Some of these things are not as simple as they sound. Ask any pianist who has ever tried to work the smiling "Shepherd's Hey" up to recital form.

He has written larger works which we seldom or never hear. Two of them receive Chicago premières this week, a "Hill Song" for wind orchestra, and "To a Nordic Princess" for orchestra and organ. Grainger will conduct these, and appear as pianist in the performances at the same concerts of the Carpenter Concertino and his own "Handel in the Strand" and "Spoon River."

Although Grainger is no longer a young man, the immense vitality that has sent him up and down the highways of the world so many times is showing no signs of exhaustion. He has just completed a tour of Australia and New Zealand during which he gave fifty-six recitals and made nearly three times that many broadcasts.

WILL PLAY HARPSICHORD

Dorothy Lane, who will bring the total number of harpsichordists to three when she assists Manuel and Williamson, famous exponents of the instrument, at their April 1 concert in the Goodman theater. In addition there will be two flutists and a string quartet.

Stage Letter Box

To the dramatic editor:

Chicago, March 15.—In the letter of the plays by Charles H. Hoyt, I did not see therein "A Contented Woman," written by him to star his second wife, Caroline Miskel. The writer was acquainted with him and visited at his estate at Charlestown, N. H. Mr. Hoyt willed this place to the Lambs club, a theatrical organization in New York City, for a summer playfield, when during their summer layoffs, De-Wolf Hopper, Digby Bell, Henry E. Dixey, Richard Carle, Louis Harrison, George Cohan, John Drew, and others often went there. They called these trips to New Hampshire "the gambols of a good little lamb."

DONALD LE FEVER.

April Brings Rich Schedule of Concerts

Philadelphia Symphony Program Half Bach, Half 'Gotterdammerung.'

THE complete program of the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, which plays in the Auditorium April 17, has just been released. The first half consists entirely of Bach, the second of excerpts from "Götterdämmerung." Another important announcement about events of the not so distant future concerns the spring concert of the Paulist choir. The date is April 29, the place Orchestra hall. This date, by the way, marks the opening of the Ballet Russe's final engagement of the season. And "Schwanda" is coming up for performance the week before [April 20 to 23] at Mandel hall, with Fortune Gallo and the San Carlo opera moving into the Auditorium about the same time.

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI.

Two famous colored choral groups share honors in a Civic Opera house concert this afternoon when the Olivet choir, under the direction of William H. Smith, and the Federal Glee club, conducted by William E. Myricks, combine forces for a concert designed to assist the Moses H. Jackson Memorial society. This last named organization, under the guidance of Susie E. Myers, president, has for its purpose the promotion of musical activities among the colored people of the city. It gives encouragement and financial help to talented musicians.

The two big choirs, augmented by some smaller groups, will comprise more than 300 voices. The program ranges from such taxing a capella music as Palestrina's "Adoremus Te" to modern Negro songs and spirituals.

The annual festival service of the Episcopal choirs of Chicago is scheduled for 4:30 this afternoon at Old Saint James' on the near north side. Some five hundred vested choristers will participate.

Each spring for several years now the Chicago Choirmasters' association has sponsored a festival service of this kind. The event has become one of the outstanding church music features of the season.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra's Tuesday afternoon concert this week employs no soloist. The program includes a Bach concerto, the first Mahler symphony, and three small scale modern works.

Gudmundur Kristjansson, the tenor scheduled for a Kimball hall recital Tuesday evening, draws most of his songs from the Scandinavian and Finnish répertoire. There is a group by Schubert, however, as well as two Handel airs and two old English songs. One of them is Purcell's exquisite "I Attempt from Love's Sickness to Fly."

A concert in the Chicago Woman's club theater next Wednesday night has for its purpose the raising of funds for the Order of Bookfellows' library project. A string ensemble from the Little Symphony orchestra of Chicago takes charge of the first group. After it come solos by Emery Darcy and Frances Coates.

Joseph Raieff, a Chicago pianist who studied with Allen Spencer, Josef Lhevinne, and Artur Schnabel, plays a début recital at the Studebaker next Sunday. Three dances by Schostakawitch [here is still another spelling, to add to your collection] find a place on a program whose staple items are drawn from the works of Scarlatti, Bach, Mozart, and Schumann.

The De Paul University Symphony orchestra makes its first downtown appearance a week from Tuesday at the Goodman. Wesley LaViolette, its director, includes two premières of works by Chicagoans, in accordance with his policy of using the orchestra to introduce to the public worthy manuscript compositions. The program features standard things also. After the intermission the school's chorus joins the orchestra for a performance of Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise."

A service in honor of Dr. James Henry Breasted, founder of the Oriental institute of the University of Chicago, who died last December, will be held in the university chapel Wednesday afternoon, April 1. Members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, under Dr. Stock, will play excerpts from Schubert, Beethoven, and Wagner in tribute to the man who was one of the early orchestra enthusiasts and who had a part in organizing the University Orchestral association.

Philip Manuel and Gavin Williamson, Chicago harpsichordists, present a concert at the Goodman on the night of April 1. They will have the assistance of Dorothy Lane, another harpsichord player, of a string quintet, and of Ernest Liegl and David Van Vactor, flutists.

A contest whose announced intention is to find America's most promising young pianist is sponsored by the American Matthay association. The prize is one thousand dollars, to be used for music study in England. There will be preliminary regional contests throughout the country during April with the finals scheduled for Yale university in May. Applications must be in the hands of Miss Julia Wrightington, 94 Parry street, Brookline, Mass., before April 1.

GOOD Morning!

The devil's loose in this one all right! . . . in the person of a little girl about 12 years old! Where, you wonder, did this delicately nurtured child get her knowledge of evil! On what poisoned food could her mind have fed to foul her imagination so? Your only conclusion is—can be—that Mary Tilford must have been born bad.

"These Three," is an adaptation of the much talked of play "The Children's Hour" which Mayor Kelly barred from the Chicago stage because of a perversion angle. This is missing from the photoplay, which is just as powerful an indictment against the power of a lie as was the original.

The action is dominated by the child of whom I spoke . . . a little girl who didn't want to go to boarding school, and who, to get her own way, lies about one of her young woman teachers and the fiancé of another. What she whispers in the ear of her appalled grandmother results in the emptying of the school, a libel suit, the death of faith in one woman, the utter despair of another, and the ejection of a fine, upstanding young doctor from the hospital where he has been doing notable work.

All of the acting is of the highest caliber, but it is small Bonita Granville who has the whip hand on your interest.

You first meet Mary—a colorless child with hostile eyes—motoring with her lovely and gracious grandmother, Mrs. Tilford. They encounter Karen Wright, who, with her best friend, Martha Dobie, has come to establish a school for girls in that locality. [The young women have just graduated from college and have no money, but Karen's grandmother has left her an old farmhouse. This, rehabilitated, is to be the school. And right lustily Karen and Martha—and young Dr. Cardin, who's in love with Karen—labor over the remodeling of the ramschackle old place.]

Happiness of "These Three" Threatened by Lies.

Mrs. Tilford is charmed with the idea. . . . "I knew your grandmother, my dear, and I will do all I can to help you. Mary shall come to you and I will speak to my friends who have children. . . ."

MARY: [viciously] "I don't want to go to any more old schools. You said I could have a private teacher . . ."

That's the start . . .

Mary goes to school.

How she watches! How she waits! Rosalie, a sweet, pudgy, timorous little girl into whom Mary has instilled an awful fear, becomes her catspaw. And the acts and unfounded accusations of a flighty aunt of Martha's, Mrs. Mortar, who insists on living at the school, further Mary's ends.

What happens would be unbelievable—if it weren't perfectly logical.

Bonita Granville gives a stunning—and I mean the adjective literally—performance. She is amazing. Appalling. Quite the greatest emotional child actress of her time.

"These Three"—Karen Wright, Martha Dobie, and Dr. Cardin—so innocently and tragically involved in the web of a child's lies, are splendidly interpreted by the Misses Oberon and Hopkins and Joel McCrea. Alma Kruger as Mrs. Tilford is an outstanding figure and Marcia Mae Jones as Rosalie is almost as good in her way as Bonita. Other rôles are in the right hands.

Direction—superb! Sets, photography, dialog are arresting.

I hope you won't miss "These Three." I certainly wouldn't want to.

FRED STONE, who recently celebrated his fiftieth anniversary in the show business, has decided to settle down permanently in Hollywood. He bought five acres of land near the Hollywood Country club and is going to build a twelve room Spanish house on the property for his wife and three daughters. . . . As soon as ANN SOTHERN returns from her vacation in the east, where she has been visiting her mother, she will start work on her first starring picture titled "Save a Lady." In this vehicle Miss Sothern will not be a blonde, for she has decided to go the way of all blondes and is now a "brownette."

When the cameras stop grinding and the stars are given a rest, each and every one of them relax in many varied ways: KATHARINE HEPBURN never goes to her dressing room to rest. She discusses books, golf, airplanes—anything at all not connected with films, and in that way is completely relaxed when "shooting" starts. ANN HARDING sits quietly and knits, occasionally talking about personal matters to her standin. GINGER ROGERS immediately drops into a chair and reads. FRED ASTAIRE spends his leisure moments rehersing dance steps in some obscure corner. PRESTON FOSTER finds some one—usually a cameraman, property man, electrician, or any member of the production crew to converse with, the subject is always centered on athletics, hunting, or fishing. HELEN BRODERICK has an old fashioned rocker and she rocks back and forth while she works on an afghan.

CONSTANCE CUMMINGS, who has started work at the Gaumont-British studios opposite EDMUND LOWE in "Doomed Cargo," is spending her spare time supervising the building of a new home in the Chelsea section of London. Miss Cummings, as you probably know, is married to Benn Levy, well known playwright and author—and now that she's back in her husband's native city she has decided to take domesticity seriously by studying the art of English cooking. . . . After eight years of motion picture work FREDRIC MARCH is planning to return to the New York stage next fall for one play, in which he will co-star with his wife, FLORENCE ELDRIDGE. The play they are looking for is a modern, light comedy which will give them equal opportunities. Mr. March's last stage appearance eight years ago was in "The Royal Family," the play which brought him to the attention of film producers.

See you tomorrow.

Dragons in Indiana!

McNutt Dictatorship a Sequel to Klan Misrule

Dr. Shumaker Once Boss of State

The following is the second of two articles on the Ku Klux Klan, crime, and dictatorships in the state of Indiana.

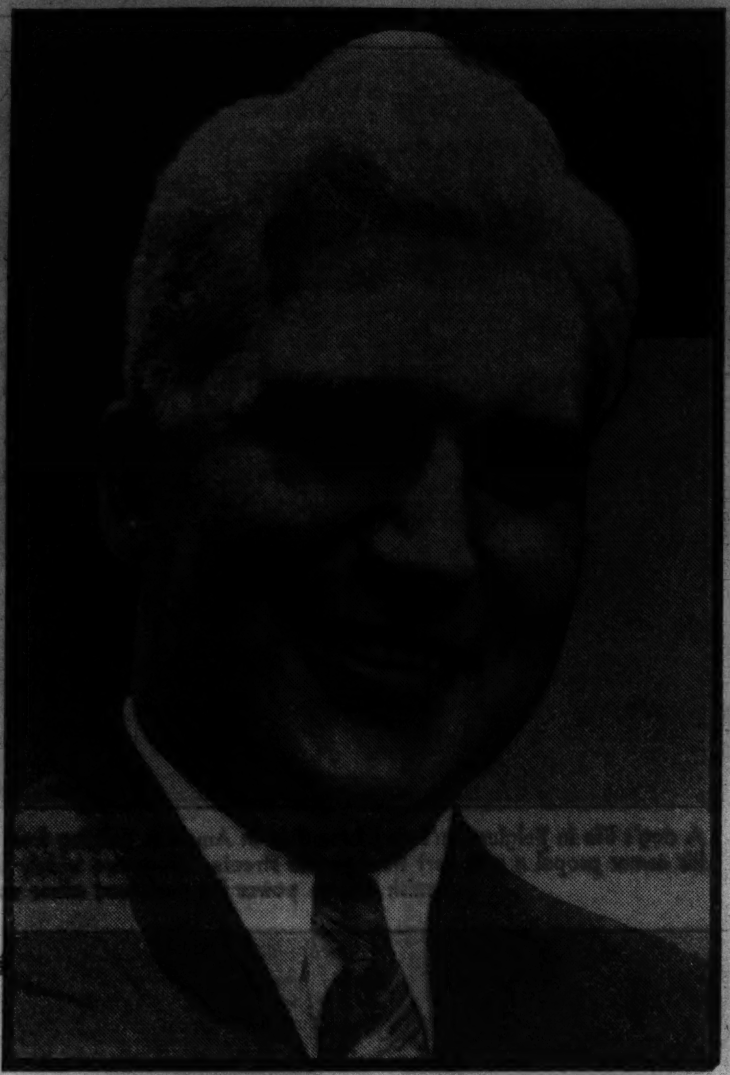
By WILLIAM SHINNICK

POLITICAL dictatorships did not cease in Indiana after D. C. Stephenson was convicted in 1925 of the murder of Madge Oberholtzer and sentenced to life in the Michigan City penitentiary.

Nor was there an end to that peculiar Indiana habit of seeking to translate fanatical moral ideas and prejudices into laws enforced against the offending individual with feral severity (particularly was this true of prohibition).

It is hardly too much to say that Indiana history in the post-1925 decade may be told in terms of (1) efforts of the public and a few outstanding champions of Americanism to hold dictators within something like sane bounds and (2) struggles to gain some reasonable legislation on alcoholic beverages.

The dictator business and the liquor business just naturally seem to twine 'round each other in the Hoosier state.



Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana. He is the latest of the Hoosier dictators. Already members of his own party in his state are in revolt against him.

Stephenson, but not the Stephenson problem, remained in Michigan City prison.

The old dragon of the Indiana klan meant it when he said at the end of his trial, "I have just begun to fight." Since the gates clanged behind him he has kept up a stream of pleas, protests, and threats.

His lawyers, seeking a retrial for him, have exhausted their stock of legal Latin. When their efforts failed he turned to protests that he was a victim of klansmen (of a faction opposed to him) sitting on the jury that convicted him or "in the seats of the mighty."

Finding such methods futile, at the end of a prison year he sent forth the word that he was willing to tell all about the political rottenness he and a number of high officials had engaged in as partners. Later he became more specific. He declared that he had signed contracts with four major politicians, each of whom had promised him huge authority and large sums of money in return for the support of his 315,000 klansmen at the polls.

Unquestionably Stephenson's charges caused great anxiety in certain quarters. But he was "too hot" for anyone to dare release him—his crime had been too revolting. The stock answer to his vituperation and his claims was, "Would you believe Stephenson?"

He retorted that all men would have to believe the documents. In October, 1926, a half-ton box of his papers was taken from storage by one of his associates and turned over to the grand jury at Indianapolis. Later the little black casket that contained the more important archives was taken to Kokomo for inspection by another grand jury.

Nothing very significant came out of this double opportunity to prove or disprove Stephenson's contentions—at least publicly. Even the black box eventually disappeared—it is not known where. One report has it that it finally reached the hands of a high Republican official in Washington (there used to be some there) and was by him suppressed.

Stephenson did produce a $2,500 check against his account, payable to Ed Jackson, who was elected governor in 1924 with klan help. The governor had cashed it. Stephenson said that this was a part of $10,000 which he had given the governor personally for campaign expenses.

Governor Jackson's story was different. He declared that Stephenson gave him the check for a horse known as The Senator. Inquiry disclosed that there really had been a horse of that name which had choked on a corncob, been taken down with pneumonia, and died incontinently of its greed and its microbes.

Confronted with the governor's story, Stephenson gave a loud laugh. The Senator, he averred, was certainly not worth more than $250, and he personally would have considered the animal no bargain at $150.

The governor was unimpressed.

"I will never be blackmailed into giving Stephenson a pardon," he said.

Jackson-Stephenson skirmishes were frequent until the governor retired, his term ended, at the beginning of 1929. Once the ex-dragon was taken from his cell to be a witness in court against the governor, but nothing much came of that.

In 1927 Governor Jackson had been indicted on a charge of attempting to give a bribe to his predecessor in office, Warren T. McCray. The federal government had long since found McCray guilty of using the mails to defraud and had sent him to spend three years in the Atlanta penitentiary.

The trial of Governor Jackson was held in February, 1928. The allegation was that in 1923 he went to the then Governor McCray and offered him $10,000 to appoint a certain lawyer county prosecutor of Marion county (Indianapolis). It was indicated that the money had come from Stephenson's klan treasury.

McCray, summoned by the state, told his story. He declared that Jackson went into his office, told him what was wanted, and informed him that if he went along he would find the $10,000 in his desk drawer.

"I informed Jackson," said McCray, "that I had lost my fortune and was about to lose my office, but that I would keep my self-respect. I told him no."

Governor McCray had appointed William H. Remy to the prosecutor's place, and Remy very distinctly was not the candidate Jackson was alleged to have supported.

Stephenson, placed on the stand, had barely started to testify sneeringly against the governor of Indiana when a technical objection was raised by the Jackson lawyers. After some argument it was held by the court that since the alleged event (attempted bribery) had occurred more than two years before, Governor Jackson was immune to prosecution. A statute of limitations made this a legal fact.

So Governor Jackson went back to his office. He said that he could have cleared himself anyhow, but that "lawyers have their ways of doing things." When some newspapers demanded that he resign "for the honor of the state" he announced that he would hold on until his term expired. He did.

Thereafter Stephenson faded vaguely into the background of his fantastic, misty charges. He told new tales, but his audience dwindled. One of them was that he was not with Madge Oberholtzer when she took the poison that caused her death. Instead, it was averred, he was with a woman relative of a high Indiana official, enjoying an amour with her in a Chicago hotel—and had remained silent to protect her reputation.

In April of 1928, in a desperate effort to win sympathy for himself, Stephenson gave a deposition to a Pittsburgh attorney seeking evidence on which to bar the Ku Klux Klan from Pennsylvania. His word painting was lurid. He recalled a klansman, he asserted, who went about the country on orders of the national klan group with the specific task of burning down Catholic churches. And he estimated the gross intake of the klan in America at $75,000,000.

We cease here to talk directly of Stephenson. He still is bombarding the courts for writs and still complaining of his fate. But he has been only a minor factor since 1928 in Indiana politics.

Other days, other dictators in Indiana. No political history of postwar Hoosierdom would be complete without mention of the Rev. Dr. E. S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon league.

He was a turbulent soul and one of the bitterest enemies the demon rum ever had. From the time he became superintendent in 1907 until a few months before his death in 1929 he made no compromise of any kind with liquor. His disapproval was heaped not only on the stuff itself but also on everybody who drank it for fun, imbibed it for medicine, or even spoke a good word for it.

Very heartily Dr. Shumaker approved the state law that made it impossible to purchase liquor legally even on a physician's certificate. Very heartily he disapproved the way Indiana juries sometimes acquitted the victims of the bone dry law, particularly if Anti-Saloon league attorneys were prosecuting and getting paid for victories.

The doctor was not the sort to mince words. His displeasure over what he called lax enforcement of the law extended to the Indiana Supreme court, and in 1926 he wrote articles in the American Issue, organ of his league, that brought a citation for contempt of the high court.

Prosecuting him was Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom, a sensible gentleman who was a dry but didn't believe in fanatical and unusual punishments for pint possessors. Dr. Shumaker never liked Mr. Gilliom much, and he liked him less when the Supreme court found him in contempt and sentenced him to sixty days in prison.

There was a long series of appeals, with the dry forces backing the doctor in his effort to keep out of jail. These failed. During the course of the litigation Mr. Gilliom learned (so he charged) that Dr. Shumaker had urged and demanded that high political figures, including Senators James E. Watson and Arthur Robinson, approach the judges of the Indiana Supreme court privately and intercede for him. This, if proved, would have constituted additional contempt, and Dr. Shumaker was tried again.

There was some conflict of testimony between the senators and the Anti-Saloon league leader. The doctor seemed to feel they had assured him they would intercede or had interceded. The senators were positive they had neither interceded nor promised to.

A product of the Hoosier state was John Dillinger, the bandit. Here Dillinger is shown in a Crown Point courtroom surrounded by deputies. Directly behind him is Deputy Sherif Blunt, whom Dillinger took along with him when he fled from the Crown Point jail in March, 1934.

In the end the Supreme court refused to increase the sentence, but was adamant in its demand that Dr. Shumaker serve the sixty days. In October, 1928, about two years after the sentence for contempt was pronounced, he went to the state penal farm at Putnamville to put in his time.

At the gates of the prison he was halted. Gov. Ed Jackson had issued him a pardon by telegraph.

The energetic Mr. Gilliom, his ire aroused anew, fought to have the pardon voided by the Supreme court. He won out, and Dr. Shumaker, giving up the fight, went to the farm on Feb. 11, 1929. As convict No. 39424 he served out his sixty days. He milked and bedded cows, made the best of things, and complained only because he was not allowed to preach to and "convert" the other prisoners (most of them liquor law violators) on Sundays.

As an interesting sidelight it may be recalled that Attorney General Gilliom, warring on the inhuman bone dry law in 1927, announced publicly that on two occasions he had personally violated that law.

"Once was when my sons were desperately ill and needed whisky as medicine," he said. "The second time was when Mrs. Ed Jackson, the governor's wife, was similarly ill and needed whisky. I got the liquor, the patients took it, and they all recovered."

This shocked Dr. Shumaker to his inmost fiber.

"The attorney general has boasted that twice he violated the law he had taken a solemn oath to God to uphold," trumpeted the dry crusader. "That renders him unfit to serve. He should quit. What he has said would justify the people in demanding his resignation."

There is a tragic aftermath to that encounter of ideas.

While he was on the prison farm Dr. Shumaker underwent a rigid course of dieting that undermined his health. When he was released he was taken to a sanitarium in Michigan for treatment and was given there a tonic called Buchu. It seemed to have a beneficial effect, and he carried a supply of the medicine back with him to Indianapolis.

There it was pointed out to the doctor that his tonic contained 23 per cent alcohol and was, by strict interpretation, illegal in Indiana. He retorted that it was not a stimulant, that the alcohol was a preservative, and that he intended to continue taking it by the spoonful.

Dr. Shumaker died soon afterward. There was never any question about his sincerity in his battle against liquor or in his views on those who felt differently. But many Indianans found it difficult to reconcile his classification of the Gilliom boys' medicinal whisky and the one, so markedly different, he gave his own Buchu.

His pardoner, Governor Jackson, had something like the same trouble with his attitude toward liquor. In 1927, shortly after the attorney general told of procuring medicinal whisky for Mrs. Jackson, the governor was asked to pardon a dry law offender caught with supplies he claimed were to be used in saving life. It was pointed out that everything seemed about fifty-fifty.

"The cases," remarked the governor testily, "are not parallel."

The pardon was refused.

From 1929 to 1933 Indiana continued to live under its harsh bone dry law. There was, however, surcease from ambitious politicians striving to impose their personal wills and prejudices, their personal power, upon the whole state. The administration of Gov. Harry G. Leslie was therefore comparatively uneventful, comparatively undramatic.

But in 1933 Indiana, ridding itself of the detestable prohibition law, came under the sway of one of the most powerful political machines ever built in the United States. It was headed, managed, and manipulated by Gov. Paul V. McNutt, who was swept into office on the Democratic landslide that elected Franklin D. Roosevelt as President.

In 1932 McNutt was an almost heroic figure. A handsome, white-haired man of barely forty, with a pleasing personality and great gifts as an orator, he carried in addition the glamor of a good war record and the prestige he had achieved as national commander of the American Legion in 1929.

A native of Indiana, of an unimpeachable Methodist family, he had been graduated from Indiana university and from the Harvard university law school. After the war he had become dean of the Indiana university law school. He was consequently popular with two extremely important and solid minority blocs of voters—the Legionnaires and the teaching profession.

There may have been something ominous in McNutt's attacks on the national Republican administration for "lack of leadership." No one could say that he failed to give Indiana leadership so marked that it bordered on dictatorship.

His promises were large and handsome. At his inauguration he pledged himself to "lower the cost of government, simplify its operations, reduce and redistribute the burden of taxes, and remove special privilege from the seats of power."

The next day he announced a detailed program. The state's governmental budget was to be balanced. A personal income tax was recommended. Opposition to a sales tax was proclaimed. The repeal of the bone dry act and arrangements to license beer were urged.

It was practically certain that what he wanted would be granted. In the legislature was a supine Democratic majority—44 members out of 50 in the senate and 91 out of 100 in the house of representatives. Under such conditions it was nowise remarkable that the governor soon began to show dictatorial ambitions.

"To bring our state government back under control," he said, "demands the centralization of power and a broad grant of authority."

The legislature passed the central control bill, which the few Republicans dubbed the "Mussolini bill." This remarkable measure threw all the subordinate branches of state government—168 of them—into eight units under the direct authority of the governor. At will he could fire and hire virtually any state employé, from a statehouse janitor to all the assistants of the attorney general.

No other state in the Union, it has been said, ever made its governor so potent as McNutt was made. His Republican minority referred to him as Emperor McNutt.

Such overlordship was galling even to members of his own party. In less than a year they began to complain. Particularly were they angered by a 2 per cent party contribution levied against the salary of every state officeholder. This was estimated to produce $120,000 annually and in the beginning was handled by the Hoosier Democratic club, composed of the close associates of the governor. The state Democratic committee was left out in the cold, and R. Earl Peters, its chairman, protested. In the first place, he said, the assessment was excessive, and in the second the committee alone had authority to collect and spend the money.

Some sort of compromise was reached, but the matter has been a sore spot among the Indiana Democrats since.

On a broader scale the McNutt administration achieved great criticism through the career of John Dillinger, the one-time farm boy who became the most notorious outlaw of modern American history.

This Dillinger was paroled from Michigan City prison in the spring of 1933. In September of that year, with his assistance, ten desperate convicts escaped from the same penitentiary. Some of them went in October to Lima, O., where they took Dillinger out of jail after murdering a sherif.

Thereafter this gang, infamous as the "Dillinger mob," brazenly showed its contempt for Indiana police forces. It raided their arsenals, robbed banks, and murdered until it was seriously suggested that the militia be called out to fight them. The state police, it should be remembered, had been combined for efficiency with the state fire marshal and the bureau of identification and investigation and placed under the control of a McNutt appointee.

When the ten men broke from prison the governor announced there would be a drastic investigation. Although it was asserted that he had displaced two-thirds of the experienced guards at Michigan City with green Democratic recruits, and that their laxity made the break possible, the official report was a whitewash. One man, a holdover assistant warden from Republican days, was dismissed.

The governor answered his critics.

"Republicans ridicule the escape of prisoners who walked out past guards inherited from Republican administrations," he said. "But who has forgotten the big parade of high Republican officials who walked into prison on the arm of the law?"

Ed Jackson, a former governor of Indiana. The klan helped put him into office.

On another occasion Governor McNutt tried to hand Dillinger over as a Republican liability.

"He was tried," declared the executive, "before a Republican judge. The judge and the prosecutor took him out and told him if he would tell certain things they would let him off with a lighter sentence. They didn't keep their word. They gave Dillinger ten to twenty years, while his partner in crime, Edgar Singleton, got two to fourteen years and was released at the end of two years. This made a criminal out of Dillinger."

The inference was that Democrats would have made a good citizen out of Dillinger if they had gotten him before he became too bad a boy. The speculation was interesting. The governor, however, did not go unchallenged.

Judge J. W. Williams of Morgan county, the Republican who sentenced Dillinger, declared that the chief executive's facts were awry. He pointed out that Dillinger pleaded guilty and was given the customary sentence when indicted for his first felony, and that Singleton had been tried before a different judge and that a jury had decided his fate. He demanded a retraction, but the governor did not retract.

Under the McNutt administration the distribution of alcoholic beverages in quantity has become a political privilege in Indiana. It must be a profitable form of monopoly; Indianans have to pay more for their beer and liquor, by the keg or bottle, than do residents of other states.

In 1933 the overwhelming Democratic majority in the legislature jammed through what was called a beer bill. This bill barred the sale of draft beer; only in bottles could it be dispensed. And a bottle could be sold only with a lunch. The cracker that a saloonkeeper served with his beer became a standing joke.

"You're going to have to get a new cracker next week," the patron would say to the bartender. "This one's about worn out."

The only legal dispensers of hard liquors were druggists, and each customer had to sign a register when he got a bottle.

This law was so funny in many respects that nobody paid much attention to it. In fact, it was nullified by general consent. The situation was so bad that the administration passed a new law in 1935. The manner of the passage was characteristic. Rules were suspended and there was little or no debate. The die-hard Republican minority members of the legislature bolted the session in disgust, loudly complaining of "McNutt's czaristic flouting of orderly parliamentary procedure."

So far as personal drinking and retailing are concerned this new law is vague. Often it is ambiguous. Two of its provisions, that all sales of alcoholic beverages on Sunday are barred and that there must be no "rural" taverns, are openly disregarded in many sections. But when it comes to manufacture and wholesale distribution the law is far from vague.

It sets up a liquor dictatorship under a politically appointed alcoholic beverages commission. This commission can approve or disapprove any application for a license to manufacture or wholesale. Whether any occur or not, the system is one peculiarly susceptible to promoting shakedowns.

The number of breweries that can operate in Indiana is limited under the law. There can be but one to each 175,000 population, and the license fee is only $2,000. The possession of a franchise to make beer is valuable not only because of this monopolistic regulation but also because it is made extremely difficult to take into the state beer manufactured on the outside.

Under the law an Illinois brewer, for instance, would have to obtain a "port of entry" license, which costs $1,500, and pay a license fee as a wholesaler of $1,000. Only fifty importing licenses can be issued. Actually only thirteen have been taken out. Brewers on the outside have in general decided that they cannot afford to try to dispense their product in the Hoosier state.

The 1933 law had an importing clause that was even more difficult to overcome.

Rum Racket a Political Privilege

In September, 1934, three large brewing corporations—Pabst-Premier, Anheuser Busch, and Schlitz—filed a suit in the federal court at Indianapolis seeking to enjoin the state from enforcing provisions of the law relating to importing.

It charged that Paul Fry, head of the alcoholic beverages commission and a henchman of Governor McNutt, as well as an agent selling light trucks that might well be used in beer deliveries, had been granted "absolute and unrestrained power as it suits his personal pleasure and will." Such a broad grant of power to one man, the suit maintained, was unconstitutional and the law inoperative.

The suit also alleged that the Kiley Breweries, Inc., of Marion, which had been granted the importing privilege in the Fourth district, was allied and associated with the Kiley Brewing company of Marion, which makes what is known as Patrick Henry beer. Was it not likely, the petitioners asked, that the importer would use his license as a means to prevent foreign beer coming in to compete with the associate rather than promote imported beer sales?

This Kiley Brewing company was formed in 1933 to take over an existing brewery property. Its product is known through Indiana as "political heat" beer because it is rumored to have the favor of highly placed political officials.

Indiana places a tax of $1 a gallon on hard liquor and 3 1-3 cents a gallon on beer. It is asserted that, because of this tax and of political monopolies, Indiana-made beer is shipped to other states and sold to retailers at a lower price than the Indiana retailer must pay.

It is common talk that political influence is needed before a business man can get any kind of permit to sell liquors in the state, also that surety bonds must be written through the "right agent," and that even furniture and other equipment must be purchased from dealers who are on good terms with the state administration.

The 1933 and 1935 Indiana liquor laws were written by Frank McHale, Logansport attorney, former state commander of the American Legion and one of the governor's closest associates. The present law is what Governor McNutt wanted it to be.

Things are not so easy nowadays with the McNutt dictatorship. It had out-New Dealed the New Deal in its days of supremacy. But early in 1935, when the governor presented to his legislature a state NRA bill that would have given him the power to fix prices at which merchandise could be sold, there was a revolt. There was such a storm of protest from business men all over the state that the bill was amended to take this feature out.

Governor McNutt in his last year of office (under the constitution he cannot be elected governor again) still has dictatorial powers. But the opposition within his own party is growing. It has in fact already grown to great proportions. His own ex-patronage secretary, Pleas Greenlee, is at outs with him and is a leading candidate for the governorship.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys declared his independence of the machine last summer.

"Lifelong Democrats in all walks of life complain to me," he said, "that they haven't a voice under the present dictatorship. You can count on your fingers the men who dominate the Democratic party here now. I intend to organize from the precinct up against it. The next governor must not be a McNutt man."

Liquor and beer, dictatorship and repressive laws and "special privilege in the seats of power"—that, remember, is a McNutt phrase—are still the scourges that Indiana, just as in the days of Stephenson and Dr. Shumaker, is struggling wearily to destroy.

Where Galileo Galilei, doctor of medicine, mathematician, and astronomer, lived and wrought and some of the highlights in his career.

Astronomers Still Bow at the Shrine of Galileo

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

ONE Sunday morning in 1581 during religious services in the cathedral at Pisa a handsome, well dressed youth of seventeen named Galileo Galilei became a trifle bored with spiritual things. His gaze roamed idly and finally came to rest on a slowly swinging lamp. Suddenly he became intent on this not unusual sight, and at the same time began to feel his pulse. This moment as much as any other can be considered the birth of modern science.

Galileo was the scion of an impoverished but once distinguished Florentine family. To understand his career it is necessary to describe briefly the prevailing attitude among the intellectuals of his day. The political, social, and economic structure of the middle ages was crumbling under the impact of modern forces, but medieval forms were still supreme in the scientific world.

A medieval society did not encourage rugged individualism in either deed or thought. The church had long maintained its position as the supreme arbiter of all things of the spirit, and the Bible was recognized throughout Christendom as the true, complete, and immutable authority on such subjects.

Since everyone accepted without question the doctrin of revealed truth, and since Europe, but recently risen from the barbarism of the dark ages, had accomplished little in the way of scientific discovery, it is not surprising that the medieval professors, all servants of the church, should turn to the past to find an unquestionable authority on science. But as the Bible deals with morals and theology rather than with physics and chemistry, the medieval universities had to choose two pagans as their authorities, Galen in medicine and Aristotle for the other sciences.

This belief that everything worth knowing had long since been discovered was a comforting one to many scholars, but it was hardly conducive to the carrying out of original research. Whenever an observed fact was found to disagree with Aristotle it was generally assumed that the observer was wrong or that the observed phenomenon was an abnormality. When Vesalius, a successor of Galileo, wrote a book on anatomy based on actual observation and contradicting Galen in several details, his old professor warmly criticized the new book, mournfully declaring that the human body seemed to have changed since the days of Galen and that the changes had not been for the better.

It was almost inevitable that young Galileo, clever, talented, and more than a little arrogant, should enter this intellectual world and should clash with its leaders. He was extraordinarily gifted in so many lines that he had some trouble making up his mind as to what profession to follow. He hovered undecidedly over those of poet, painter, and priest until his father ordered him to study medicine. He then entered the University of Pisa, and shortly thereafter saw the swinging lamp.

By timing the swings by means of his pulse beat Galileo for the first time observed the fact that the time of a particular pendulum's swing is always the same no matter what its extent. Shortly thereafter, while still enthused by his discovery, he happened, on a visit to the grand duke's palace, accidentally to overhear one Ostillo Ricci giving a geometry lesson to the pages of the court. Entranced with the hitherto unknown world of mathematics, Galileo abandoned his medical career and studied mathematics under Ricci.

In 1585 he quit school for lack of money and returned to Florence. Nowadays a young man faced with this difficulty would try to get a fellowship, but in 1585 it was necessary to acquire a patron. A patron was a rich man who paid the bills of a poor young scholar or artist and in return had books dedicated to him or had his picture painted in a fresco as that of an angel or saint. Young Galileo set to work and invented a hydrostatic balance for determining densities, which so impressed the Marchese Guidubaldo del Monte that he became the young man's patron. It was a good choice for both, as the marchese was a man of considerable wealth and excellent political connections.

In 1588, at the age of twenty-four, Galileo became a lecturer at Pisa, where his rise to fame was meteoric. Within a few years he discovered the law governing falling bodies. Nearly two thousand years before Aristotle had logically deduced that the speed of a falling body was proportional to its weight. During the intervening time it had never occurred to anyone to test this conclusion experimentally. Galileo demonstrated that the speed is always the same, regardless of the weight, in a memorable experiment in which he dropped stones of different sizes off of the leaning tower.

Tower of Pisa where Galileo demonstrated to skeptics that objects of different weights, dropped from a height, would reach the earth at the same instant.

Observing that the speed increased with the distance the body fell, he assumed that this change must follow some simple law. Could the speed be proportional to the distance the body had fallen? If so, then at the start of the fall its speed must be zero, since it had not traveled any distance. But if its speed were zero it could not move and would stand motionless in midair, which was contrary to fact. He then concluded that the speed must be proportional to the time of the fall. Since he did not have a watch accurate enough to check this conclusion directly, he deduced the fact that a ball rolling down an incline follows the same laws, but at a lesser rate, than does a falling body. By this method he checked his theory experimentally and found it to be correct.

His early success had been a little too great for his own good. Although still in his twenties, he was arrogant enough to insult the older and more orthodox professors and soon had a host of influential enemies. The climax came when he cruelly ridiculed a machine invented by an illegitimate cousin of the Medici, the ruling family of Tuscany. He was immediately dismissed from the university.

His patron persuaded the Venetian government in 1592 to make his brilliant protégé a professor at the University of Padua. Here Galileo behaved more prudently and in a dozen years became the highest-paid professor in all Italy, with an annual salary of a thousand florins. What is still more important, he continued his studies on motion and also invented the proportional compass and the thermometer.

In 1609 he first saw a telescope, recently invented by a Dutch spectacle maker and consisting of two convex lenses fastened in a tube. He immediately improved it by replacing one of the lenses by a concave one, and further refined the instrument until he could get a thirtyfold magnification. He turned his attention to astronomy, and within a few years discovered sun spots, the mountains on the moon, the stars of the Milky Way, and the moons of Jupiter.

Nearly a century before a Polish monk named Copernicus had conceived a theory that the earth revolved around the sun. We do not see any connection today between the relative motions of sun and earth and the relation of man to his Creator, but several centuries ago quite a few people believed it sacrilegious to imply that the Lord would station his noblest creation on anything less than the center of the universe. Consequently Copernicus himself arranged to have the theory published only after his death, and no one dared accept it openly for many years.

Galileo's findings convinced him of the truth of the Copernican theory, and with characteristic fervor he became its champion. With his biting satire he soon succeeded in thoroughly outraging a number of influential clergymen and scholars. The upshot was that in 1616 he was summoned before Cardinal Bellarmin and ordered to concern himself in the future with experimental physics rather than cosmic theories.

In 1623 his good friend Cardinal Barbarini became Pope Urban VIII. Believing himself safe from ecclesiastical interference, Galileo began work on his book, "Dialogs on the Two Great Systems of the Universe," in which he definitly advocated the theory of Copernicus. Feeling free to speak out at last, he lashed his orthodox colleagues with the ten-year accumulation of witty abuse that he had been keeping unsaid.

His book appeared in 1632, and he was at once summoned to Rome to face the Inquisition. Under threat of torture he quickly recanted his stand and promised to refrain from all future discussion of a heliocentric universe. He was given a nominal prison sentence which was not carried into effect.

According to legend, after Galileo's tormenters had wrung from him a humiliating statement of his error in believing that the earth moved around the sun, the old man suddenly arose and faced them defiantly, muttering, "But it does move." Unfortunately, there is no evidence that this incident ever took place.

As a matter of fact, the trial was by no means as sinister an affair as it appeared. The members of the court were largely Galileo's friends, or at least admirers of his scientific accomplishments. Their attitude was possibly similar to that of a modern college board of trustees in dealing with a distinguished but eccentric old professor who had suddenly begun loudly to advocate free love. They had no desire to punish Galileo or to deprive him of his honors. They merely wanted to scare him, so that he would come to his senses and realize the responsibilities of his position.

Galileo himself did not appear to have been permanently embittered by the affair, inasmuch as he stayed on for a while in Rome as the personal guest of one of his inquisitors. In all probability he felt relieved at having escaped more serious punishment. He was an old man and had become too much accustomed to his wealth and honors to care to become a scientific martyr.

The remainder of his life was spent in close retirement. In 1638 he published his second great book, "Dialogs on the New Science," in which he summed up his findings on the less controversial subject of moving bodies. About this time he became blind, but continued to direct his students with undiminished vigor. In one of his last papers, which he dictated, he suggests the use of the pendulum in clocks. He died in 1642 at the age of seventy-eight.

Galileo's contributions to science were profoundly important in two respects. His actual discoveries have been outlined. He blazed a trail into the then untouched field of the mathematics of moving bodies, and his astronomical findings contributed more to the acceptance of the Copernican theory than those of any other man. But perhaps more important was the fact that he threw the weight of his reputation against the scientific restrictions of the middle ages. At the time he appeared to have lost, but medievalism never recovered from the encounter.

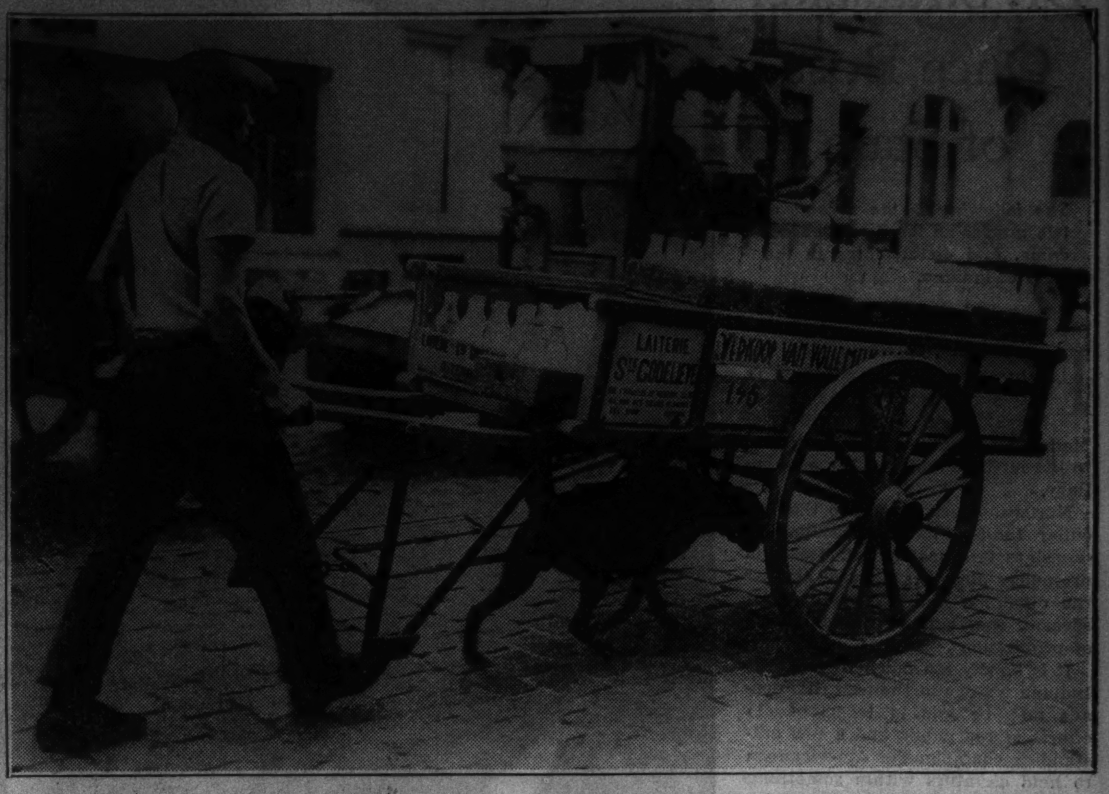
Dog Owners Have Their Problems

ALTHOUGH it's a lot of fun to own a dog, there isn't any doubt but that ownership of a dog of any kind brings new responsibilities and problems. At least, such is our experience. Some of the problems are amusing and it's fun to solve them, especially if they involve unexpected traits or quirks in a dog's disposition.

Looking over the mail bag the other day, we jotted down a few of the many problems that readers sent in by way of illustrating the variety of dog troubles that may bother the owner. The list also indicates what a gay life one leads when he tries to help solve dog problems! Before we turn the department into a trouble-shooting section today let's look at some of the typical questions that are apt to come in the mail bag:

1. What breed of watchdog will not be "humiliated" by having a woman for a "master"? 2. The causes of falling hair on a dog? 3. Where can one get a Yankee terrier? 4. At what age can a little cocker spaniel be fed prepared dog food? 5. Do you know how a boy can win his parents' permission to own a dog? 6. Why do dogs eat refuse, carrion, or filth? 7. What are the natural characteristics of the Sealyham terrier? 8. How do you feed a smooth-haired fox terrier puppy? 9. What is an Italian "spinoney dog"?



A dog's life in Belgium isn't so pleasant as in America, judging from this picture of a husky dog helping his owner propel a milk cart through the streets. Dogs are widely used in some European countries to furnish motive power for carts and other conveyances. (Acme photo.)

Jockel V. Burgund, sensational Doberman Pinscher judged best Doberman in the New York dog show last month. The animal was imported by William Schafer of Glenview, Ill., for Owen A. West of Lake Forest, Ill. It has been entered in the coming Chicago show.

These are just a few of the problems and questions that give us a running start on the question and answer department for today. We have selected letters to answer as follows:

"Recently I bought a pedigreed cocker spaniel. She is just three months old. The former owner tells me the puppy is too young to get raw meat. I have given her raw hamburger about once a week, and it didn't seem to hurt her at all. Can you advise me on feeding the little cocker?—Mrs. H. B. B."

Your cocker can get meat, either cooked or raw, every day. Puppies are given small amounts of ground meat even before they are weaned. We are sending you a free leaflet on feeding a dog and also suggesting a good book on cocker spaniels.

"Recently I was approached by a man who tried to sell me an 'Italian spinoney.' He claims that the breed is excellent for hunting. Could you give me any information about the breed?—Frank B."

The spinoni (correct spelling) is a rare, unrecognized breed in this country that also is called the Italian griffon. It has a harsh, wiry coat that suggests the wire-haired griffon, stands around 25 or 26 inches at the shoulder, and is a dog that points when on game. Good retriever, too, so it is known as something of an all-around hunting dog in Europe. We have not heard of any of these dogs around Chicago, although a few are being registered in this country.

"I have just received a smooth fox terrier pup. I would appreciate it if you would send me information on the care of this pup. If it is possible, please send it C. O. D.—Joseph S. V."

Information that you need first of all is that pertaining to the feeding of a puppy, its general care, and housebreaking. This department has two free leaflets, one on feeding and one on worming, that are being sent to you. You should, however, study a book on the care of a pup. We are suggesting one or two that will give you sound advice. Nothing ever sent out from this department goes collect on delivery. If your pup is very young it should be fed at least four times a day, and it should be given meat, either cooked or ground, every day in addition to other foods as listed in the leaflet.

"I have a four-month-old puppy. When can I give it a bath? I am feeding it whole wheat bread, warm milk, a little cottage cheese, and once a day a little cooked ground beef. When can I feed this pup prepared dog foods?—Mrs. I. M. R."

It might be advisable not to bathe the pup until the weather gets warmer. A little pup really doesn't need a bath if you comb and brush it thoroughly, especially if you put a few drops of pine oil on the brush. The combing and brushing will remove practically all of the dirt from the skin and coat, and the oil kills the doggy odor.

Don't be afraid to feed your pup a well made prepared food, either dry or canned. We have been watching a litter of five pups grow into regular huskies on a diet that contains a prepared meal food. Your dog can be given broken biscuit (or a meal) moistened as per directions given on the package. Such a food would, in our estimation, be better than so much whole wheat bread, because a well made dry food contains meat, vitamins, bone meal, and other food elements that are good for dogs.

DOG NOTES

A number of veterinarians have approved The Tribune's recently published handbook on dogs entitled "The Dog Book." Among the recent letters received is the following from O. Norling Christensen:

My heartiest congratulations on your excellent "Dog Book." I hope that every dog owner and dog lover will be able to obtain a copy of this book.

The entire staf of my three veterinary hospitals are recommending this book to clients.

With best wishes for the future work you will do for the dog, I remain sincerely yours,

O. NORLING CHRISTENSEN.

"The Dog Book" is a 92-page handbook with helpful information for the dog owner who wants tips on how to feed a puppy or an adult dog, grooming, housebreaking, and other problems. It contains 72 illustrations, including a series of beautiful breed pictures that will help the prospective buyer of a dog decide on which breed to obtain. The book sells for 25 cents over the counter at the Tribune public service office, 1 South Dearborn street, or in any book store. By mail the price is 30 cents.

The recent subzero weather and heavy snows developed many interesting dog stories. One of the most unusual of these appeared in the Wheeling (W. Va.) News. The story concerns the members of a Pennsylvania railroad freight crew and their saving of a hunting dog.

The dog, a beagle, was caught in a wire fence near Cambridge, O. The train crew saw the dog and assumed it was dead. On their return trip the dog was still there and showed signs of life. Since the thermometer registered 14 below zero, the plight of the little animal touched the railroaders. The long string of cars was brought to a complete stop and the dog was rescued.

The hound responded to treatment and has been adopted by the train crew.

Madam, Be Charming!

The Ugly Duckling Has Become a Swan

Transformation of Miss X Is Possible to All

This is the last of three articles by Eleanor Nangle describing how the plain woman may attain poise and beauty

By ELEANOR NANGLE

THE UGLY DUCKLING who would be a swan can be any age. Miss X, the subject of the experiment we conducted to prove that every woman, even the most hopeless looking, has within her the elements of good looks of one sort or another, was close to 30. But the same sort of transformation can be effected in women either younger or older.

You can be better looking this spring than you've ever been before, with a more brightly burnished personality. You can be a prettier 20, a handsomer 40, or a more stunning 60 if you really set your mind to it and do your beauty shopping carefully.

As in the case of Miss X, problems to be solved probably will fall in three categories. The first is the one of symmetry. The too fat, the too thin must first bring their weight to par. The disproportionate must make the tape measure tell a more agreeable story. The woman whose weight is about average, but whose step lacks the spring of youth and whose carriage is droopy and old must become posture conscious.

This problem of correcting faults of symmetry is not insurmountable unless there is a physical defect that cannot be corrected. The physician can advise the too fat or the too thin; their own intelligence and will power will do the rest. The others, the ones whose weight is all right, but who don't carry their clothes well because of drooping shoulders or prominent abdomen, need corrective exercise. This was Miss X's problem of symmetry, and it was completely solved after a course of exercise and instruction in the body department of a Chicago beauty salon. It took time, and patience, but it worked! It was a most dramatic youth restorer.

After proportion and symmetry we considered the other essentials of beauty—skin, hands, and hair. There was plenty of corrective work to be done. As described last week Miss X was given a course of facials in a Chicago salon. This was designed to clarify and refine her skin and to brace up the contour a bit. Her hands were subjected to a series of scientific oil manicures, followed by hand massage. These improved the shape of the nails and softened and whitened the skin.

Since it is imperative that the condition of the hair be made as perfect as possible before it will lend itself well to even the smartest of coiffures Miss X was given a course of hair reconditioning treatments prior to the search for the new and better hair style. These were designed primarily to restore luster, which had disappeared after a series of inexpert permanents. And Miss X, like so many women, had lost sight of the fact that the old fashioned hair brush, wielded daily, is heaven's gift to the woman who wants beautiful hair.

"A hundred strokes a day" was Miss X's home work. A good brush with firm, long, elastic bristles was used, with a vibratory motion at the point where it touched the scalp. The scalp was stimulated, the hair strands polished. Wave or no wave, the hair was brushed night and morning. In less than two weeks luster had improved considerably. The hair reconditioning treatments obtained in a Chicago shop did the rest—restored the natural oil and conquered dandruff.

In these treatments vigorous massage of the scalp is the first step. Next a salve is worked in to loosen dandruff. The hair is brushed vigorously. In the shampoo that follows no soap is applied directly. Suds of a special soap are worked up lavishly in very hot water and a sponge is used to clean hair and scalp with the suds alone. The scalp and hair strands are thoroughly scrubbed with the saturated sponge.

An herbal solution that brings out the natural highlights of color is added to the final rinsing water and the hair is hand dried, a valuable feature of the reconditioning treatment.

The woman who wants to make herself over and who finds that the bedraggled appearance of her hair is a stumbling block shouldn't feel that her hair can be reclaimed by a smart style and a bit of brilliantine. Here one must get at the fundamentals, doing completely away with dryness, dandruff, and dinginess. Then on to victory with a style individual, smart, and becoming.

In the case of Miss X the hairdress was a piquant, picturesque one, with a fringe over the brow, hair waved up from the ear and then gathered in back in a high cluster of curls. It was designed for her by a Chicago stylist, one who considered her type and facial contour in choosing the style.

As the pictures indicate the most striking change made in our plain looking girl was effected by the hair style, but when one considers only her face it is apparent that the most dramatic improvement was brought about by skilful eyebrow grooming. Here the natural brow line was heightened a bit and emphasized. The small straggling hairs that grew down over the upper lid were removed. This immediately gave the illusion of greater space between brow and eye. Both brows and lashes were darkened; the natural color was a drab brown, which did nothing to glorify eyes that needed glorification so sadly.

Our Miss X before she sought and found charm and improved her appearance. Transformation made in a few weeks.

Miss X after her search was ended. Her complexion has improved with health and care, and a new coiffure changes her type completely.

Time and Patience Produce the Desired Results

The externals of eyebrow, hair, hands, and skin having been improved as much as possible we went on in the transformation of Miss X to the somewhat difficult and always individual problem of giving her style.

Having changed her appearance so radically, it was essential for Miss X to change her manner of dressing. Before she became a pert, pretty butterfly she had followed the line of least resistance where clothes were concerned. Brown and beige were her standbys in color; she felt, as so many brunettes do, that these were safe and "always good." And of course they are, but they're hardly exciting.

Frocks that were individual, which once she felt she could not carry off because they were perhaps too chic or too youthful, were the first to catch her eye in her new rôle of attractive woman. A dashing red hat was one of her first purchases after she was given her new hairdress.

Miss X got cosmetic conscious and perfume conscious. The small but tremendously important trifles of feminine enhancement she gave their share of thought. There can be no denying that from now on Miss X will be a thoroughly feminine person, discontented unless her personality is expressed in her physical appearance, clothes, and manner.

Miss X became a beauty—or at least beautiful enough to get by in this era of individuality with flying colors. Every woman can do likewise. But it isn't too easy. It takes money; but even more than that it demands taste, time, patience, and perseverance, plus some careful beauty shopping.

For a great many women money will appear to be the stumbling block, but when one considers the expensive spasmodic efforts at beautification and the money spent uselessly on clothes that are mistakes, the advantages of budgeting for the transformation venture are obvious.

There are some women with shrewd shopping sense, but they are few in comparison with the great number who try first this and then that in the way of beauty aids, wasting much money.

The length of time necessary to make oneself over will, of course, depend entirely on individual needs. The women who have no trying defects that require long and careful treatment can do the trick with a new and nobby coiffure and some makeup advice, plus a new approach to the problem of expressing themselves in the clothes they choose.

The most important fact to grasp is that transformation can be effected. Beauty treatments can forestall the marks of age and even banish some of those already acquired.

Work up the will to change yourself if you sense that change is needed. Decide you won't be the sort of woman who blends into the background, who has no distinction either of homeliness or great beauty. Get a good grasp on your will power and your feminine instinct to be charming and go to work.

Plan a campaign carefully. If you're 40 and getting fat, reduce. If you're 20 and looking 30, find out why and correct the cause. If your clothes never quite click, learn about coördinating your wardrobe, with every piece of fabric, every color and every frock chosen in its useful and good looking relation to everything else you own.

In other words, madame, be charming. Don't sit around waiting for a kind providence to change you. Change yourself. It can be done!

A closeup of the somewhat small, lined eyes of Miss X before her transformation. Eyebrows were natural but ungroomed and lashes were sparse. What beauty her eyes had was completely obscured by neglect. Not even eye makeup could help.

Here are Miss X's eyes after a thorough treatment. Most important change is in the eyebrow line, groomed and shaped to make the eyes look larger. Skilful makeup and some daily brushing of the brows and lashes complete the change.

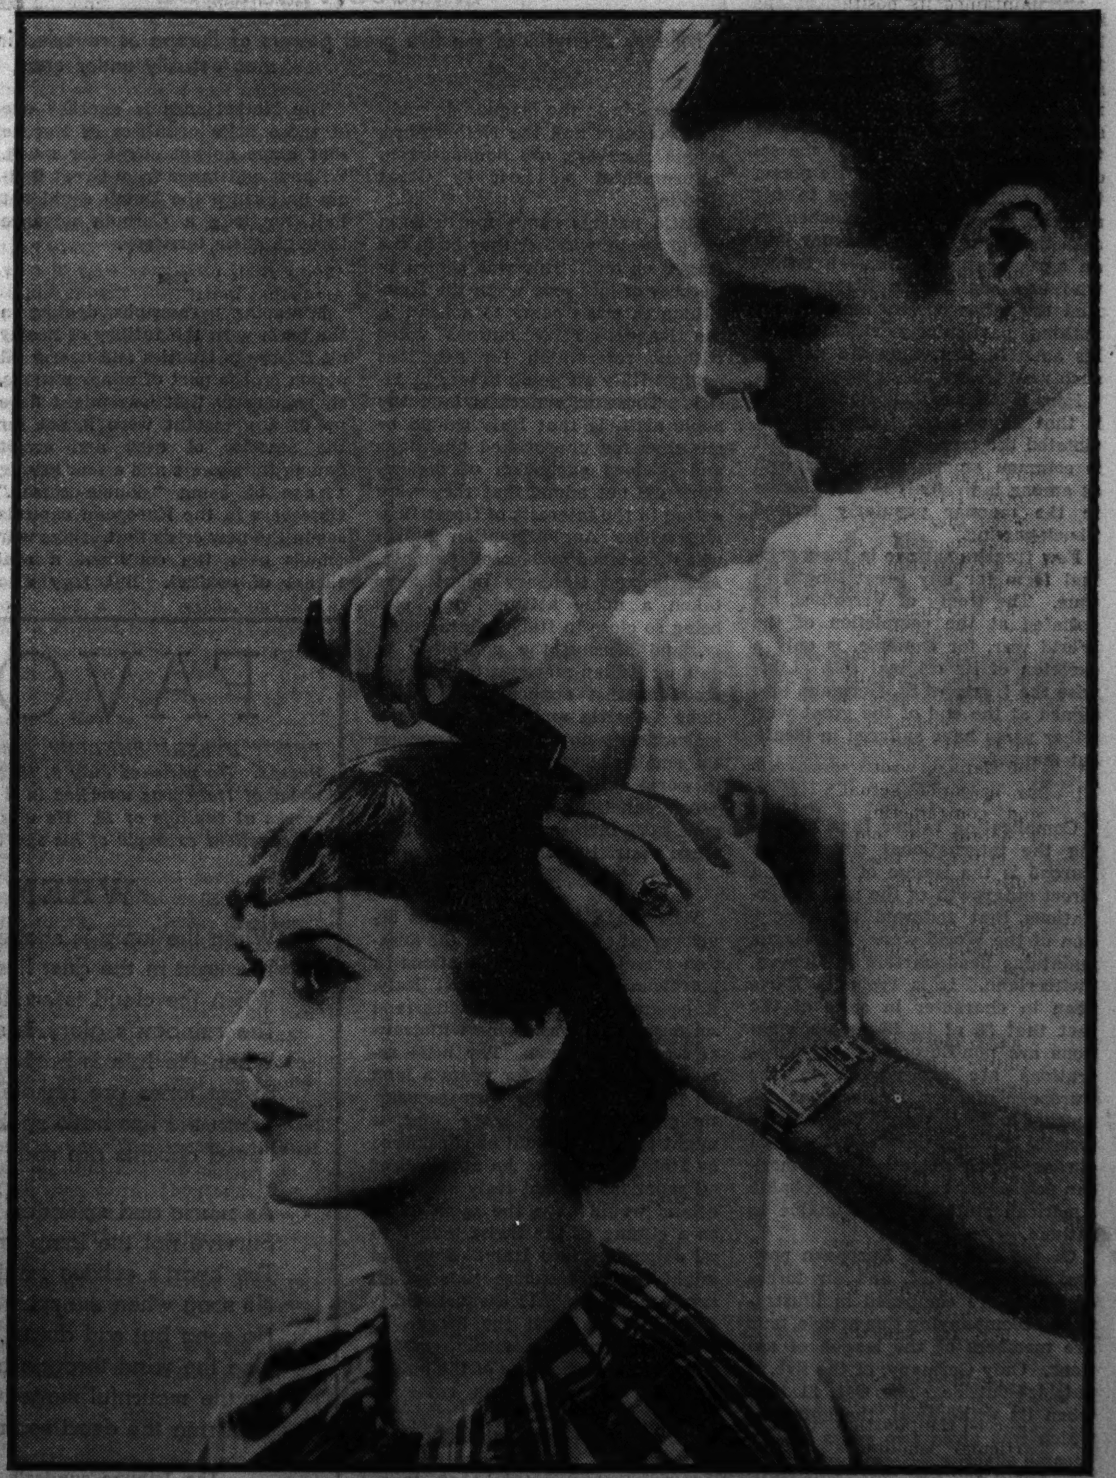
Miss X in the hands of the Chicago "eye specialist." Brow grooming, darkening of brows and lashes, and instructions on how to make the most of her orbs effected the greatest change in her face.

Hallelujah! Miss X is good looking at last. Some money, time, perseverance, and careful shopping transform the plain girl into a distinctly pretty one.



A Chicago hair stylist does his bit toward helping Miss X in her search for distinctive beauty. The fringe that dramatizes her eyes and the demure curls were his contribution.

Endless Chain of Treaties Keeps Europe at War Pitch

Fear of Conflict Grows as Distances Become Shorter

assistance from other nations. And each promise of assistance must be bolstered up by pledges of aid from other nations. The whole scheme of international politics in Europe today is an endless chain—everything hinging upon secret promises, that in turn depend upon other pledges, that in turn . . . and so on.

Britain, voicing its demands in the council of the league of nations, calls upon France, among other nations, to join in oil sanctions against Italy. But France is not especially interested in the subject, since Mussolini's actions in Africa do not jeopardize French colonial territory. France urges Great Britain to join in an ultimatum to Germany warning Hitler not to build fortifications in the Rhineland. But Britain is only mildly interested in the subject, the militarizing of the Rhineland in no way threatening the security of the British Isles, and the new British sovereign, Edward VIII., openly professing fresh friendship for the Germans. The French idea, of course, is that if Hitler ignores the wishes of the signatories to the Locarno treaty those signatory nations must send their soldiers, armed for war, into the Rhineland to teach the Germans a lesson.

The principal factor of evil in the European political picture—the one thing which above all others has caused the peace of the world to be threatened from time to time—is the previously mentioned endless chain of treaties and compacts between nations and groups of nations, a majority of them secret. A scrutiny of the series of six maps upon this page will reveal how since 1914, the year of the beginning of the World war, the national alignment of Europe has been changing. Nations which are friendly today may be enemies tomorrow. Treaties, after all, are merely scraps of paper. This was demonstrated when the German war machine rolled into Belgium late in the summer of 1914. Again it was demonstrated when Italy, one of the triple alliance with Germany and Austria, went to war on the side of Great Britain and France. Time and time again since those two outstanding examples of treaty-breaking have nations of Europe gone back on their word.

Though a debt is not exactly the same as a treaty, its obligations should be at least as binding, if not more so, than those of a treaty. Yet the world has seen how the great powers of Europe regard their war debts to the United States. They just don't pay. In effect the debts have been repudiated. There still is money in Europe for creating huge armies and navies, but apparently none for paying debts. Nations that default in their obligations when they actually are in position to pay cannot be expected, of course, to adhere strictly to the terms of the treaties that they have entered into with other nations when these treaties in any way limit or restrict their actions. That is the nice thing about treaties—from the viewpoint of the European nation. They can be disregarded with impunity. And the nation apparently does not lose face among other nations.

Hitler, the German dictator, for instance, violates the Locarno treaty by rearming the Rhineland. In effect he declares the treaty is no good—a dead document. He tosses it aside and at the same moment suggests to the signatories of the treaty a new agreement for the security of central Europe. He seems to see nothing incongruous in his act. He is not shamefaced when he asks the other powers to enter into an agreement with him—a fellow who has just broken his promise. And the other powers seem to see nothing particularly villainous in his act. In fact, they are used to such maneuvers.

Herr Hitler's explanation of it all is that France, not Germany, first violated the terms of the treaty. It is common among nations as well as among individuals to shift blame in the manner popularly termed "buck-passing."

Few treaties survive in their original form for any great length of time. The treaty of Versailles, negotiated at the completion of the World war, for example, is only a skeleton of its original self. Likewise the treaty of St. Germain, also signed at the end of the great war. Other pacts have suffered in identical manner.

Complicating rather than clarifying the international situation in Europe is the league of nations, a direct outgrowth of the peace negotiations that followed the conclusion of the World war. The league maintains headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland. It is typically European in character in spite of the fact that 39 of its 58 member nations are non-European. Its deliberations are carried on in the European manner, its decisions are reached in the European way. There usually is a vagueness about its conclusions—an ambiguity that American newspaper readers and probably American statesmen are unable to fathom.

Of the five great European powers, armies, navies, and air forces of which are compared in illustrations accompanying this article, four are members of the league of nations. Only Germany, of the five, is outside—outside since Oct. 21 last, when its withdrawal, the notice of which was given two years before, became effective. Germany quit the league because it was denied equality of armament. Since that time it has been building up its army, navy, and air force (greatly restricted by the Versailles treaty), until now its various arms of defense and offense compare favorably with those of the other major powers. It was only a year ago, however (March 16, 1935), that Hitler announced openly to the world the reintroduction of compulsory military training in Germany—only a year ago that the Fuehrer publicly issued his challenge to the rest of the world.

With the United States and Japan—powers as important in world affairs as Great Britain, France, or Russia—outside of the league of nations, international intrigues consequently center in the territory shown on the map on the first page of this section. The capitals of Europe are so close together today, what with modern aerial transportation and swift travel by land or sea, that the continent can be said to be one great hotbed of plots.

Great Britain, France, Italy, and Russia, because of their importance as world powers, wield considerably more influence in the league of nations than do the smaller countries. Great Britain's position in the league is especially strong, due to the fact that Canada, India, the Irish Free State, New Zealand, Australia, and South Africa, all linked to the United Kingdom in the British empire, each has an individual membership in the league. In addition Portugal and the Netherlands, league members, are dominated in governmental action by Great Britain.

Little nations count for little in world affairs whether they be in the league or out. This was shown in October of last year when the Italo-Ethiopian crisis came to a head in the league. Fifty nations voted without reservation for sanctions against Italy for going to war in Africa. These fifty nations took the noble attitude that Italy should be punished for unprovoked hostilities and obvious expansion of empire. They did not admit that they were acting in the interests of Great Britain, whose Anglo-Egyptian Sudan was threatened by Mussolini's move. Austria and Hungary might have taken a noble attitude, too, but, being so close to Italy geographically, and sensing the possibility of gaining Italian markets, they wisely stood against application of sanctions. Austria and Hungary, being insignificant nationally, are among the small nations that do not count in world affairs.

And sanctions against Italy have gone little farther than unimportant trade restrictions.

When in a league of nations development of recent weeks the question arose of voting oil sanctions (a petroleum embargo) against Italy, it became known that Switzerland seriously was considering withdrawal from the league. The little republic in the Alps, for years a land of peace, sees its own security threatened in any move that it might take that could be considered by Italy as hostile. An approval of oil sanctions against Italy by Switzerland would have the same effect as a closing of the Swiss border to oil shipments into Italy. Mussolini might have an excuse to send an army marching into Switzerland.

Withdrawal from the league by the Swiss republic would gravely endanger the existence of the league itself. Switzerland has come to stand for the league—and the league has come to be considered an organization deeply rooted in Switzerland.

But a little country like Switzerland must consider its own welfare and independence above penalties against a nation that has affronted Great Britain. And little countries such as Switzerland, Austria, and Hungary, as pointed out before, do not count for much in world affairs.

The people of the Netherlands long have known that in the event of war between Germany and France their neutrality quite likely would be violated.

Berlin war office plans for an invasion of France if that, in the German belief, again becomes a necessity are said to contemplate an advance into the Netherlands which would virtually cut that country in two. It was the Belgian forts that delayed the German advance sufficiently in 1914 to save France and eventually give victory to the Allies. Hitler's rebuilt Germany figures on avoiding the Belgian defenses in the event of another war by a quick smash into the Netherlands as far as the sea, before dike gates can be opened and lowlands flooded, a turning of the Belgian flank at the extreme northeasterly line of the Belgian forts, and a push into France along the undefended coast. The German plan for invasion of Holland is said to have been worked out by General von Epp and is an improvement on the old Schlieffen plan for attacking France.

The Netherlands is another one of those little countries of Europe that alone do not count for much. Without assistance from Great Britain or France the Dutch could not halt for long a German advance through their territory.

Foregoing paragraphs, dealing in the main with the futility of nearly all European treaties and nearly all action on the part of minor nations, shows clearly that war might flare up at any instant were it not for the scarcity of cash and credit among the powers and a fear among them of being "double-crossed." Observers in the European capitals see in the new crisis that brings war clouds over the continent a real threat of conflict. But they also see farther—a bluff on the part of Dictator Hitler.

Is he occupying the Rhineland with armed forces because he actually is irked by disclosures concerning the new Franco-Russian alliance? Is he bristling for war because he knows there will be no war? Is he moving his army close to France to be ready for an attack if war should come? Is he chesty toward France and Britain because of some secret assurance from Mussolini?

Only time—brief or lengthy—can answer these questions.

Germany's occupation of the Rhineland is called by all other nations unfavorably affected a violation of the Versailles and the Locarno treaties. Germany, however, has disregarded so many articles of the Versailles treaty by this time that there no longer is any cause for the world to become excited about it. The Locarno treaty, on the other hand, is of more recent date than the agreement entered into at Versailles, it concerns but seven nations, and only five as guarantors of peace, and until the present trouble its terms have been rather closely adhered to.

The Locarno treaty is, to be accurate, a series of diplomatic instruments for peace and arbitration drawn up at Locarno, Switzerland, in 1925, whereby Belgium, France, Great Britain, Italy, and Germany guaranteed the peace in western Europe and whereby Germany undertook to arbitrate about disputes with France, Belgium, Poland, and Czechoslovakia.

The signing of the documents collectively making up the Locarno pact is said to have made an impression on popular opinion in all of the countries concerned because it marked a distinct break-away from the warlike attitudes of the nations. The terms "allies" and "enemies" were not uttered during negotiations, and the chief countries concerned in the World war definitly pledged themselves to a pacifist policy as between themselves for the future. Through the Locarno treaty for the first time in history the great powers are said to have surrendered their absolute right to make war. According to George Glasgow, author and publicist, however, that surrender was limited to one particular storm center of Europe—the Rhineland.

Instruments making up the Locarno pact consisted of (1) a treaty of mutual guarantee between Germany, Belgium, France, Italy, and Great Britain; (2) two arbitration conventions between Germany on the one side and Belgium and France severally on the other, and two arbitration treaties between Germany on one side and Poland and Czechoslovakia severally on the other; (3) a collective note of the former foes of Germany to Germany explaining the implication of article 16 of the covenant of the league of nations; and (4) two treaties of guarantee between France on the one side and Poland and Czechoslovakia severally on the other.

The treaty of mutual guarantee, according to Mr. Glasgow in an article on the subject in the Encyclopedia Britannica, provided in its main purport (1) that the parties guaranteed the inviolability of the German-Belgian and German-French frontiers as fixed by the treaty of Versailles; (2) that Germany, Belgium, and France undertook never to attack, invade, or wage war against each other except in "legitimate defense" or as the result of a league of nations obligation; (3) those three countries undertook to settle their disputes by pacific means; (4) in case of an alleged breach of article 2 of the league of nations convention each of the five contracting parties undertook to come to the defense of the party adjudged by the league of nations to be the party attacked, or, in the case of "flagrant" violation, to come immediately to the defense of the party attacked.

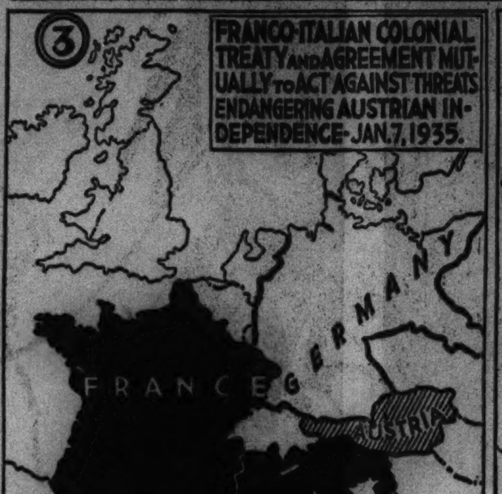
It was this Locarno treaty that brought about the evacuation of the Rhineland by French troops a year after its several documents were signed. It was this treaty that was instrumental in bringing Germany into the league of nations in September, 1926. And it is this same treaty that Hitler now is accused of violating by his military occupation of the Rhineland.

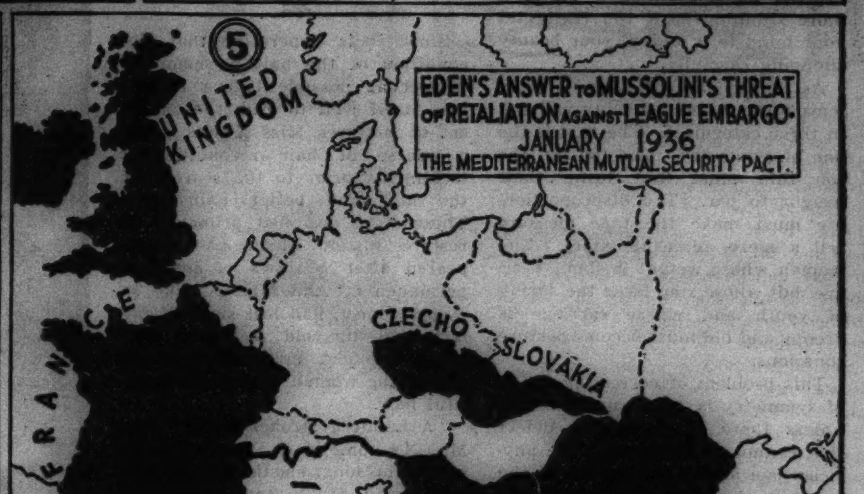
As evidence that the great powers of Europe place little reliance in treaties as means of keeping out of war are the vast sums they spend annually for national defense. Most recent figures available show the following annual expenditures of the five major European powers on armies, navies, fortifications, and other agencies of war:

Russia	$1,038,642,000
France	575,799,190
Italy	384,326,400
Great Britain......	373,968,000
Germany	204,868,000

The above sums, it should be understood, are not for the present year. In most cases they undoubtedly are considerably under the current expenditures, for everywhere in Europe today the nations are madly preparing for war on a large scale. The war in Ethiopia has imposed a tremendous burden on Italy, which the figure for Italy above does not represent. France, Italy, Belgium, Poland, and virtually all other nations are strengthening their border fortifications. And Great Britain particularly is going in for navy building in grand proportions.

Another aspect of the situation, and one which would appear to be a drawback rather than an encouragement to war in Europe, has to do with the enormous debts under which the nations are struggling. Germany, for instance, as of March 31, 1934, had a national debt of more than 4 billion 700 million dollars, not including any of the obligations arising out of the Versailles treaty. Great Britain, as of March 31, 1935, had a national debt of 39 billion dollars. France's public debt, as of Aug. 30, 1934, was more than 21 billion dollars. The national debt of Italy on Jan. 31, 1935, was more than 8½ billion dollars. Soviet Russia, which repudiated obligations of the czarist government, is said to have incurred no foreign debt. Despite this, however, its internal finances do not warant an annual expenditure of more than a billion dollars for national defense.





A series of six maps that tells the main points of the story of the changing political alliances in Europe since 1914, the year that marked the beginning of the World war. Important among treaties that have affected national alignments from time to time have been those of Versailles, St. Germain, Lausanne, Locarno, Stresa, and others.

THE LITTLE ENTENTE, FRANCO-SOVIET, FRANCO-CZECH, AND CZECHO-SOVIET PACTS ARE FOR MUTUAL AID; THE OTHERS ARE OF AMITY AND NON-AGGRESSION. IN ADDITION, GREECE, TURKEY, JUGOSLAVIA AND RUMANIA ARE MUTUALLY COMMITTED TO PEACE IN THE BALKANS; NORWAY, SWEDEN, FINLAND AND DENMARK HAVE A 20-YEAR WAR HOLIDAY AND GREAT BRITAIN ALLOWS GERMANY A NAVAL RATIO OF 35% (WITHIN 15% OF FRANCE).

FAVORITE POEMS

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY, famous English poet, was born on Aug. 4, 1792, at Field Place, near Horsham, Sussex. He perished July 8, 1822, when a small schooner in which he and two others were sailing off the coast of Italy was wrecked in a storm. Shelley was educated at Eaton and Oxford and published his first works at the age of 18. He was a prolific and also a versatile poet, "When the Lamp Is Shattered" being an excellent example of his shorter verses.

WHEN THE LAMP IS SHATTERED

When the lamp is shattered,
The light in the dust lies dead;
When the cloud is scattered,
The rainbow's glory is shed.
When the lute is broken,
Sweet tones are remembered not;
When the lips have spoken,
Loved accents are soon forgot.

As music and splendor
Survive not the lamp and the lute,
The heart's echoes render
No song when the spirit is mute,—
No song but sad dirges,
Like the wind through a ruined cell,
Or the mournful surges
That ring the dead seaman's knell.

When hearts have once mingled,
Love first leaves the well built nest;
The weak one is singled
To endure what it once possessed.
O Love! who bewailest
The frailty of all things here,
Why choose you the frailest
For your cradle, your home, and your bier?

Its passions will rock thee
As the storms rock the ravens on high;
Bright reason will mock thee
Like the sun from a wintry sky.
From thy nest every rafter
Will rot, and thine eagle home
Leave thee naked to laughter
When leaves fall and cold winds come.

OVER a million doctors' prescriptions for Pertussin were filled in one year. This estimate is based on the Prescription Ingredient Survey issued by the American Pharmaceutical Assn.

When you cough, it's usually because tiny moisture glands in throat and bronchial tubes have clogged or dried. Infectious phlegm collects, irritates—you cough. Pertussin stimulates these glands to pour out natural moisture freely. Sticky phlegm loosens and is easily raised. Get a bottle.

KNIGHTS of the RANGE

Holly, Loving and Trusting Frayne, Sends Him on an Important Mission

But when he looked up directly at her Holly knew that had been a ruse.

THE STORY TO DATE

Holly Ripple, who has inherited the beauty of her Spanish mother, returns from boarding school to her father's ranch in New Mexico just before his death. Anticipating an era of cattle rustling and outlawry, Colonel Ripple placed Holly under the care of his trusted foreman, Britt, and ordered him to surround her with the hardest outfit of cowboys he can gather together. In an encounter with horse thieves Holly is saved from the insults of the leader by one of his own men, Renn Frayne, who shoots his master and another man to save her. Holly persuades Frayne, self-admitted outlaw, to ride for her. Holly has carried on the traditional hospitality of the rancho. Malcolm Lascelles, a gambler and adventurer, with whom Holly had regrettably carried on a schoolgirl flirtation in New Orleans, installs himself at the rancho. Friends and enemies alike are invited to a yearly fiesta in honor of Holly. To sober up the cowboys Britt and Frayne give them a ducking in icy waters. Brazos Keene, the youngest and wildest of Holly's cowboys, dumps Lascelles in the cold stream. Lascelles pulls a gun on Brazos, who is saved by Frayne. Lascelles joins up with Russ Slaughter and his rustlers. Holly gives a dinner to her outfit before the party and in an address inspires them to loyalty, proclaiming them her Knights of the Range. Holly realizes she is in love with Frayne, who avoids her. Sewall McCoy, a rival cattle owner, proposes to Holly. When she refuses him he threatens to join up with Slaughter. Defying the rule of hospitality, she orders him from the ranch. Frayne evinces his admiration for her action.

INSTALMENT X.

HOLLY awoke late and lay thinking. The golden sun sifted through the vines over her window, spreading lacelike shadows and bright spots upon her bed. In broad daylight she could not retrieve the thoughts and feelings under which she had strained last night. It seemed impossible to give credence to some of them. What had she done—what had she said? Nothing compared to that which she had determined upon! Would she ever be able to cultivate the beguilements of Conchita Velasquez?

She passed from a vague and unsatisfactory review of her experience and conduct for the evening to an impersonal contemplation of her birthday party. It had undoubtedly been a huge success.

She had peeped out of her window down upon the grassy pastures, the wide green and gray stretch to the cottonwoods, and around to the corrals and the cabins. The scene in front of the bunkhouse decided Holly at once to go down. Cowboys on foot and on horseback to the number of a hundred or more excited her curiosity.

When Holly emerged from the trees she saw mounted riders and cowboys on foot in groups beyond the cabins. She recognized some of her own boys at the far end of the long bunkhouse porch. As their backs were turned, they did not see her. Holly gained the door, which was open, and from which issued a voice she knew.

"Aw, hell, Cap, don't tell me nothin'," Brazos said sharply.

"But I do tell you. Frayne's hunch is to watch Talman," rejoined Britt sharply.

Holly knocked on the door with the handle of her quirt.

"May I come in?"

"Thet you, Holly? . . . Yes, come in, now you're heah. I'm shore glad José cleaned up this messy place."

Holly went in to meet Britt, who for once did not brighten at the sight of her. Brazos slipped off the table to greet her. But his moody face broke to the smile it always wore for her.

"Mawnin', Lady. Yu shore look top-notch after yore all-night fandango."

She laughed at him. "Who are you talking to? . . . What's going on?"

"Wal, thet Slaughter ootfit sent word they had a hawse they'd bet no cowboy of yores could ride. I reckon it'll delay range ridin' fer the time bein'."

"I hope you'll disprove that. Have they ever heard of Jackson?"

"Shore not, Holly, else they wouldn't be so gay."

"Too good to miss," interposed Brazos. "We'll lead them on an' win every dollar they got."

"Britt, what is this I heard you tell Brazos as I got to the door?"

"What? . . . Aw, nothin' much. I forget," returned the Texan coolly.

"Call Frayne," returned Holly shortly.

They stared at her.

"Do you hear me? Call him or I shall go out after him."

Britt went to the door and hallooed for Frayne. Brazos gave Holly a cool, scrutinizing glance. She smiled back at him not so coolly but with an intelligence he must have grasped. Quick, heavy steps sounded on the porch.

"Come in. Miss Holly is heah an' sent fer you," said Britt. Frayne came in with his sombrero in his hand, the same inscrutable man that had so long baffled Holly. He bowed without speaking.

"Good morning, Renn. . . . Britt has just lied to me. And Brazos has lost his memory. Before I ask you some questions I want to tell you something which I mean for them to hear as well. . . . From now on I am boss of this ranch. Britt treats me as a little girl. He thinks he's my dad and that I'll never grow up. Brazos is a slick hombre who thinks I'm as as easy to fool as—well, Conchita, for instance. They try to keep everything unpleasant or serious or bad from my ears. This I will not tolerate any longer. Have I made myself quite clear?"

"Indeed you have, Miss Holly," rejoined Frayne in surprise. Both Britt and Brazos were dumfounded, as well as ashamed.

"Renn, what is this hunch of yours to watch Talman? I heard Britt tell Brazos."

"Last night Britt and I divided our time in watching. With McCoy and Slaughter in the house, we did not feel at ease. Anything could happen. Slaughter got in with a gun inside his vest, a fact he didn't think any of us knew. He approached some of our boys and got a cold shoulder for his pains. But McCoy got to Talman. They did not go out together. McCoy went first, then Talman. They met outside."

"Frayne, you would not have given Britt a hunch to watch Talman if your suspicions had not been aroused."

"Hardly. But I never took to Talman, somehow. It's my habit to study men. That seems to have been inborn. The need of self-preservation developed it strong. Talman is a queer duck. He's one of the few cowboys I've met who love money. He's greedy. He's a great horseman. He makes friends, yes, but not pards."

"Therefore you advised Britt to watch him?"

"Yes, Miss Holly."

"I hope to Gawd I can prove Talman straight. It'd shore be tough to find another Dillon in the ootfit," said Britt.

"I hope so, too. Now, boys, go back to the riding contest. I'll stay and watch out of the window. I'd like to bet, too."

Britt extracted a heavy wallet from his coat.

"What'll you bet on Jackson?"

"Five hundred. And give him half if he wins."

Brazos smothered a whoop, and instead of letting off his exuberance in that way he danced a jig.

"Lady, yu shore air a thoroughbred," he declared, suddenly getting tense and businesslike. "Heah, get yore haids together. . . . Jackson would ride a bat oot of hell fer thet much. We cain't lose. . . . Now, heah's the deal with this Slaughter ootfit. They started it. We didn't even encourage it. But they galled us pretty deep. My idee is they must have a hell-buckin' broncho. They reckon they can clean us oot. All right. We'll bet easy fust off. We'll back Laigs, an' course he'll get piled. Then we'll back, say, Blue, fer a little money. To egg them on, see? Then I'll get sore an' work thet varmint myself. It'll be a bluff, 'cause I cain't ride nothin'. We'll be all het up then, an' we'll flash our rolls an' bet every damn peso we got on Ride 'Em. It'll be highway robbery, an' thet bunch will yell murder. . . . How's me idee strike yu-all?"

"Brazos, it strikes me fine," replied Holly, warming to the youthful face, the flashing blue eyes, the mobile lips that expressed such glee.

"Miss Holly, you can see very well from this window," said Frayne as Brazos and Britt started out. "Would you mind dropping the bar after I close the door?"

"Renn! Are you afraid I'd be kidnaped?" exclaimed Holly jokingly.

"Hardly that. But you will be seen. These men are hard, curious, insolent."

A yell from outside directed Holly's feelings into another channel. She drew a chair to the window and sat down. The edge of a crowd of cowboys, Indians, and Mexicans was not many rods from the bunkhouse. The crowd split with wild shouts to let out an ugly beast of a horse, upon the back of which Laigs Mason sat precariously. No ordinary horse could make Laigs look like a tenderfoot. It was a dark buckskin in color, ragged and hairy, with wild eyes and steaming nostrils, humped in a distorted ball on four legs, which bounded as if on stiff springs. Such swift and violent bucking Holly had never seen. All at once Laigs Mason went flying to the ground, whereupon there arose wild mirth, punctuated by shouts and jeers.

THIS time Holly was witness to the laying of more wagers, and to the assault of the Kentuckian upon the catapult of the Slaughter remuda. Blue was a fine horseman, but he lasted only five jumps before he was thrown. He was hurt, and angry, too, as was indicated by his yell, almost unheard in the din, and by the fist he shook at Brazos.

Holly reveled in Brazos then. Since last night he had fallen from his pedestal, but she still loved him as a perfectly real, wild, terrible cowboy, the type of the age. Brazos simulated fury. He hopped up and down like a flea on a hot griddle, flung his arms, tore his curly hair, and otherwise demonstrated his rage at defeat. When the noise subsided he yelled:

"Lay yore bets, fellars. I'll ride thet ornery cayuse myself—or die tryin'. But ask fer odds, boys. This ain't no ordinary hawse. Russ Slaughter has jobbed us. It's a dirty trick. He's got a circus hawse. . . . Lead him heah. . . . Aha, yu fire-eatin', smoke-snortin', iron-jawed mule—you're shore gonna be rid!"

Brazos was not only a magnificent actor but also, according to Britt, the equal of any rider who ever straddled a horse, always excepting Ride 'Em Jackson, who was in a class by himself.

The tremendous exhibition that Brazos boasted of did not materialize. He manifested none of his skill and made the poorest show of any of the boys. Holly noticed, however, that he chose a nice grassy plot to be thrown upon. Picking himself up, he apparently had sustained a surprise and shock.

"Doggone! Thet ain't a hawse," he complained. "No long-laiged rider could ever stay on him."

"Naw, nor any short-legged ones in your outfit," jeered a rider, striking for his superb seat in the saddle, his hatchet face and tawny fringe of beard.

"We call yore bluff, Slaughter," returned Brazos ringingly. "We got pore riders an' pore hawses heah, but we shore got plenty of the long green. Give us two to one odds an' we'll bet yu again, whole hawg or none."

Slaughter was suspicious, but his clamoring men overruled his objections, or whatever his gestures and voice implied. They crowded to take all bets offered by the Ripple cowboys.

"How aboot it, Slaughter?" yelled Brazos. "Any more money to bet?"

"All we got is up, an' you'll never smell it."

"Cowboy, take thet saddle off," called Brazos to the rider who had charge of the bucking horse.

"Hey, you don't put no other saddle on him," objected Slaughter as his cowboys looked up dubiously.

"We don't want no saddle a-tall," announced Brazos swaggeringly. Whereupon in another moment the saddle was stripped from the restive mustang.

"Throw him. We want him on the ground," ordered Brazos.

"What's the idee?" yelled Slaughter belligerently.

"Lay yore hawse down," returned Brazos curtly. "Our man wants to fork him from the ground. If he cain't ride him yu win."

Accordingly two of Slaughter's cowboys roped the horse, stripped him, and threw him on his side. Brazos promptly seized the bridle from the one who held it and knelt upon the head of the horse.

"Slip them ropes loose," shouted Brazos. "All right, Jack, come a-runnin'."

The little bow-legged Negro appeared as if he had come up out of the ground. "Heah I is," he rolled out, and ran to the prostrate horse. He straddled the animal. "Gimme dat bridle, Brazos. I done hate to do dis." He appeared to wrap himself around the horse and to bend flat, almost to the ground. Brazos also bent over, evidently to see. Suddenly he leaped and backed with a wild yell. On the instant, with a horrid scream, the horse raised itself spasmodically with a cracking of hoofs. Like a burr, Jackson's body appeared stuck upon him. Holly had seen Jackson perform this trick before, though never so cleverly. He had sunk his teeth in the nose of the horse, which made it impossible for the animal to get its head. And when they came up together the horse had his head high, turned back in a distorted way, with the little Negro like a leech upon his neck.

"Look oot!" bawled Brazos, leaping aside as the frantic beast began to lunge. Riders and those on foot scattered like quail. The great horse, frenzied at this attack, plunged all over the space before the bunkhouse amid a din that made the former noise insignificant. It took a few moments for the intelligent beast to realize that lowering his head to pitch was impossible. He screeched like a demon. He scattered dust and gravel. And at length he bolted straight across the level. The angle of his head made him run in a circle, so that in short order he was back from where he had started. And right before his backers he quit as obviously as any horse could have done without balking. Jackson let go his cruel hold and, sliding off, threw the bridle. His grin showed his wide mouth and big white teeth.

"Whar you-all wuz, pards?" he boomed.

To Holly's amazement her cowboys did not break into pandemonium as was usually their wont at any coup. Brazos strutted like an Indian chief to meet his black jocky. The other cowboys stood close around Britt. Slaughter and his men were dumfounded.

"Come hyar, nigger!" yelled Slaughter.

Instead of complying Jaskson replied, "What yo' want, boss?"

"How'd you ride thet hoss?"

"Sho' mah own bizness."

The cowboy who had again taken charge of the prize horse called out: "His nose is bleedin'! Thet nigger bit him—hung on by his teeth."

"Hell! Can't I see?" rasped Slaughter. "Jackson, you rode fer me onct. How come you never showed us thet trick?"

"Wal, boss, I wuz only a nigger in yore ootfit."

"Ahuh. Wal, you'll be a dead nigger fer this outfit—some day."

It was noticeable that Slaughter, as he turned to ride away with his men, veered somewhat to the left, and when opposite the bunkhouse window where Holly sat he halted to light a cigaret. But when he looked up directly at her Holly knew that had been a ruse. He was not too far away for the expression of his eyes to be discernible. Holly unwittingly caught their hard brightness before she could avoid them.

"Howdy, girlie," he called. "You might keep me from throwin' in with McCoy."

Holly left the window, nonplused at the ruffian's declaration until she interpreted it through the evil meaning in his eyes. It revolted her to realize that the time had come when she was not safe from insult even on her own ranch, in front of her cowboys. But, hearing steps on the porch, she stifled her sickening sensations. At a hard knock on the door she slipped the bar and opened it. Frayne and Brazos stood there as if they were her judges.

"Holly, did thet hombre see yu?" demanded Brazos.

"Certainly. I was in plain sight. They all saw me."

"Why didn't yu duck when he rode by?"

"Brazos! I am not in the habit of ducking."

"Wal, it'd be a darn good one fer yu to learn," complained Brazos. "I wasn't lookin' jest then. Too busy grabbin' my money from Britt. But Renn heah says Slaughter spoke to yu."

"He did. I heard him," corroborated Frayne quietly, his penetrating gray gaze enveloping her.

"Yes. Did you hear what he said?" asked Holly with a laugh. She was not so sure she could deceive Frayne. These men breathed something that stopped her heart.

"Only one word—'McCoy!' . . . It was quite far, and he spoke low."

"My vengeful caballeros, it was nothing."

"Holly, you claimed the absolute truth from me," declared Frayne sternly.

"Well, I can tell you definitly that Slaughter is going to throw in with McCoy."

NOT so many days after the event of the year the grassy triangle below Holly's ranch-house shone red and white with thirty-five hundred head of steers ready for the drive to the railroad.

It was early morning, with sun hot and the range blossoming in flowery meadows and cottonwoods and willows full foliaged.

Brazos has just bade Holly good-by, a cool and nonchalant Brazos as always, but somehow stronger in earnestness and less sentimental. He left Holly thoughtful and sad.

Britt, brisk and businesslike, came in with Frayne for final instructions.

"Wal, they're pointed, Holly, an' all you got to do is wave yore scarf."

"Frayne, whom did you choose to take besides Brazos? Of course, he would not go without Laigs," said Holly.

"Santone, the Southards, Jackson, Cherokee—eight of us in all," replied Frayne. Not enough for so big a job. But we must not leave you short here."

"Who on the wagon?"

"We'll take turns driving."

"No remuda?"

"Only a few extra horses, which we'll drive ourselves."

"You are saving. . . . What's the count, Britt?"

"Three thousand five hundred an' sixty-two. Brazos had less. But Renn an' I tallied the same."

HOLLY wrote the number down in her notebook. "Here's the mail, Frayne, and my several orders for supplies, which you may look over at your leisure."

"What are your instructions about selling?" queried Frayne anxiously.

"No different from Britt. Has he not told you?"

"Yes. But let's go over it again. This is a new job for me."

"Take the best offer you get."

"Shore, thet'll be forty dollars a haid," interposed Britt.

"What is the lowest I can accept, provided conditions fluctuate?"

"Frayne, I want to get rid of cattle. You need not advertise that. Hang out for a good price, but, if compelled, take any offer."

"Very well; I don't anticipate any save the present top price. Have you written instructions to deposit checks, mail them east, or bring them back?"

"No, you are to take cash. And wait if it has to come by express."

"Cash!" ejaculated Frayne, agast. "Britt did not tell me that."

"Wal, I wanted Holly to take the responsibility," explained Britt. "I disapprove, but Holly's boss."

"Please—Miss Holly!" exclaimed Frayne almost entreatingly.

"Please what?"

"Don't put such a burden on me. Just think—figure it out! Allowing for losses in any way—even a little rustler raid—I'll sell out for over one hundred and forty thousand dollars."

"What of that? We need cash. Britt agrees now is the best time. Trail conditions will grow worse. When we sell again we'll make deposits."

"Holly, you'll trust me—me—with all that money?" queried Frayne hoarsely, white to the lips.

"Certainly I'll trust you," replied Holly evenly, finding his level gray gaze of pain exceedingly trying to meet squarely.

"Thank you. . . . But you—shouldn't. . . . That's a fortune. How do you know I'll not steal it—and run off?"

"Renn, it'd be worth that much to find you out," she rejoined.

But he did not catch the significance of that. "How do you know the half-breeds and Cherry won't murder me?"

"Don't insult them, either, Renn. But they need not know. Tell Brazos."

Frayne turned to Britt with twitching lips. "Old timer, can you beat this? For two bits—if it was anyone else but Holly Ripple—no—I wouldn't take the risk."

"Risk—of what?"

"Loss. Be reasonable, you child. If through any chance I lost all that money you—you'd never believe in me again."

"Yes, I would," replied Holly calmly, taking her scarf and moving toward the door. She had at last intrigued or driven this man into a betrayal of feeling. It was so sweet, so beautiful, that she dared not prolong the interview.

An Open Letter to Helen Hayes

Dear Helen: There are times when cause and effect don't seem to work out as they should. For instance, a poor stretch following excellent work and big success. But it all averages up in the long run; the mental angle to use is one of perspective—don't let minor phases get a grip on the real inside You. Take it all in your stride. At the same time don't spend too freely of money or strength after this spring. Store up the old battery. With best wishes,

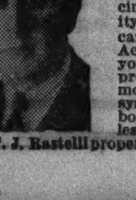
Acid In Your Blood Kills Health and Pep Kidneys Often to Blame

There is nothing that can so quickly undermine your health, strength, and energy as an excess of Acid in your blood. Every time you move your hand, take a step, or use even the slightest amount of energy, cells are broken down in the body and create Acids. This process goes on even when you are asleep.

Fortunately, nature has provided an automatic method of getting rid of these excess Acids. To get rid of these Acids nature provides that your blood circulate 200 times an hour through 9 million tiny, delicate tubes, or filters, in your Kidneys. It is the function of the Kidneys to filter out these health-destroying Acids, and to purify the blood so that it can take energy and vitality to every part of your body. But if your Kidneys slow down and do not function properly, and remove approximately 3 pints of Acids, Poisons and liquids from your blood every 24 hours, then there is a gradual accumulation of these Acids and Wastes, and slowly but surely your system becomes poisoned, making you feel old before your time, rundown, and worn-out.

Causes Many Ills

If poorly functioning Kidneys cause you to suffer from Acidity, Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Dizziness, Frequent Headaches, Rheumatic Pains, Swollen Joints, Circles Under Eyes, Backache, Loss of Vitality, or Burning, Itching and Smarting, don't waste time worrying and waiting. The natural thing to do is to help your Kidneys with the doctor's special, guaranteed Kidney diuretic prescription called Cystex [pronounced Siss-tex]. Cystex works directly on the Kidneys and Bladder, and helps the Kidneys in their function of washing impurities and Acids from the system and in maintaining the purity of the blood. Don't try to overcome Acidity in your blood by taking medicines to offset the Acidity. The only way you can really get rid of the Acidity is by helping your kidneys to function properly and thus remove the Acid from your system. The Acid is bound to stay there, unless the Kidneys function properly.

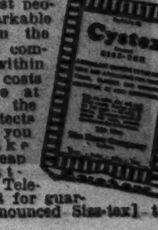


Dr. T. J. Rastelli

Thousands of druggists and doctors in over 22 different countries throughout the world recommend Cystex for its purity and prompt action as a Kidney diuretic. For instance, Dr. T. J. Rastelli, famous Doctor, Surgeon, and Scientist, of London, says: "Cystex is one of the finest remedies I have ever known in my medical practice. Any doctor will recommend it for its definite benefit in the treatment of many functional Kidney and Bladder disorders. It is safe and harmless." Dr. C. Z. Rendelle, another widely known physician and Medical Examiner, of San Francisco, recently said: "Since the Kidneys purify the blood, the Poisons collect in these organs and must be promptly flushed from the system, otherwise they re-enter the blood stream and create a toxic condition. I can truthfully recommend the use of Cystex."

Guaranteed to Work

Because of its world-wide and unusual success, Cystex is offered under a written guarantee to do the work to your complete satisfaction in 8 days or money back on return of empty package. Under this written guarantee you can put Cystex to the test and see exactly what it can do in your particular case. You must feel younger, stronger and better than you have in a long time—you must feel that Cystex has done the work thoroughly and completely, or you merely return the empty package and it costs you nothing. You are the sole judge of your own satisfaction. With Cystex there is no long waiting for results, because it is scientifically prepared to act directly on the Kidneys as a diuretic. For that reason most people report a remarkable improvement within the first 48 hours, and complete satisfaction within 8 days. Cystex costs only 3c a dose at druggists, and as the guarantee protects you completely, you should not take chances with cheap inferior or irritating drugs or delay. Telephone your druggist for guaranteed Cystex [pronounced Siss-tex] today.



Green Pastures to Be a Movie

Connolly Sells Rights to Play

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Marc Connolly, who wrote "Green Pastures" some five years ago, has just finished preserving that opus in celluloid for Warner Brothers. We'd tracked him to his office where he was sitting at his desk gazing at the walls full of photos of the hundreds of Negroes from whom he selected his cast for the story of Negro conceptions of biblical characters and events.

When asked how he happened to write the play that has now achieved such fame and success that it has had five years of pouring royalties into the author's lap, Connolly began talking in his rapid fire and indubitably fascinating manner. An excellent raconteur, Connolly gives himself his subject with no reserve.

"Roland Kirby, then [in 1928] a cartoonist on a New York paper, said one night, 'Marc, I have just read a funny book. I think you could do something with it.' I looked the volume up. It proved to be a collection of some score stories about southern darkies and their religious conceptions written by Roark Bradford, a well known southern writer who did his tales with the accent on the humor rather than the seriously religious outlook of the Negro. The volume is called 'Old Man Adams and His Children.'"

"It has no plot but is composed of Old Testament stories as told in terms of the southern Negro. I read it and made immediate arrangements to go to New Orleans, where I met Bradford and talked the thing over with him.

"On several trips I made tours about the countryside outside of New Orleans and Baton Rouge seeking old preachers of the Negroes for my material. One such whom I found was Leon Wyckliffe, a former slave on the old Wyckliffe plantation at St. Francisville. Leon has been 80 for over six years. He knew it was fitting that a man might attain to the age of three score and ten. When he passed that he talked it over with God and borrowed ten more years from him. As God gave him the ten and they were up six years ago he'd gone right on being eighty ever since, for his sense of personal dignity will not allow him to infringe the proprieties by living past man's allotted span.

"I observed a strange document framed over the mantelpiece in the Rev. Leon's home one time and got a strange story from him to go with it. It seems in his early youth he'd gone to war as the body servant of Master Bob, carrying his horsehair covered trunk and doing up his linen for him, and when Massa Bob was captured by the Yankees Leon stole a horse and rescued him. Several years after the war Leon found his flock being weaned away from him by the rival evangelistic efforts of a no good black, Dick Wyckliffe, who, everybody knew, had run away and fought with the Yankees.

"Dick had come back with a paper from up north that simply wrecked the prestige of the faithful Leon. The paper was most impressive, being an honorable discharge of Private Dick Wyckliffe from the armies of the United States. Leon hadn't any paper like that, and he was losing his flock. He went to Massa Bob.

"Massa Bob told him, 'Leon, I'm goin' to fix you up with a paper that will make the paper of that scamp Dick look like a piece of wrappin' paper.' That he did the faded testimonial which has hung framed over the fireplace in the humble cabin for over sixty years fully attests.

"Started out with the usual [in Latin] 'To all to whom these letters may come, salutation,' and continued, 'be it known that I, by the powers vested in me as former governor of the state of Louisiana and former general in the army of the Confederacy [now disbanded, etc., etc., do hereby give an honorable discharge to Leon Wyckliffe [many adjectives], and do hereby declare him a discharged brevet private.' It was fixed up with ribbons and seals and is a really remarkable document. Massa Bob certainly came through for Leon and saved his flock.

"Many selections from the sermons and sayings of Leon are in my play. He could vitalize anything, no matter how insignificant, with his imagination and sincerity.

"Down in that region 'the war' still means the war between the states, not the world war or any other war. I was fortunate enough to be able to visit the home of the three elderly Bowman sisters at the Roseville plantation, which was founded by their father in 1830. Their gracious politeness as they welcomed me, their fragility and charm as they sat in their black satin dresses, each with a brooch at the throat, on chairs 'given to Aunt Harriet by Martha Custis,' are something unforgettable.

"Miss Sally, sister in charge of the house, had a silver whistle with which to call the butler. A Negro boy stood and worked the punkah fan over her head with a string to keep the flies away. The original wallpaper is still on the walls in the bedrooms upstairs. I passed one room, the 'furniture room,' upstairs which had interesting looking bundles done up in crates and burlap. Inquiry revealed that 'Papa had bought that furniture as a gift for Henry Clay to take to the White House, but when he was not elected President we just kept it here. No, we've never unpacked it. It's just as it came on the boat from France.'

"Those sweet old ladies are poor enough to be starving to death, and in their dining room alone is a million dollars' worth of old paintings, twelve in all. Audubon, when visiting with them for a year and a half while founding his ornithological society in those parts, painted three of the best portraits he ever did and left them there. They still have them. Miss Sally, in a sweet voice that sounds as if it were five years away, asked me 'Is it true that there is a vogue of jaz plays in the theater in New York?'

"I finally figured it out—she meant jaz but had only heard the word once or twice. I had the misfortune to knock over a fire screen given some one by Martha Custis, and if that isn't an awful experience you try it yourself some time.

"I had to get some southern night life, too, while I was working on the play down in New Orleans. I would work until about 8 in the evening and then go to bed at the Roosevelt hotel, leaving a call for 1 a. m. Promptly at 2 a. m. the chief of detectives and a city editor would call for me and we'd do the night life till about 4 a. m., then to bed till 8 and then work all day till evening, repeating the same routine for some days. The night clerk is probably still wondering how I got arrested regularly every night at 2 and was bailed out and home again by 4. I could see it in his eye.

"Writing a play calls for a mild case of schizophrenia, with one part of the author's mind being emotional and the other architectural. Because the method of stimulus in pictures is different from that in the theater, I found it necessary to shorten some scenes of the stage play and write in twenty [movie] scenes of an expository sort not needed for the stage. I also had to write in forty new characters.

"In seeing a picture, because of the mechanics of films, one is like a passenger on a train looking out the window. In the theater one is more of a participant. On the stage one can vary the tempo more than the present standards of good movie usage. The rapid tempo required in films defeats the opportunity to do some things we do to achieve stage art. In films the action must keep moving along. Ninety-five per cent of the emotional appeal is from human motivation. In pictures a change of focus may produce a mood or an emotion. Just because of this machine element in films the demands of films are greater on the dramatist than those of the theater.

"Why hasn't 'Green Pastures' been made into a film before? Well, I couldn't afford to sell my rights before, the road shows have been going too well and paying royalties for five years. I said two years ago I'd sell it at the end of five years, and here it is."

The production of "Romeo and Juliet" at M-G-M, starring Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard, with John Barrymore, Basil Rathbone, Ralph Forbes, Reginald Denny, and Edna May Oliver, has some of the most lavish scenes filmed since "Ben Hur" in the silent days. A huge banquet hall, walls of white, with arches and pillars crowned in festoons of carving covered in gold leaf and torches blazing in their golden sockets about the walls is the scene of the masque ball in the first act, where Romeo who comes to admire his love, Rosalind, meets and falls in love with Juliet.

A large group of dancers dressed in the period and under the direction of Agnes De Mille perform a torch dance, most striking and beautiful. Other dance scenes are being made showing the main characters participating.

In the figures of the dance Romeo and Juliet meet. Costumes are most lavish in gold and silver brocades, and endless gorgeous colors. The headdresses of the men are quite as striking as those of the women. Verona in the fifteenth century is really coming into her own if Hollywood can do it.

Rathbone, Forbes, Denny, and Howard are having a lot of fun with their gorgeous costumes and doing a bit of strutting and laughing with and at themselves and each other. A male would have to be entirely lacking in ego, which no actor is, to be indifferent to the flattery of those handsome accoutrements.

George Cukor, the director, seems to enjoy it all and is not particularly weighted down with the responsibility of managing Hollywood's most expensive production in years, bar none. "I am hoping not only to please the Shakespeare students and critics but also hope to win a new public for Shakespeare," says Cukor.

Leslie Howard was asked by one interviewer how he likes playing his first classic rôle. "It's my first low comedy rôle, really," says Leslie. "Never before have I climbed over walls to make love to a lady, ridden a horse, or fought a duel in a film."

During Paramount's negotiations with him to become its "he man" star, Charlie Bickford demanded that he be worked in only four pictures a year, saying that, like Jimmy Cagney, he believes the film public can readily see too much of any actor.

Texas Free a Hundred Years

Historic Alamo in San Antonio, taken March 6, 1836, by 4,000 Mexicans after a 13-day siege. All of its 183 defenders, including Cols. William B. Travis, James Bowie, and David Crockett, were put to death.

Mexican Yoke Cast Off in 1836

By WHITLEY NOBLE

ALL over the sprawling state of Texas—in city, town, and village—people have been whooping it up for weeks in celebration of a century of independence.

It was just 100 years ago last March 2 that a handful of brave-hearted Texans met in the town of Washington on the Brazos river near the site of the present city of Brenham and signed a solemn declaration of independence. Their faith in the Mexican government had been destroyed. Their patience was exhausted. They were thoroughly fed up with oppression. They had had enough of Indian raids incited by Mexican officials. By swift strokes of their pens they made themselves free at last from Mexico.

While the independence meeting was in progress in the little town of Washington on the Brazos a harrowing drama was unrolling down in San Antonio, the old Spanish capital of Texas. The Alamo, the chapel of Mission San Antonio de Valero, founded in 1718 by the Franciscans, was under siege—had been besieged since Feb. 23. One hundred eighty-three Texans, including Cols. William B. Travis, David Crockett, and James Bowie, were fighting a hopeless battle against an army of 4,000 Mexicans under the command of Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna.

The siege ended on March 6 when the Mexicans in a final assault swept into the old mission chapel and overcame the Americans in hand-to-hand conflict. Colonel Bowie, who was ill of pneumonia at the time, arose from his sickbed to fight to his death. All of the little garrison were killed by the Mexicans, including five who had survived the final attack.

"Remember the Alamo!" became the battle cry of Texas a century ago.

At the town of Goliad on March 20 the Texas general James Fannin and a command of 371 men were trapped by an army of Mexicans. All but twenty of the Americans were killed. Thereupon entered into the picture one Sam Houston, who a year before at San Felipe de Austin had been elected major general of the army of the provisional government of Texas. The massacre of Fannin's command brought Houston actively into the field of war.

Santa Anna's army, elated over the taking of the Alamo, pushed the little force under Houston before it day after day until on April 21 on the banks of the San Jacinto river the issue was settled for good. Houston's 743 raw troops completely routed the 1,600 Mexicans under Santa Anna. The Mexican commander was taken prisoner.

It was the fight at the San Jacinto river that gave Texas complete independence barely a month and a half after the bold declaration signed at Washington on the Brazos.

Houston was elected president of Texas on Sept. 1, 1836, the newly independent republic having drawn up its constitution on the previous March 17. Houston's first term expired in December, 1838, and he was elected again and served until 1844. It was while Houston was serving as president of the republic of Texas that the city of Houston, named in his honor, was founded. It served as the capital of the republic from 1837 to 1839 and again from 1842 to 1845.

In March, 1845, the congress of the United States passed a joint resolution offering statehood to Texas, and this the Texans gladly accepted. The formal admission to the Union occurred in December of that year. Houston was elected one of the first two senators of the state.

The war between the United States and Mexico saw the new state closest to the scene of action. The conclusion of the war settled the southern boundary of Texas. By the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848 Texas acquired all the land north and east of the Rio Grande from its mouth to its source, or rather its possession of that territory was confirmed, as it long had claimed title to the region. Texas at that time also claimed the eastern half of the present state of New Mexico (east of the Rio Grande), part of Colorado, a corner of Wyoming, a bit of Kansas, and a strip of Oklahoma. By the compromise of 1850 all of this territory not included in the Texas of today was ceded to the United States for ten million dollars.

Texas, as a slave state, naturally was with the confederacy during the civil war. Although there was little fighting within its borders during that conflict, the last battle of the war actually was fought in Texas, at Palmito, near Palo Alto, May 13, 1865, more than a month after the surrender of Appomattox.

Siam Turns to Japan for Guidance

By KIMPEI SHEBA

Tokio, Japan.

AN INTERESTING as well as an important recent development in the record of startling events in the far east has been the increasing cordiality in the relations between Siam and Japan. The last few months have been replete with evidences of this growing friendship.

Numerous missions of good will have come from Siam bearing gifts and profitable trade offers and have been received with open arms in this country. From Japan technical advisers in road construction, agricultural experts, diplomats, scholars, and business men have been dispatched to assist in the development of Siam.

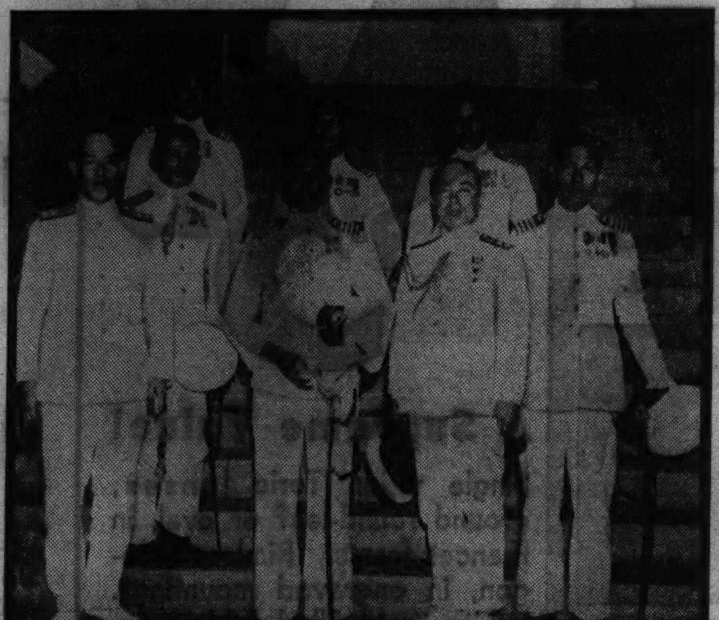
This evidence of Japan's spreading influence comes at a time when the attention of the world is focused on her internal difficulties and her policy of expansion and domination in Asia.

Japan as late as October, 1933, deliberately acted to incur the ill will of Siam by shutting out Siamese rice from Japan. As this is the only important item of export from that country to Japan, and as the measure was passed in the face of increasing Japanese exports to Siam, the conduct of the Siamese in seeking friendly relations with Nippon rather than in planning retaliative measures seems almost as strange as the Japanese action in putting up trade barriers against one of the few countries with which it enjoys a favorable trade balance.

As a matter of fact, the one-sided trade relation between the two countries constitutes today the one blemish in the picture of good will. Japan exports roughly $15,000,000 in goods each year to Siam, but its imports from there are valued at scarcely $200,000. This was not always so. Up to October, 1933, this country purchased about $5,000,000 worth of Siamese rice each year.

Discussing the Siamese-Japanese rapprochement, Phra Mitrakarm Raksha, Siamese minister in Tokio, explained that his country was not offended by Japan's action. Siam realizes, he said, that Japan, faced with a grave farm crisis, was forced to shut out imports of rice. Moreover, according to Phra Raksha, Siam believes that Japan has done its best to make up for the unequal trade balance and is at present conducting investigations into the possibility of important other Siamese products.

"According to American cotton experts," declared Phra Raksha, "Siam ranks with Texas as the most suitable area in the world for the growing of cotton. At least a third of Siam can be utilized for the growing of cotton. We have already engaged two experts, an American, Dr. Pendleton, from the Philippines, and a Japanese, Dr. Mihara, to assist us in growing cotton."



Siamese naval officers in Tokio. Siam recently ordered two war vessels from Japan. (Photos from Sheba.)

The bulk of Japanese exports to Siam is made up of cotton goods, rubber goods, and sundry articles. The significant thing about this is that Japan's exports have been increasing at a phenomenal rate. Unlike other countries which have an unfavorable balance with Japan, Siam is not complaining. The reason is that Siam must have industrial products and prefers those which are cheap.

"Being an independent country, Siam will not be influenced by the desires of other countries at whose cost Japan's trade expansion into Siam has been made," Phra Raksha said. "As long as Japan is able to supply better products more cheaply we will buy from her."

This, of course, may be mere diplomacy. It is not at all unlikely that the powers that be in Siam at present, who kicked out pro-British King Prajadhipok, are playing up to Japan for reasons best known to themselves.

How else can one explain the presence of the chief of staf of the Siamese army in Japan, the visit of a military mission, the placing of orders for two war vessels, the visit last summer of a group of naval officers, and, finally, the recent friendship mission of a group of sixteen members of the Siamese parliament?

Siam, said Phra Raksha, has predilections toward no country. It places orders for steamships, war vessels, and other industrial products with the country capable of meeting its requirements cheaply.

In other matters also, according to Phra Raksha, Siam is seeking Japan's guidance. The Siamese have decided to invite Japanese coaches to train Siamese swimmers. Again, in an altogether different realm, agriculture, the Siamese have requested Japan to send agricultural experts to Siam. Still another province in which Siam aspires to follow Japan is road construction. Several Japanese road construction experts have been hired to plan a municipal road system for Siam.

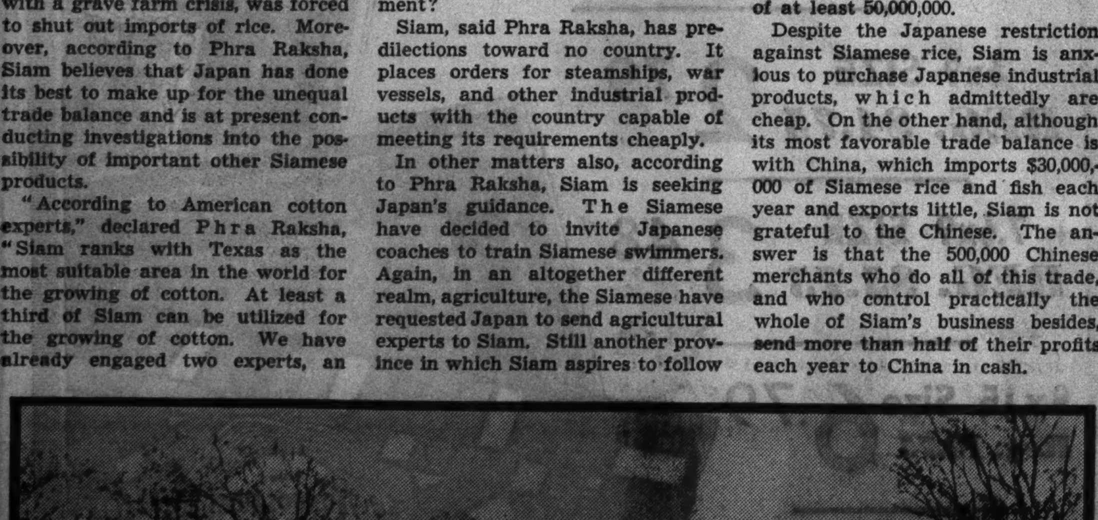
In military affairs Siam is anxious to obtain the guidance of Japan. A mission of fifteen army officers has been studying the Japanese army system. A naval mission has been inspecting Japanese naval dockyards and vessels. The dispatching of army and naval advisers to Siam should be in line.

Although official Siam professes that this sudden interest in Japan has nothing whatever to do with rumors of the public clamor to rid the country of British, Chinese, and French influence, Japanese circles are inclined to feel that there is considerable foundation in these reports.

Three countries figure most prominently in Siam's relations—England, France, and China. To France Siam lost a large section of her northern provinces, including Cambodia. England took an important slice of her southern provinces, and China today controls practically the whole of Siam's commerce and most of her private wealth.

With a land area the size of France, Siam has a population of only 13,000,000. It realizes for this reason that it must remain an agricultural country for at least fifty years, or until it has a population of at least 50,000,000.

Despite the Japanese restriction against Siamese rice, Siam is anxious to purchase Japanese industrial products, which admittedly are cheap. On the other hand, although its most favorable trade balance is with China, which imports $30,000,000 of Siamese rice and fish each year and exports little, Siam is not grateful to the Chinese. The answer is that the 500,000 Chinese merchants who do all of this trade, and who control practically the whole of Siam's business besides, send more than half of their profits each year to China in cash.



Siam is building a modern army copied after that of Japan. Here are shown tanks and armored cars proceeding through the streets of Bangkok, the Siamese capital.

Europe Builds New Fighters and Bombers

By WAYNE THOMIS

ACCOMPANYING photographs depict bombardment and single-seat fighter airplanes built during the last fifteen months for air forces of several European nations. These ships are the newest military airplanes purchased in quantity to supply new squadrons created as a result of expansion in the air arms of most of the powers.

The two types of aircraft shown here represent the two extremes in aerial war machines—the defensive and the offensive. The bombers are the offensive craft, built to fly 1,000 or more miles carrying heavy loads of explosives. The small single-seaters are the defensive ships, used as escorts for the bombers or sent up to intercept and combat raiding enemy bombers.

These ships show several trends in design and in construction and also in aerial tactics, as developed by the general air corps stafs of several countries. They indicate that European manufacturers are profoundly influenced by the success obtained in the United States with the monoplane in all forms of service ships as well as commercial and sport airplanes.

Admittedly the tactical and strategic problems of an air officer in Europe are considerably different from those faced by American aviation leaders. Vulnerability of every European nation to attack by its neighbors is such that defense and defensive operations take precedence over all other considerations.

This fact is reflected in the constant competitions held by the various governments to obtain fighters which have longer range than the weapons of the smaller interceptors.

All fighters now in service in air squadrons have become obsolete and are virtually powerless to stop the new bombardment machines. Moreover, none of the experimental fighters brought out in recent months is fast enough to balance out with its speed the exceptional fire power of the new offensive airplanes.

Stated in its simplest terms, the problem is this: The new bombers carry crews of four or five men. All but one of these men—the one who must pilot the big ship—can operate machine guns or light quick-firing cannon. The weapons are mounted so that they have large angles of fire and can be aimed by their individual users. The gunners are protected from the wind stream by glass turrets within which they are housed.

The single-seater, on the other hand, is generally armed with lighter calibered machine guns. It may carry from two to four guns, but all these must be pointed by aiming of higher performance. In the United States a range of at least 1,000 miles is demanded for even the fastest and most maneuverable single-seaters. In Europe the demand is for extraordinary rate of climb, for fire power, and for speed, in that order.

Range is entirely a secondary requirement, some of the highest-performance interceptors of England, Belgium, France, and Italy having fuel tanks for flight duration of less than two hours. These ships are intended for one purpose—they are maintained merely to protect from bombing such cities as London, Paris, Rome, Antwerp, Brussels, and Berlin.

The frenzy for new and better fighters has been stimulated within the last eighteen months by the production of a new species of bomber which is capable of flying long distances at speeds in the neighborhood of 200 miles an hour. This has been the speed toward which manufacturers of the single-seaters have striven ever since World war days. It was a speed which until the production of American commercial monoplanes experts never hoped to reach in large airplanes.

Now the European air corps tacticians are confronted with the same problem puzzling American designers, to wit: the big bombardment planes are as fast as or faster than the fastest single-seaters, and the large ships are able to carry guns the nose of the airplane toward the target. In other words, the pilot aims the ship to aim the guns and can fire only forward.

During the World war, when 140 miles an hour was the highest speed developed by any airplanes even at the end of 1918, it was discovered that no one single-seater could beat a two-seater airplane properly flown, even though the two-seater was from forty to fifty miles an hour slower.

Now the military experts believe that a single-seat fighter must be at least 100 miles an hour faster than the big, new, heavily armed bombers, to overcome through sheer speed the disadvantages in range and all-angle fire. Bombardment enthusiasts say the present-day bombers can outfight and outfly even five of the modern fighters.

There is little to choose in performance between the British transport-bomber, the German bomber, and the French machine shown here. The English ship, built by Armstrong-Whitworth, has a reported speed of 240 miles an hour at 15,000 feet. The motors are Armstrong-Siddeley 14-cylinder twin-row radials developing 860 horsepower. Its range is said to be 800 miles with a 6,000-pound cargo—explosives or thirty passengers.

The German machine is a Heinkel, type No. 111. With the liquid-cooled BMW 660-horsepower motors shown here it has a speed of 225 miles an hour. This speed is said to be exceeded by 25 miles an hour when 840-horsepower engines are installed. The Heinkel is an almost exact copy of American commercial planes. It carries a load of 2,500 pounds for 1,000 miles. This is one of Germany's latest-type bombers.

A relative of famous World war bombers is the Breguet 460—the French bomber. The Gnome Rhone radial engines, 825 horsepower each, are said to pull it at 240 miles an hour at 13,000 feet. The machine carries a disposable load of 7,170 pounds, of which 2,000 pounds might be bombs were tanks for a 1,000-mile flight installed.

The Italian Savoia Marchetti type S-72 bomber is one of the machines which the air corps of that country has used in Ethiopia. The three engines are 550 horsepower each. With a 1,200-mile range, the ship can carry a load of 1,500 pounds of bombs and two machine gunners besides the pilot. Speed is relatively slow, top being 150 and cruising speed 135 miles an hour.

Fighting airplanes depicted here are those of France and England. Italian and German machines have virtually the same performance, so that a discussion of these three should cover the field.

The high-wing monoplane fighter is a Nieuport with a 700-horsepower Hispano-Suiza liquid-cooled V-type motor. The radiator is in the wing. Machine guns are fixed below the cockpit opening in the wing. The pilot sits just behind the motor and his head is above the aperture in the wing. Performance is said to be 220 miles an hour at 12,000 feet. The Nieuport is one of the oldest French military machines, although this type is a modern ship.

The low-wing fighter is a Henriot type 110 with a Hispano-Suiza liquid-cooled engine of 600 horsepower. It is a pusher type, built to give the pilot perfect visibility, and this is achieved. The tail unit is supported on two booms, with the propeller, a four-bladed type, turning between them.

This fighter is said to be more maneuverable than any other machine in Europe. It carries a quick-firing cannon of the one-pounder type. Shells from this gun explode on striking, making it a deadly weapon, because it is unnecessary to hit a vital point to cripple a machine which may be the target. Explosion of a shell upon striking a wing tip would be sufficient to destroy the wing.

Needleworkers' Guild to Hear English Expert

A. J. B. Wace of Victoria and Albert Museum Will Lecture on Their Craft.

By Cousin Eve.

IF WITH the wings of a dove, or even with an airplane, one could fly to Natchez, Miss., to see gardens of azalea and gardens of old box. Greenleaves, loveliest of the great houses, built before the war of 1812, opens its wide wings in welcome, and ladies of Natchez serve tea to their guests in twenty-seven mansions the week of March 27 to April 6.

There are the camelias and bright azaleas of Arlington, another of the great show places, surrounded by woods, beautiful with early flowering trees.

But one stays by the fireside and counts one's blessings, which include almost too many charming luncheons, teas, dinners, and Lenten lectures. Reminding oneself of the Chicago doctor recommending exercise to his patients. Asked what was his favorite exercise he replied dealing bridge hands and shaking cocktails. However, there are always variety and spice in our Chicago life.

Wace Will Discuss Needlework of 17th and 18th Centuries.

The Needlework and Textile guild of the Art institute is about to entertain. On Wednesday, April 1, at 3 o'clock A. J. B. Wace of London will speak at the Arts club on English needlework of the 17th and 18th centuries.

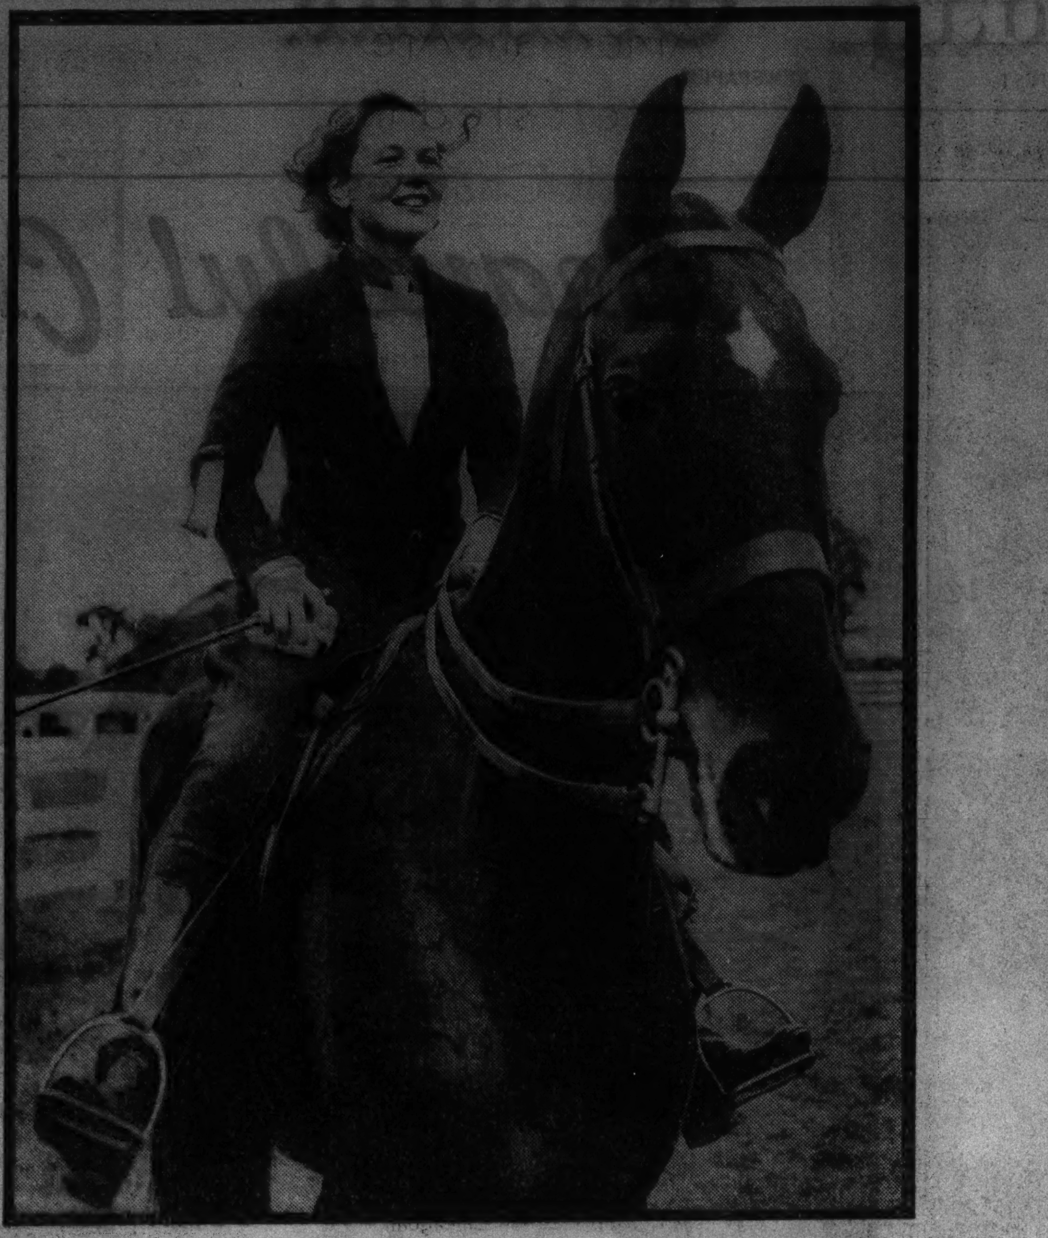
Mr. Wace is professor of archaeology at Cambridge and was latterly deputy of the textiles at the Victoria and Albert museum of London, so he must be well worth listening to. A tea will follow the lecture and an exhibit. Officers of the Needlework guild are Mrs. Harry H. Shearson, president; Mrs. Potter Palmer, vice president; Mrs. C. Morse Ely, vice president; Mrs. Robert A. Gardner, secretary; Mrs. John W. Gary, treasurer, and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., assistant treasurer. The directors are Mrs. Emily Crane Chadbourne, Mrs. John Coleman, Mrs. Kent S. Clow, Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne, Mrs. Gustavus Swift, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, Mrs. Paul Welling, Mrs. Barrett Wendell Jr.

Thorne Brothers Among Chicago's Champion Needleworkers.

Two of the best needleworkers in Chicago happen to be men. And the men happen to be brothers, Robert J. Thorne and James Ward Thorne. Out of active business for some time, Robert Thorne in idle moments works off surplus energy on a magnificent runner for the dining room table. It is twelve feet long and done in the colors and design of the Thorne crest and coat of arms. He has other finished needlework to his credit, two chairs of an old Touraine pattern, and, like Edward VIII. of England, he is also a confirmed knitter.

James Ward Thorne has worked Mickey Mouse rugs and chair seats for adorable young grandchildren His Mickey Mice are black and white and full of ginger; his backgrounds are evenly made, admirable. The Needlework guild has always in its nine years had men members. I don't know that the Thorne men have joined yet, but they should.

Mrs. James Ward Thorne, as everybody should know, is assembling for Queen Mary of England the two small English rooms which ultimately will stand in the Victoria and Albert museum at Kensington, London. It seems part of the eternal fitness of things that her beautiful handiwork should be so royally perpetuated. At the Needlework guild of the Art institute are two exquisite little Aubusson carpets being worked for the floors of these rooms.



SHE'S AN AMBITIOUS YOUNG HORSEWOMAN

Miss Natalie DeClerque is an ambitious young horsewoman who rides with zest. She was photographed last fall at a Winnetka horse show in which she won several ribbons. This winter she has been riding indoors, but it will not be long before she is riding in the sunshine on the bridle paths around Winnetka, hatless as she was the day this picture was taken.

Salvation Army Gives a Painless Benefit.

Encore! Another benefit, and this time a painless one. Not even a solicitation. The woman's board of the Salvation Army shows its new talkie "Behind the Tambourine" at the Woman's Athletic club Monday, March 30, at 3. There will be tea, there will be music, and they say the picture is really interesting. Mrs. William S. Monroe issues the invitation and present will be a flock of new board members: Mrs. Harney Bassett, Mrs. Ernest Byfield, Mrs. Phelps Dunham, Mrs. T. J. Fleming, Mrs. Thomas Gowenlock, Mrs. Robert B. Gregory, Mrs. Harold Pynchon.

Numerous friends of China attended a musical at Mrs. Richard T. Crane's house Sunday afternoon to hear Alexandre Tcherepnine, a Russian pianist-composer. His theme was Chinese music, and it was illustrated by him on the piano and with records, quite exciting ones. The Crane house, Gothic and richly plain, is a wonderful setting for any music. Heavy draperies blotted out cold March daylight from the great living room occupying the lake front side of the house, and there was a delicious scent of wood smoke from log fires in huge stone fireplaces, a feeling of being at ease to hear all about this matter of Chinese music no matter how painful.

Alexandre Tcherepnine, a tall, spare young man, un peu precieux, talked from the piano bench of his two year migrations from Japan to China. Clasping his elbows with long, nervous hands or letting them fall in complete relaxation, he produced modern Chinese music as written for Chinese orchestra, from records. In this way, too, the theme song of Buddhist monks, from which the speaker said the Volga Boat Song seems to have been stolen, was rather magnificent. Certainly the two songs are identical.

Later he gave on the piano a modern Chinese piece which might have been Debussy. But its composer had never in his life heard motifs of Debussy. Yet it was as good as the French musician and highly evocative.

Rejoices Symphony Doesn't Go In for Chinese Tunes.

Somebody rather highbrow said to me later, in the happier moment of tea, that Chinese music seemed to be highly intellectual and high up in the head, whereas Bali music was all emotional and down in the chest. But one felt about that as about many things. Not being Chinese what does it matter the kind of music they make in China so long as they don't give it at the Symphony concerts in Chicago?

Mrs. William B. Hale opened the meeting with her usual grace, and Mrs. Crane received informally. Her daughter, Mrs. William Robinson, and Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, her sister, presided in the dining room at the long old English table. William Robinson had arrived from Tahiti via the Panama canal and New York, looking sunburned and fit. They call it "Tighty" down in the South seas and not what we learned out of geography books.

The eastern reviewers have given the explorer good notices of his new book, which includes an account of his adventures on the Galapagos Islands eleven hundred miles west of Chili, a barren spot inhabited by penguins. To these islands he took his fair, blonde bride, young Florence Crane. In this book William Robinson gives all credit to his wife for the success of his journey, saying she was the only girl in the world who would have gone with him there. And also the only one who could have brought him back alive. Among the many fans of China, Mrs. Silas Strawn, Mrs. William Chalmers, Mrs. Sewell Avery, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Robinson, Mrs. Robert Wheeler, Mrs. Frank Mulford, Mrs. George Langhorne, Mrs. Paul Welling, Miss Emily Larned, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Miss Helen Gilbert, Gen. and Mrs. Frank McCoy, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Russell, George Voevodsky, Col. George Marshall, Henry Field, Mrs. Ernest Freund, Mrs. Quincy Wright, Arthur Heun, Mrs. C. B. Goodspeed, Mr. and Mrs. William Parsons.

Interesting news from Italy; at least I thought it was—Prince Spada Potenziani, the gallant and fascinating "Gino," has gone to Ethiopia. In company with the younger Badoglio he sailed some weeks ago for Eritrea. One can fancy this most exotic of all the Roman princes, who spent the two seasons of our World's Fair in Chicago, going to the front in the last word in uniforms—he has the figure of a mere lad, slim waist, long shanks. It was something of a sight last year in Rome to see the prince in summer evening clothes, with a handful of his decorations in miniature hanging from the buttonhole. Elegance personified, not to mention charm.

Other news from Rome in a letter from Contessa Bolognetti Cenci; a long, severe winter, with day after day of bandage rolling. The Cencis allow themselves one evening of movies in the week, an occasional game of bridge about twice weekly. They manage a spare diet and give up their motor car in order to help win the colonial war in Ethiopia for their country. Contessa Cenci was Felicia Oglesby of Illinois.

Mayor of Biarritz Lives Up to His Flatterers.

It was noised abroad that the mayor of Biarritz is one of the handsomest of men. I'll say he is, with an Anthony Edenish look, only bigger and better. When Monsieur and Madame Ferdinand Hirigoyen walked in to the reception at the Ambassador East Sunday night, which preceded the Benjamin Rosenthals' dinner, they looked like a Velasquez pair. Other guests gasped in frank admiration. Here were good looks so apparent that nobody need disagree.

Monsieur is tall, dark, and ruddy as a true Basque, with the Eden face, which he admitted had often been said to him by English travelers. Madame, dressed in voluminous black tulle with long puffed sleeves, had a touch of fairness, with bright hazel eyes and the elegance of a Parisienne. The dinner table was so long that it took a bird glass to see convives at the far end. Set slantwise in a gray room, it was massed with pink and yellow rose foliage in set pieces and filmy white flowers. Mrs. René Weiller in white satin, Mrs. Walter Dill Scott in vivid green, Mrs. Frank Mulford in primrose lace, and Mrs. Jacob Baur's pale blue lamé were bright notes.

Hirigoyen Comes to Chicago to Study His Native Tongue.

To understand the mayor of Biarritz one had to know Basque pretty well, and nobody knows anything about Basque, where it came from or whither it is going. I had to guess at what the mayor was saying. But it appears that the library of the University of Chicago has a corner on all the Basque in the world, having purchased the Basque library of the late Prince Roland Bonaparte, which had the world's supply of Basque. So the mayor said he had to come to Chicago to find out about his own language. When the inevitable speeches began we learned that Ferdinand Hirigoyen is a champion jai alai player, or pelotte as he called it, the fastest game in the world. He is a double champion, having won the medal at 20 and again at 40.

After that we began to hear why the Hirigoyens were in this country. Not only have they many American friends who have wintered and summered at Biarritz, but Mr. Hirigoyen has a mission. He wishes to establish an exchange society of students; French boys who shall come here and learn our ways and Americans who shall live and study in France. Some of this was explained by the French consul in his delightful talk. Robert Hall McCormick, president of the Alliance, called on for a speech, let his fancy wander so exotically that he found himself calling the mayor of Biarritz a führer, or as he explained it, a führer like Hitler or Mussolini. It only needed just this to give Mr. Hirigoyen a large laugh. Here he was, rushing home to France, a good vacation spoiled by Herr Hitler. All reserve officers are called, and this Frenchman is a colonel, returning to the colors as fast as he can.

Another high note, when M. Julien Benda, French philosopher, writer, and lecturer, a little gray, mousey man rose up and declaimed against love. He scoffed at family love, said the most terrible hatreds existed in families. As for romantic love, it was mostly to be found in the cinema. A bas love! It turned out that M. Benda is a bachelor, which might explain his acid viewpoint.

English Hostess Washes China with Her Own Hands.

Thus ended the speechmaking. Mrs. Frank Mulford had a small tea Monday for the handsome Basques who are, by the way, old friends of Roy and Betty McWilliams. They say that Roy McWilliams, vice consul at Biarritz for twenty years, is adored in the Basque country for his wit, his amiable ways, and his generosity.

Mrs. Mulford, one of Chicago's most accomplished hostesses, had her tea table brought in the living room, and sat herself down behind it. There was a fire of hickory logs and the dozen or more guests sat in a large circle, French style. Rigolo, an utterly fascinating Highland dog of great sophistication, did an occasional dance on his hind legs to enchant the visitors and hold the spotlight.

The Chelsea cups were out in honor of the French guests—tea for some reason has a more ambient look in Chelsea's satin textured ware.

Mrs. Hamilton McCormick was telling me that in English houses the chatelaine and her own maid, after the guests have gone, lave the tea service in clear warm water, with soft cloths and mild soap. No acids are allowed to mar the pattern of color or the exquisite texture of these treasures. Good housewifery is why so many beautiful English tea sets have come to us down the centuries.

Napoleon's Tomb in Beads Is Genuinely Moving.

After tea the guests crowded into the boudoir and hall to see Mrs. Mulford's ever increasing collection of old bead pictures. As usual, Napoleon's tomb at St. Helena with its two sorrowful yews made the deepest impression on me. In fact, I love them all, and their exquisite frames, symphonies in color and design. At this party besides Mrs. Rosenthal and Mme. Hirigoyen, Mrs. Rosencrans Baldwin, Mrs. Ballard Moore, Mrs. Powell Pardee, Mrs. William Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Meeker. On Tuesday Miss Elizabeth McCormick is giving one of her intimate talks at the Art institute, and showing a collection of French revolutionary prints. As she is a most entertaining speaker, nobody will forget this date.

Model Trains Are Hobby of Men in This English Club

Perhaps the most popular club for men in Leeds at the moment is the Leeds Model Railway club, whose members are largely those fathers who can't let their boy's railway set alone.

LONDON

There are a few men in it who make a hobby during an evening of the work with which they are connected during the day, but most of the club members are professional men who still harbor the secret ambition to "run an engine."

At the club's "machine shop" the men design and build model engines, both steam driven and electrically driven, with the same enthusiasm with which the men of a former generation designed and built model yachts. One of the members has built an engine of the steam driven large type express which is entirely of copper and brass and is such an amazing example that it may be on exhibition. Another member has visited a number of railway works and locomotive sheds to get exact measurements to be reduced to scale. A railway official, as visitor to the club, has expressed amazement at the high technical skill shown.

Although not a member of this club, one of the most prominent model railway builders in this country is Sir Malcolm Campbell. He has designed a complete system not only of railway carriages and freight cars but also of yards and works, extraordinarily accurate in miniature. And although it is all made by hand with enormous labor, it works with the same technical perfection as the highest priced factory made models.

Etiquet Editor Gives Rules of Dual Wedding

Special Regulations Govern the Management of Dual Marriage Ceremony

By Helen Bartlett.

DOUBLE weddings used to be a great deal more popular a few years ago than they are today. But that doesn't mean that they are not correct or that they never are seen. It frequently happens that sisters or cousins plan to be married at about the same time and, quite naturally, decide on a double ceremony. It is quite a saving from the financial standpoint.

In the case of a double wedding there is a definite procedure to be followed in respect to the processional, ceremony, and recessional.

At any wedding ceremony the bridegroom enters the church from the side door, following immediately behind the clergyman. They proceed to the altar and wait there for the wedding procession. At a double wedding ceremony there naturally will be two bridegrooms. They will follow the clergyman and stand side by side, each with his best man behind him, and the bridegroom of the older sister standing at the left, nearer the aile.

The processional should be led by the ushers walking two by two, the ushers attending the first bridegroom walking first and those attending the second bridegroom following at an equal number of paces. Next in the parade will be the attendants of the older sister, the first bride, her bridesmaids walking in pairs first, and behind them the maid of honor alone. Then the older sister on her father's right arm.

The party of the younger sister is made up in the same way, her bridesmaids first in pairs, then her maid of honor walking alone. And, finally, the second bride on the arm of a brother, uncle, or nearest male relative. This second party follows immediately behind the first.

As the processional appoaches the altar, the column divides, half of the attendants standing on one side of the altar, and half on the other, facing the altar and turned slightly toward the congregation.

The first bride and bridegroom take their positions at the left side of the altar rail, allowing room at the right for the other couple. The father of the two brides stands just in back of his elder daughter, and the brother or uncle who escorted the younger daughter takes his place in one of the first pews at the left of the aile. After the father has given away both his daughters, he takes his place beside his wife in the first pew at the left.

When the ceremony has been completed, the first couple, the elder daughter and her husband, turn and lead the recessional, she walking on his right. The second couple follows immediately. Then the maid of honor of the first bride followed by the bridesmaids of the first walking in pairs, next the maid of honor of the second, and her bridesmaids, and finally the ushers, two by two. The two best men go out the way they came in, through the side door, and meet the wedding party at the front of the church. And from there the entire group motors to the reception.

RECEPTION PLANNED

Americans Are Interested in Paris Charities

Sister Mary Reeves, Former Baltimore Girl, Directs Philanthropy.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS Many of the representative members of the American colony in Paris, without distinction of creed, contribute to the work for the destitute that was founded here nearly thirty years ago by Sister Mary Reeves. When Nancy Reeves of Baltimore took the veil it caused a sensation in her native city. Early in this century she became identified with the mother house of the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul. For a long time she has been the secretary of this organization, located in the Rue du Bac, not far from the Louvre.

Her particular sympathy goes out to those who suffer, especially in winter, from a lack of money and clothes, and she is indefatigable in soliciting and obtaining help for her humane efforts. Her published appeals, no less than her personal canvassing, meet with an instant response. But as the work grows under her direction she is always in quest of more help.

Through the courtesy of United Artists the film "Dark Angel," featuring Merle Oberon, recently had its first showing in Paris and the women of the American colony organized the sale of tickets so effectively that the proceeds were considerable.

Mrs. Aldis, Former Chicagoan, Attending Paris Preview.

Among those attending was Mrs. Owen Aldis, widow of a former Chicagoan, who has figured in several dinner parties recently given at the Café de Paris by Emil Winter, the steel manufacturer. Mrs. Aldis also attended a dinner given recently by the Duc and Duchesse de Talleyrand at their residence in the Avenue Malakoff, at the corner of the Avenue Maréchal Foch. After the dinner the duchesse took her women guests to the opera for "Tristan."

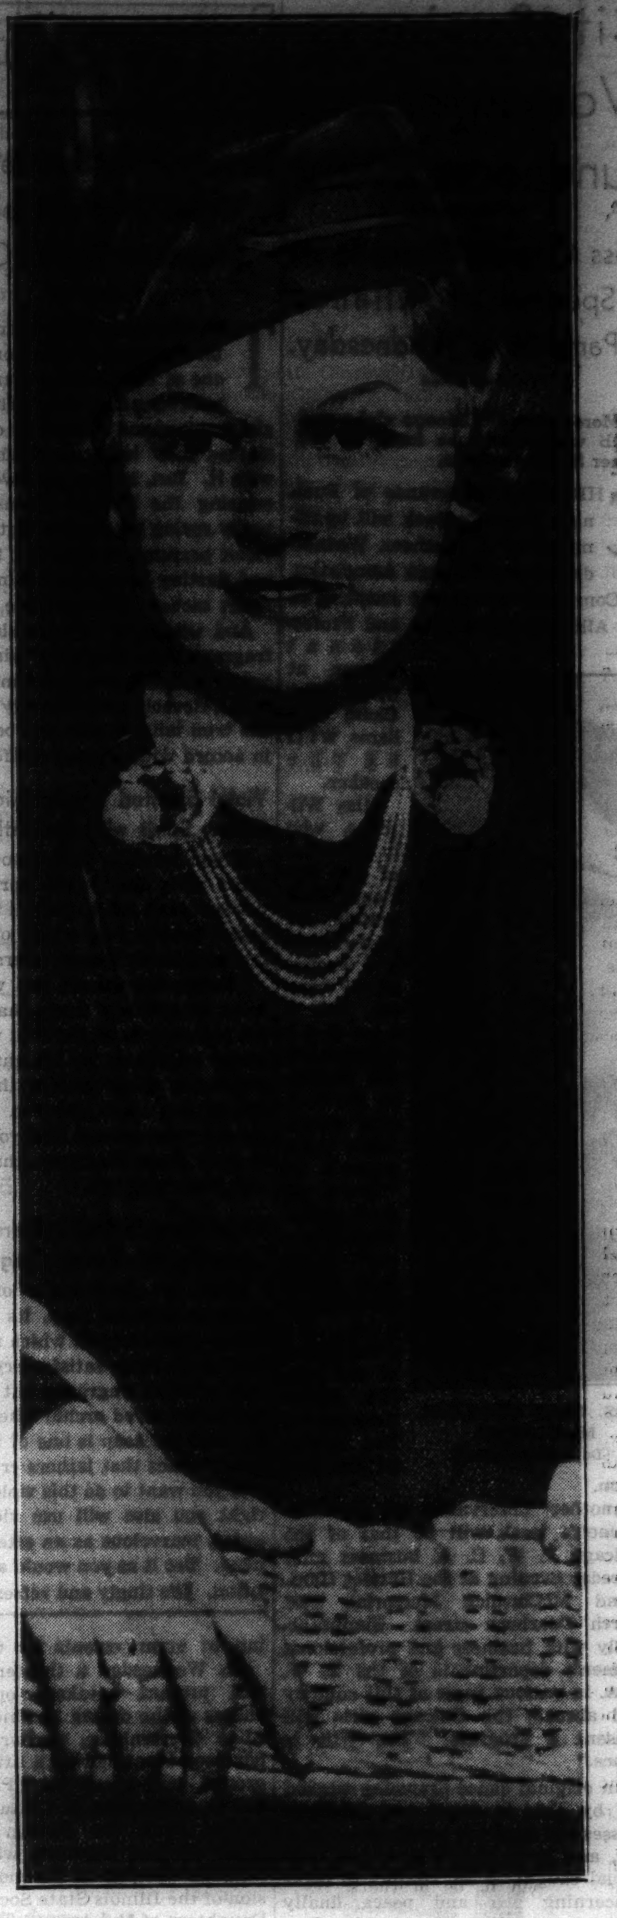
Nothing is more interesting, for the gourmet, than a dinner at the Talleyrand mansion, which is modeled architecturally on the Trianon of Versailles—the house, not the dinner. The Duc de Talleyrand, who has quite the look and air of a grand seigneur of the old régime, possesses an extraordinary knowledge of food and wines. The wine cellar is built deep, so that the precious vintages may not be shaken in their bottles by street traffic. Wines from Bordeaux, Burgundy, and Champagne, not to mention other provenances, as well as the finely matured old liqueurs, reach the table with a bouquet, as the phrase is, that makes them fit for the gods. These various nectars punctuate, in the most artistic way, dishes which are the né plus ultra in their respective kinds: the choicest endive from Belgium, and foie gras that is a poem.

Mrs. Chauncey Borland and Daughter Martha in Paris.

Mrs. Chauncey Borland and her daughter Martha, who, with Mary McDonald, have been in Brussels and London, are now in Paris at the Crillon.

Mr. and Mrs. William Schuyler of Chicago were guests at a tea and cocktail party given in their honor by Mrs. Elie Pierre Daution. Among the others present were Gilbert White, the artist, and his wife, Princess Coloredo-Mansfeld, and a number of figures in legal and military circles.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicolas Raffalovich, after a visit of several months in America, returned a few days ago on the Ile de France and are back at the residence in the Avenue Malakoff.



RED ADDS GAY NOTE

Mrs. Alexander Brassert is a member of the board of the South Shore Service league, which is an auxiliary to the Chicago Maternity center. The league is holding its annual spring benefit on April 25 in the Gold room of the Congress hotel. It will be a Hula ball with Hawaiian decorations and entertainment. A touch of red ribbon on her little hat adds a gay note to Mrs. Brassert's black outfit, which also is enlivened by a pearl ornament.

Questions Sign of Child's Mind

The Wise Parent Keeps His Poise and Answers Them All Intelligently.

By G. H. Bevans.

"SHE drives me almost crazy with her questions," cries a distracted mother of her small daughter.

"The questions Billy asks me make me almost tear my hair," announces another mother of an older son. "Half the time I can't answer them."

"She didn't talk until she was nearly 3," said a father among my acquaintances. "But when she got started—well, she's a walking question mark now."

How do you feel about your children's questions? Do you think they "only do it to annoy because they know it teases?" Or do you realize that their questions are one more phase of that curiosity which betokens an active and inquiring mind?

Questions Child's Reminders We Must Teach Him.

With a few exceptions, the latter is the fact of the matter.

Children learn first through their senses—through their eyes, their sense of touch, and taste, and smell, and perhaps last, their hearing. But they also learn by asking questions.

Think a minute. If our children asked us no questions at all, would we sit down and tell them this and that and that—or pause dozens of times to explain facts they need to know? It's absurd to think it. Of course we wouldn't.

It's by their questions, largely, that we are made aware of their mental needs. It's in this way that we realize again and again the gaps in their knowledge and understanding. It's by their constant why's and what for's that we appreciate how much they need us to interpret this world, so new to them.

Some Queries Are Bids for Attention.

There are, of course, questions that children ask just for the sake of talking. But when they do this it's usually because they're trying to get or keep your attention—perhaps they feel chatty when you're absorbed in your own thoughts. Or they may have been completely ignored [and so bored] for a long time in a group of grownups.

O yes, there is another type of question—it's one which children sometimes ask to put off the "evil hour," or which acts as a sort of argument, such as:

"Why must I wash my hands before I eat? They're clean—see mommy!" or, "Why do I have to go to bed, mother—Mary's out in her yard playing—why do I have to go to bed?"

But these questions we've quoted as exceptions do not make up the bulk of children's queries. Most of the questions children ask deserve in themselves a real answer.

And let me stop once more to say this—that a real answer is not always a long answer. In fact long answers and elaborate explanations often bore a child; or, if he is young, are lost because his attention just naturally wavers after a certain length of time.

Subjects of Child's Questions Limitless.

So sometimes an answer should be brief, depending upon the child's age and upon the moment; while at other times one question will lead to another and we find a long and absorbing conversation may ensue—dealing with animals or nature or God or birth or death!

And this brings us to the subject of what children ask questions about.

Well, there is no limit to that. There is nothing too slight, too deep, too comprehensive or too detailed for them to wonder about. The visible, the invisible—the tangible, the intangible—the material, the spiritual—people, places—their minds play about everything and anything.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

By Eleanor Nangle

Beauty Aids Scented with Violet Are a Beguiling Means to Spring Charm.

THE violet may be a retiring little blossom but, at the moment, it's one of the most popular in fashion's song and story. The Gibson girl fashions and all the rest of the coy clothes may have something to do with it. But, in any case, women are wearing the flowers themselves as perky spring corsages, adopting wood violet perfume as their pet fragrance and dusting themselves daintily with violet sachet. It's quite the rage.

And why not? The fresh, woodsy fragrance has charm for nine people out of ten. It's soft and feminine and cool, a cleverly contradictory accent to the trim tailored suit and beguilingly in accord with floating chiffons.

Violet Scented Beauty Aids Endow Spirit with Sprightliness.

If you want to endow your spring spirit with charm and sprightliness you shouldn't fail to inspect the violet-kissed beauty aids which one of the great cosmetic houses offers you.

Leading the parade is a violet perfume, delightfully fresh, that will uplift your spirits at the first whiff. As violet fragrances go it's rather lush, which we think is just the way it should be. Just spray a bit of it around your person and you'll know in your bones that your charm score has gone 'way up.

Violet Soap Which Lathers Creamily Has Lovely Fragrance.

Then, for your hours of privacy, there is a violet soap, its fragrance highly concentrated, which makes the bath a divinely satisfactory rite. It may be violet fragrance, but you'll feel like a pampered orchid when you use it. And the soap is one of those nice smooth ones that lathers creamily.

If you want to do this violet rage up right you also will use violet toilet water, marvelous as an after-the-bath treat. Use it as you would a rubdown lotion. It's tingly and refreshing, and again you have the beautiful fragrance of the sweet violet.

Violet Sachet Included in Lovely Array of Preparations.

Carrying out the violet motif so completely and so correctly will bring your efforts to use a lovely perfume up to the rank of an art. The scent will cling for hours, softly and subtly.

The house creating these violet preparations, which you'll find in shops everywhere, has a violet sachet, too, that will do an admirable job of perfuming your lingerie. If you're violet-minded you mustn't miss on this point.

And, as we've said, this is the year to be violet-minded!

[For information about these preparations telephone Eleanor Nangle, Superior 0100, or write to her in care of The Chicago Tribune.]

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in The Chicago Tribune.

The wood violet is the shy flower on whom fashion is smiling at the moment. Perfume, toilet water, soap and sachet in the woodsy motif contribute to spring spirit.

London Informed of Mary Leigh's Wedding Plans

LONDON
Capt. and Mrs. Gerard Leigh have announced the forthcoming marriage of their oldest daughter, Mary, to Mr. Heny Garnett of the Royal Horse Guards.

Mrs. Gerard Leigh will be remembered as Miss Helen Goudy of Chicago, whose long, fair hair, large blue eyes, and delicate complexion were well known there even before the English climate increased her beauty. She has a low, soft voice which has done much to alter the Englishman's idea of the American speech.

Miss Mary Leigh, who was inherited her mother's pink and white coloring, was a Silver Jubilee debutante at the age of 17, and will be married when she is 18. Much of the entertaining the Gerard Leighs have done for their daughter has been done in their own home at No. 16 Grosvenor street, where dinner parties for 60 or more guests may be easily managed. Other entertaining last year was done at Beaulieu abbey, which Mrs. Leigh rented from Lord Montagu for entertaining at Cowes. For several years Mrs. James Corrigan has rented Mrs. Leigh's house for her sumptuous entertaining during the London season.

Suffering the fate of so many of those mansions, No. 16 Grosvenor street, now is being turned into business offices, and the Leighs have taken one of the "luxury" flats in Mount street, Mayfair, as well as a house in the Melton Mowbray district, Thorpe Satchville.

What with a big society wedding to arrange for Mary, Mrs. Leigh is bringing out her second daughter, Peggy, as a Coronation debutante, and one can well imagine the "engagement book" of the family.

Everywhere Women Are Raving About This Amazing New Shampoo

It's not a soap! Not an oil!

Yet it makes dull hair gleam with life and lustre . . . and costs just a few pennies a shampoo

It's no wonder women everywhere are raving about this amazing, new liquid shampoo—no wonder one trial converts them for life! For it gives your hair a thrilling new gleam. Yes, actually transforms dull, average-looking hair into a brilliant, glistening halo. And does it in only one single application!

Look at the girl above to see what a difference it will make when you use it! So try it soon—see how beautiful, how radiant your hair really can be!

Just how this unusual shampoo works these miracles is a new scientific secret. It isn't oil, it isn't soap—it isn't anything you've heard of before. Scientists have brought us something brand-new; a shampoo so different that they've patented the process by which it is made. You simply wet your hair, shake on a few drops and instantly you get a glorious, billowy lather in any kind of water—5 times more than soap in the hardest kind of water. Rub it briskly into the hair, rinse once—and you're through.

"What?" you say, "no second rinses, no vinegar or special after-rinses?"

No—not one extra rinse! That's the marvelous part. This wonderful new shampoo, being neither oil nor soap, can't make that gummy, unrinsable film ordinary shampoos leave to cover up natural lustre. So your hair can be always radiant and glamorous, silky and smooth! No more like your former "mousey-looking" head than a diamond is like glass. Even more amazing, any loose dandruff disappears, leaving your scalp clean and alive.

Procter & Gamble make this marvel and you can buy it in various size bottles at all drug, department and ten cent stores. Remember—the name is Drene. And if you want your hair to look more beautiful, more alluring than ever before, you'd better try some right away!

Another thing—Drene gives bleached or dyed hair a wonderfully soft, undetectably natural look. And you'll be glad to find it's the most economical shampoo you ever used—one half tablespoonful gives you the finest shampoo you've ever had, at a cost of only a few pennies.

"Prospects for Late Models Almost Invariably Read Tribune Want Ads"

"We wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the wonderful response we have received through your classified advertising. tells how he found a good, late model car at the price he wanted to pay.

"I AM a real estate salesman with a firm which is interested in the sale of small farms and acre estates near Chicago. I call for clients at their homes and drive them out to the property. As I average 100 miles a day and sometimes more, I have to have a car which is reliable and economical.

"The car I was driving was a large 1929 sedan. It used too much gas and was getting to the point where repairs were frequent.

DECIDES ON MORE ECONOMICAL CAR

"I finally made up my mind to turn it in and get a late model car. For several days I watched the automobile columns of the Tribune want ad section. I looked at several of the cars advertised without finding exactly what I had in mind. Finally I saw a 1934 Ford two-door, de luxe, advertised by Nelsen-Hirschberg, Inc., 5133 Irving Park Blvd., which is right near my office.

TESTS OUT THE CAR

"I laid down the paper, picked up my hat and coat and walked over there. Mr. Shack, salesman in the used car department, showed me the car. It seemed to be in good shape. We took it out and drove it around, and it performed okay.

"They quoted me a figure on my old car and I decided to take the deal. I have been driving the new car for some weeks now. It performs perfectly, and is a lot more economical than the old one. I am glad I bought it."

IF YOU ARE IN THE MARKET FOR A GOOD, LATE MODEL CAR, one which will go easy on the gas and give you reliable service for a long time to come, check the automobiles for sale columns in the Tribune want ad section. Gyro-Stabilizers Aid in Research; Calm Seas Shown

USE of the gyro stabilizers in the Conte di Savoia of the Italian line has resulted in a great contribution to research in marine construction, says a report based on a three year survey by Sperry engineers working in conjunction with Capt. Antonio Lena, commander of the liner. The length of time taken was necessary, said Capt. Lena, because of the relatively few occasions when storms of magnitude are encountered on the southern route to Europe.

The survey indicated that on the southern route to Europe the sea is calm five-sixths of the time. This estimate is based on the fact that, during her first three years in service, the Savoia used her stabilizers for a total of 1,322 hours, or 16.4 per cent of her total sailing time, the stabilizers being "turned on" every time a roll of six degrees developed.

The contribution to research came as a result of the ability of engineers to measure, with the gyro stabilizers, the comparative force and effects of the four distinct motions of a ship: Pitching, rolling, yawing, and heeling.

The Voice of the Traveler

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Please keep them brief. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

WHO KNOWS?

Chicago, March 17.—To the Travel Editor: Ever since I can remember I have heard it said of any one who is widely traveled that "he has sailed the seven seas." Can you tell me where and when this expression originated and what the seven seas are supposed to be?

In your answer to a travel query the other day you said that the Union Jack flies over numerous islands "in each of the seven seas." The oceans, of course, are seas, but there are only five of them. Of the larger seas there are the Mediterranean, Caribbean, Arabian, China, Bering, North, Adriatic, Baltic—but I am naming more than seven. And there are a great many others—the Caspian, the Black, White, and Red seas, Irish sea, Sea of Japan, Sea of Okhotsk, and the Zuider Zee.

It may be that I am sadly lacking in a knowledge of geography and literature [for I know that even Kipling wrote about the seven seas, although I can't just now put my hand on the place where he mentions them], but if I am I have plenty of company, for I can't find anyone who can enlighten me. Will you, please?

GOING SOMEWHERE?

THERE will be an unprecedented increase in European tour business this summer, H. W. Eagle, acting Chicago passenger agent for the Canadian Pacific, predicted yesterday.

"Not since before the war," he said, "have so many comprehensive tours of the continent at low prices been planned. Rumors of possible trouble over there have had little or no effect on inquiries and advance reservations. For the last ten years most of the travelers have gone to Europe either for business or with some particular country in view, but this summer promises to bring the volume of organized group travel through all the countries to the level of pre-war years.

"Due to the lowering of railway fares in Europe, first class hotel accommodations are available on even the lowest priced tours. This year the Scandinavian countries will attract an unusually large number of tourists, as shown by the heavy bookings already made for the cruises to the ports of the Baltic."

Mr. Eagle pointed out that the cost of cruising to Europe has been reduced to such an extent that some of the 28 day tours are being quoted at as low as $280.

On the sixth anniversary of her entry into the trans-Atlantic service, the North German Lloyd liner Europa sailed from New York at midnight Wednesday with an unusually distinguished list of passengers, including a number of British notables who had been visiting in this country this winter. Among them were the duke of Marlborough, his four children, Lady Caroline Spencer Churchill, Lady Rosemary Spencer Churchill, Lady Sarah Spencer Churchill, and the marquis of Blandford; the marchioness of Dufferin and Ava, Lord and Lady Stavordale, and Sir Hugo and Lady Cunliffe-Owen.

Regarded as one of the finest in this country, the new city ticket office of the United Air Lines was christened and opened Thursday evening. It is situated at 23 East Monroe street, on the ground floor of the Palmer house, and is ultra-modern in its accommodations. Harold Crary, vice president in charge of advertising, presided over the opening ceremonies.

The first issue of "New Horizons," a magazine devoted to travel, made its appearance last week. Among the contributors were Rex Beach, Burton Holmes, Daniel Sayre, Bob Davis, Marjorie Shuler, and Harry Franck. The issue was devoted largely to the Latin-American countries and how they may be reached by air. Five hundred copies have been placed at the Chicago Tribune Public Service office at Madison and Dearborn for distribution among those interested in Mexico, the West Indies, and South and Central America.

Effective last Sunday, the Braniff Airways speeded up its service between the Great Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico. The system bisects the transcontinental lines and provides a connecting link between Chicago and Mexico.

Under a plan worked out by Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., all of its 43 hostesses are now acting as "reporters." They are instructed to be on the lookout for news stories in connection with the passengers, and to report these stories to their captains and first officers.

Popularity of the Mediterranean as a vacation playground, not only for the affluent American traveler, but also for the tourist of limited means, was indicated in yesterday's sailing of the Italian line's Vulcania with a record trans-Atlantic passenger list of 1,140, the largest list of any liner so far this year. The Vulcania had 425 tourist class passengers—a capacity tourist crowd—and this, in the opinion of Chicago officials of the line, heralds a pre-season tourist travel trend to the Mediterranean countries.

Railroads operating between Chicago and Louisville are getting ready for the 62d annual Kentucky Derby, to be run at Churchill Downs Saturday, May 2. Numerous all-expense excursions are planned.

Word received in Chicago has it that tourists holding United States passports will be permitted to enter Hungary in July and August for an indefinite stay without the customary Hungarian visé.

A summer's tour of the orient will be undertaken this year by the N. Y. K. line. The passengers will leave from Seattle on the Hikawa Maru June 12, visit Japan, Korea, Manchukuo, China, and Hawaii, and return to San Francisco on the Taiyo Maru Aug. 13. Thomas Cook & Son are to be in charge of the shore excursions.

Following a tropical dinner at the Hamilton club Wednesday evening, John Hutter will conduct an "armchair cruise" to Guatemala and Costa Rica by means of films and colored slides. The lecture is sponsored by L. J. McCalley, general passenger agent in Chicago for the United Fruit company.

92 Travel Posters to Be Shown Here

AN exhibition of 92 travel posters selected from 600 submitted in a national contest sponsored by the Institute of Foreign Travel will be given at the Marshall Field store, fourth floor south of Wabash avenue, opening next Wednesday and lasting seven days.

In connection with the exhibit, Edwin Robert Petre, director of the institute, will give an address on Europe at 2:30 p. m. on Monday, March 30. He will tell of the many changes he has seen in the travel world since the turn of the century and will describe the best ways of enjoying a trip to Europe this summer.

The Chicago exhibit is sponsored by all the trans-Atlantic steamship conference lines and at its close the posters will be shown in other leading cities throughout the United States and Canada.

ESCORTED TOURS

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

MORE and more Americans are taking their car along when they light out for tours of the old world. The trans-Atlantic freight rates for autos are comparatively low, and a car can now be shipped abroad and used to good advantage with a minimum amount of red tape.

Bert Vanderwarf, manager of the touring and foreign travel bureaus of the Chicago Motor club, told this department about it the other day. He painted an alluring picture of the possibilities of auto travel in Europe.

● "Have you ever had the fun of getting together a picnic lunch in a little provincial town in France?" he asked. Assured that we hadn't, he went on:

"There stands your car, patiently waiting outside the hotel door, for there is no one but yourself and your friends to care when you leave in the morning. The patisserie where you get your rolls and sweets, the charcuterie for the jambon, or, in our prosaic language, ham of the most delicate sort; the laiterie for a bit of cheese and butter, and, last thought, the fruit and a bottle of wine nearby—all these stores make up the village and you feel at once a sense of kinship with the French housekeeper, with none of her worries.

"Perhaps you prefer the neat box the hotel is always glad to put up for you, or perhaps you prefer to seek out some little inn on the way when you grow hungry. In any case, you are off with a map in your hand and the countryside unrolling before you in all its beauty and charm."

● "But," we said, "we have beautiful scenery in this country, and plenty of variety, too."

"Right you are," said Mr. Vanderwarf. "But where except in Europe can you find a house with a thatched roof with no imitation about it? Where can you see peasants in costume filing into the village church of a Sunday morning, or glimpse in the bend of a road a medieval castle standing guard over the surrounding country, just as it has stood for centuries? More than that, you feel released from the everyday life you have been leading. Cares, unspoken worries have long since disappeared. Life has become suddenly filled with new sights, new impressions, new memories that unconsciously you are storing up against the long, cold winter at home.

"Let no one tell you Europe is dead. It is alive, simply because it can give you new life."

● "Some people like to plan each day well in advance, and that planning is part of the fun; others prefer to go quite unprepared," this travel enthusiast continued. "Certainly time has an element of play in this European adventure, and our own taste in countries is a big consideration.

"Whether our aim be the northernmost point in Scotland, with its profusion of heather and gorse, or the southernmost tip of Italy, with its pink and blue houses and its sparkling sea, we have whole worlds to choose among. This summer many of us will have a particular aim in mind—the Olympic games, to be held in Berlin the first two weeks in August.

"Some of the fellow Americans we meet along the way may have toured along the Irish coast, with its rugged cliffs, its innumerable bays and coves, and its tiny fishing villages; others may have made tracks through eastern Europe into countries little traveled—Hungary, Jugo-Slavia, and Rumania; still others may have followed the windings of the Rhone valley through sections of France we never dreamed of, or climbed into the mountain passes of the Alps or the Pyrenees. All of them will be full of vivid stories of their experiences.

"Cathedrals we have longed to visit, but which we only knew from photographs [and no photograph can do justice to the interior of Chartres in France or of Durham in northern England]; museums with art treasures unbelievably beautiful in the original, and castles and châteaux perfect in proportion and teeming with history—all these are awaiting those with the means of reaching them."

● "But," we butted once more, "how could such a trip fit in with our own particular budget? We always thought it was impossible for us, and possible only for the rich."

Whereupon Mr. Vanderwarf came down to brass tacks.

"Suppose," he said, "you have a medium sized car, weighing 3,500 pounds, with 27 horsepower and a valuation of $1,400. Suppose you plan to sail on a cabin steamer and remain over there for two months. The round trip for your car will cost you $135. The customs papers, license plates, full coverage insurance, and all the rest will cost you another $112.50, making a total of $247.50. You can run your car on the British Isles for 2½ cents a mile, and on the continent for from 3 to 4½ cents, this including gas, oil, cleaning, greasing and garaging.

"Passenger transportation across the Atlantic varies from $162 to $270 for round trip tourist accommodations, from $100 to $177 for one way on cabin steamers, and from $190 to $276 for one way, top class, on the large express steamers.

"In Great Britain the costs vary from $3 to $7.50 a day for a room and three meals at medium priced hotels. Country inns are, of course, cheaper than those in the large cities. On the continent the prices at the same type of hotels vary from $5 to $10 a day, depending upon the location of the inns, in city or country, and upon the foreign exchange of the country."

● "And that," concluded Mr. Vanderwarf, "ought to convince you of the advantages of a motor tour of Europe. Certainly there is no question about the motor giving greater freedom in seeing the places you want to see, and, with the cost divided among three or four persons, the expenses are relatively small."

"So long," we said. "We'll be seeing you in Berlin."

Miami Planning Spring Festival

MIAMI, Fla.—A series of public spectacles has been planned in Miami for March 27 to April 14 as a part of the Dade county centennial.

The menu includes a children's fashion show, dedication ceremonies at Greynold park, a flower show at Miami Civic center, a homemakers' exposition, a musical extravaganza in the amphitheater at Bayfront park, sailing regattas on Biscayne bay, and a pageant and parade on Pan-American day, April 14.

Cleveland Will Hold Exposition for 100 Days This Summer

CLEVELAND, O.—Construction of buildings for the Great Lakes exposition which will be held here for 100 days this summer—from June 27 to Oct. 4—is under way.

The exposition will mark the centennial of the incorporation of Cleveland as a city. It will occupy more than 125 acres, stretching nearly a mile along Cleveland's downtown lake front.

A dozen buildings to house industrial, scientific, agricultural, transportation, and other exhibits are being erected. Construction work has been started on the Hall of Progress, the Automotive and Horticultural buildings, a great outdoor theater, and a mammoth steel bridge to span railroad tracks and connect the upper and lower levels of the exposition. The bridge will be known as the "Court of Presidents," with pillars dedicated to each of the 16 Presidents who were born in or elected from Great Lakes states.

Duluth Will Have School of Theater

DULUTH, Minn.—Vacationists who have a flare for the drama will have an opportunity this year to follow their bent in the Duluth summer school of the theater.

The school will be conducted by the Duluth Little theater and will be headed by John Wray Young, director of that organization. Actors and directors will make up the faculty. Courses will include acting, stagecraft, directing, voice and diction, costuming, makeup, and play writing. Students will present a series of plays in cooperation with the Little theater. The school will open June 15 and will continue to Aug. 1.

Mexico Is Topic of Travelogue Friday Morning

CAMERON ROGERS, author and traveler, will deliver an illustrated travelogue on Mexico at 11 a. m., Friday at the Fair store. The lecture hall is on the seventh floor.

CAMERON ROGERS.

Mexico is becoming known as a land of thrilling scenery, quaint villages, great metropolitan centers, and ancinet pyramids. Its scenic effects include wooded hills, towering mountains, dense forests, volcanoes, and plam-fringed seas. It has been called the Egypt of the western hemisphere.

Each year the country is attracting more and more tourists. Winter and summer alike, it appeals to the adventurous.

Mexico City vies with Rio de Janeiro for the honor of being the most beautiful city in the Americas. Near by are Xochimilco, with its floating gardens; the pyramids, and the Indian villages. Other centers of tourist interest include Taxco, Monterrey, Acapulco, Mazatlan, Guadalajara, and Vera Cruz.

MIDWAY ISLAND, Pacific Ocean.—(AP)—Possible harbor improvements to the coral studded lagoon here, where 41 navy seaplanes landed safely is a Pan-American Airways terminal survey planned here. The island now a year ago, will be determined in a and a cable station.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address queries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations, to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

How long does it take to get from Chicago to Portland, Ore., by rail? H. M.

The new streamlined train City of Portland makes it in 39¾ hours.

How does Bermuda get its water supply?—F. M.

Through rainfall on the roofs. There is a strictly enforced law that every house must have a suitable water catch and storage tank. Rain falling on the white roofs, or into hillside catchments dug into coral, is diverted to storage tanks, which are regularly inspected and limewashed. There is a reservoir which provides for municipal needs, but the catch system is used for private homes because it is less expensive.

Please tell me something about the Giants' causeway.—N. H.

It is situated on the northern coast of Ireland and, with its piled masses of hexagonal rocks, is a gigantic and fantastic honeycomb. A spectacular coastal road leads to it.

King Named Admiral.

COPENHAGEN.—(AP)—King Edward of Great Britain has been appointed an admiral in the Danish navy.

Golfers at French Lick.

The center of Chicago golfing will shift to French Lick Springs March 27, 28, and 29, when the fifth annual midwestern amateur tournament is played on the championship Hill course. About 75 per cent of the entry list of 500 will come from the Chicago territory.

When Chicago Was Young

The Elegant Eighties

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, December 5, 1886.

DEAR JULIA: I always think of you when we have a fine art exhibit here, remembering the priceless pictures in the gallery of your Fifth avenue home and your knowledge of paintings. I believe you would have enjoyed the Calumet club's exhibit held this week with its really remarkable showing of art treasures owned in Chicago and neighboring cities. No one can say that we of the west have no appreciation of the beautiful.

Among the pictures on the walls of this fashionable men's club none received more attention than Jules Breton's "On the Road in Winter," bought a year or two ago by Henry Field, brother of our merchant prince, and loaned by him for this exhibition.

Mr. Field is a man of culture and has lately been buying many fine pictures. He paid a high price for this Breton painting, but Will thinks it will probably prove a good investment, for paintings are likely to rise in value with the years. "On the Road in Winter" is a composition in which there are only two figures—a young laborer shoveling a path in the snow, pausing to exchange a word with a woman passing by. The setting sun throws a pink glow over the snow and lights up the landscape. It does not stir one deeply, for the incident is too trifling, but the landscape is lovely, though I heard one man who was looking at it question the accuracy of the coloring. I always enjoy a picture in which there are French peasants.

The French school of painting is decidedly in the ascendancy with us, as a glance at the catalog shows. "The Secret Library," by Vibert, is one of these. [This was loaned by C. W. Brega.] "The Bathers," by Bouguereau, is another French picture. The flesh tints are superb and the drawing is unexcelled. This belongs to A. A. Munger.

I met Mrs. James R. McKay as I entered the club, and, in her cordial way, she slipped her hand through my arm and chatted informally and informingly as we made the rounds. Have you ever met Mrs. McKay here? I can't recall. She is often in Europe, so you may have missed each other.

Mrs. James R. McKay, a leader in cultural activities in Chicago in the '80s.

I hope when you come next time she will not be absent, for you two would be most congenial. Her home at 290 Ohio street is the scene of frequent entertainments, for she extends hospitality to distinguished visitors . . . writers, artists, players . . . and we are often invited, being in the neighborhood. Most interesting of all, she is herself a sculptor, having done some good busts of her family. So her comments on the pictures at the exhibit were intelligent, and I was proud to be seen with her.

She is a lovely looking woman, above the usual height and of a commanding appearance, so that you might stand in awe of her if you didn't see her kind eyes and notice at once her great charm of manner. She is like our beautiful and dignified Mrs. Potter Palmer in that. Her hair is turning gray prematurely, but she looks even more distinguished and youthful than ever.

We stood together a long time before "The Wrestler's Challenge," by Munkacsy, the Hungarian artist, whose "Christ Before Pilate" has made him so famous, and before a Kavalski, loaned by Gen. R. A. Alger of Detroit.

I saw so many people I knew today . . . Mrs. Eugene Wheeler, Susie King, Dr. and Mrs. Clinton Locke, Gen. and Mrs. C. W. Drew, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Counselman, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McVicker, Fred Tuttle, Moses Wentworth, and Will Keep. The Calumet club is the ne plus ultra of social organizations here.

Are you reading the "Life of Lincoln," by Nicolay and Hay, appearing in the Century? Will seizes the magazine the moment it comes and is dead to the world till he has devoured it.

We are counting on your making us a visit in January. Please don't forget this. Your loving friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

"On the Road in Winter," Breton painting owned by Henry Field in 1886, is now the property of the Art institute, as is "The Bathers," by Bouguereau. Henry Field of Chicago is a grandson of Henry Field of the '80s.

Mrs. James R. McKay was mother of Mrs. Marion McKay Le Roy of Chicago. Grandchildren of Mrs. McKay are Mrs. Charles G. Cushing Jr. of New York and Albert W. Goodrich Jr. of Cape Town, Africa.

CHICAGO SILHOUETTES.

John Crerar.

Firm and erect he stood, with success in his very bearing;
Ruddy of countenance ever, his lips
running over with laughter;
His merry blue eyes atwinkle beneath his bushy white eyebrows;
On his tongue the burr of the Scotsman, though America was his birthplace.

Such was Chicago's John Crerar, the genial, the generous hearted.
"Blest is the man," sang the psalmist, "who delights in the law of his Maker.
He shall be as a tree by the river.
Whatsoever he does shall be prospered."

So it was with this man. In his lifetime his hand was outstretched in bestowal.
The orphaned, the destitute blessed him; the student was helped by his bounty.

All simply he lived, but in dying a fortune he left to his city . . .
A library called by his name; rich gifts for the poor of Chicago.

Philanthropist, gentleman, churchman
. . . Heaven send us more men like John Crerar!

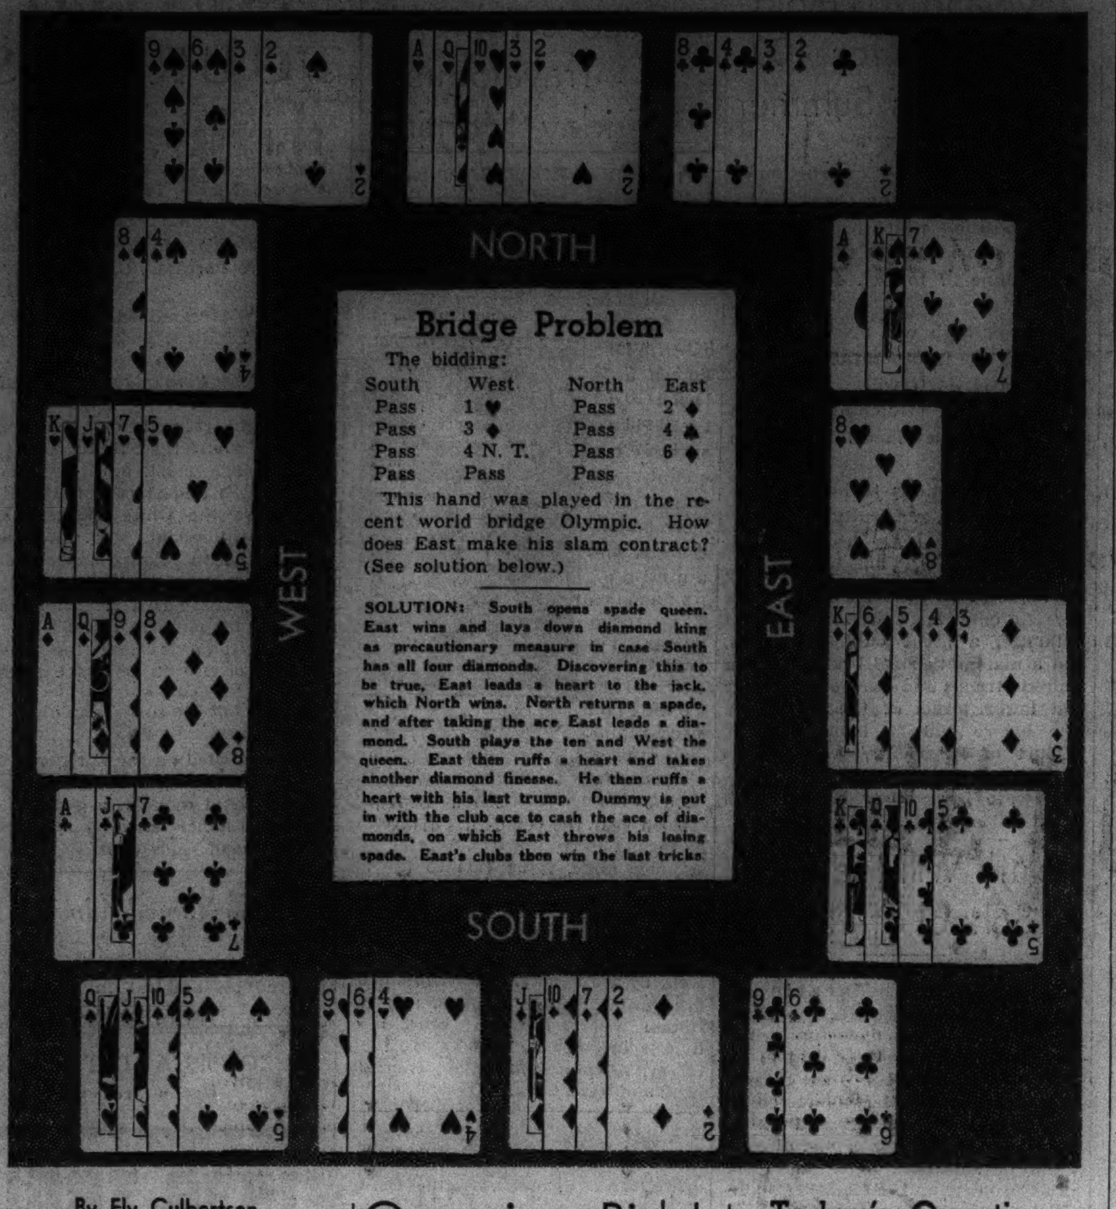
Contract According to Culbertson



Opening Bid Is Easier Than a Raise

By Ely Culbertson

ALMOST all contract players—expert, average, or dub—find it easier to make opening bids and rebids than to raise or take out a partner. With long suits and honor tricks staring them comfortingly in the face, it is a comparatively simple matter to express these holdings in bidding terminology. There is very little strain on the imagination; good eyesight and reasonable articulateness are the prime considerations.

It is in the intelligent bidding of the responding hand that imagination becomes the all-important factor. With only a few face cards or distribution alone to dovetail with partner's expressed holding, the measuring devices, such as point counts, supplied by various authorities can be only none too dependable crutches, to be abandoned as soon as possible.

This is particularly true in those cases where the partner is not the opening bidder, but has overcalled or made a takeout double of an opponent's bid. The fate of the hand may now rest squarely on the responder.

Let us suppose that you are sitting North and hold ♠ K 10 8 ♥ K 9 5 ♦ Q 10 6 3 ♣ 7 5 2. Neither side vulnerable, East has opened the bidding with one heart and your partner has overcalled with one spade. West passes, and it is up to you. Should you bid or pass? Here is the proper way to reason:

Your partner had at his command a great variety of bids, each denoting different strength. He could have doubled or overcalled in the opponent's suit—two hearts. He could have made a jump bid, two spades, urging but not forcing a bid from you. He could have passed. Actually he bid one spade. Now fit his bid into its proper position among the possibilities and you will have solved your problem. He must have a fair hand, but not a really good one, you will discover, and hence your own holding is not good enough to justify the game try which a raise by you would indicate. You would, in fact, have to strengthen your hand by several playing tricks to justify a raise, thus:

♠ K 10 8 2 ♥ K Q ♦ Q J 6 2 ♣ 7 5 2

Obviously this hand is two to three tricks stronger in playability. Yet you should bid only two spades on it. If partner had a strong overcall, almost justifying one of the stronger bids, he could signify it by going on.

Now let us consider the question of taking out partner's overcall. The situation is the same as before—one heart by East, one spade by partner. You hold ♠ 6 2 ♥ 8 5 3 ♦ A K J 5 3 ♣ 7 5 3. Should you bid or pass?

Well, look at it this way: If your partner had opened the bidding with one spade you would respond two diamonds in fear and trembling. Doesn't that answer the question? Why should you make the same bid now, when there is no real obligation on you to make any response?

Self-questionnaires of this type are invaluable in determining whether to bid or pass.

The purpose of all bidding is to convey information to partner and to receive it in return. Herein lies the importance of conventionalizing the meaning of certain bids—bids over takeout doubles, bids in response to takeout doubles, bids and passes when partner has doubled and right hand opponent has redoubled.

Sometimes, however, we are prevented from conveying important information to partner during the auction because, anxious though we may be to tell him our story, we lack the other requirements to speak our piece. Many tragedies have occurred through the anxiety of players who, believing they have valuable information to convey, accomplish their worthy purpose only at the expense of misinforming partner regarding their actual strength.

Reluctantly though you do so, pass you must—and hope that the vital information may somehow be conveyed in the play. Here, for instance, is an example:

NORTH
♠ K Q 6
♥ 8 6 5
♦ K 10 8 7 2

WEST
♥ K Q J 7
♦ Q 5
♣ A K J 10 2

EAST
♠ 10 9 8
♥ 10 9 4
♦ A J 9
♣ Q 7 5 3

SOUTH
♠ A J 7 5 4
♥ A 3 2
♦ 6 4 3

The bidding (neither side vulnerable):

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠
2 ♣	Pass	2 N. T.	Pass
3 N. T.	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's first overcall was decidedly shaded; hence, though he yerned to announce his good spade support, he could not do so without conveying the impression of far greater strength than he had. East had a close free raise of clubs at his first opportunity; when West rebid he decided the time had come for action. Since East had failed to bid no trump over one diamond, South assumed that his stoppers were in spades and therefore opened the diamond six.

Dummy played the queen, and North here found the opportunity to convey by his play the information he could not give in the bidding. It took but a moment to see that declarer had five club tricks and three diamonds—and needed only one additional trick for his contract. Hence South must hold the aces of both spades and hearts or the contract could not be defeated. If North played the king of diamonds South might win the first heart trick and continue a diamond, hoping that North, if he did not have the jack and ten of diamonds, would hold at least the jack, together with the queen and ten of spades. The important thing was to tell South that the diamond suit was hopeless and thus insure a spade shift. North therefore played the deuce of diamonds.

Hoping for a duck of one round of hearts if he concealed the solidity of the clubs, declarer played the heart king immediately, but South took the ace and could not fail to make the shift to spades which his partner's low diamond begged for.

Today's Questions

Question: What is the correct call, first hand, not vulnerable, on the following hand:

♠ A K ♥ A K ♦ K Q 7 5 3 ♣ K 5 3 2

Answer: The hand contains 5½ honor tricks but has six losers; therefore you should bid only one diamond.

Question: What is the proper bid on this hand, both sides vulnerable, North-South part score of 60? North (dealer) holds:

♠ A Q J ♥ A K J ♦ K Q J ♣ A K 8 6

Answer: Bid three no trump.

New Crop of Spring Art Shows Arises

One, Two, and Four Man Exhibits Challenging as Older, Larger Ones.

By Eleanor Jewett.

MARCH is rapidly developing into one of the busiest of months so far as art exhibitions are concerned. No sooner do we polish off a fresh half-dozen shows than a new crop rears its head. This last week saw several openings. On Monday a delightful group of flower paintings and landscapes by Berenice Newman challenged the attention in the Tudor gallery, Chicago Woman's club, while marines by Edgar L. Bloomster aroused the enthusiasm of the boat lover in the Carson, Pirie, Scott galleries and the searcher for intriguing Chicago scenes endangered his eyesight through the close peering at the badly lit paintings by Chicago artists exhibited under the auspices of the South Side Art association on the Auditorium hotel mezzanine.

Tuesday saw the opening in the Arts club of a two man show. Serge Ferat and Harry Carlsson are the artists concerned here and the show definitly has its points, even if it is without the Gertrude Stein explanation in the catalog foreword. The last exhibit at the Arts club was helped to a white light of understanding through the agency of this Parisian bard.

Chicago Galleries Open Display by Four Members.

Wednesday found the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, opening a stunning exhibit of paintings by four artist members. Frank V. Dudley is showing "Around the Year in the Dunes"; Marvin D. Cone—a painter whom Iowa is proud to own—gives us a number of delightful still life arrangements; Oskar Gross offers recent portraits and figure paintings, and Alfred J. Wands "brings a fresh vision to the mountains of Colorado."

The Anderson galleries, 536 South Michigan avenue, have hung a stunning exhibition of American landscapes. There are fine examples of Inness, Moran, Ranger, Tryon, Enneking, Lathrop and others. Many of our new note painters could get a startling idea of how far they must journey to equal the prowess of an earlier generation from this comprehensive American exhibit.

The Boulevard Book shop, Diana Court building, is offering a portfolio of sketches, chiefly in black and white, by Jacque.

Macena Barton's Work Gains Increasing Distinction.

Macena Barton is rapidly becoming a distinguished figure in Chicago painting circles. She has been more or less before the public eye for several years but in her present show [Findlay galleries, 434 South Michigan avenue] she comes definitly to the front as a force to be reckoned with. Gone are the affectations of other seasons. Here is virile, blunt, vigorous painting. There are no subtleties or nuances about Miss Barton's present technique. Her color is solid and clear; the modeling under the paint as obvious as though done with a chisel. Of its kind it is as good as anything you could hope to find—challenging, invigorating, and purely American.

Among the finest of the paintings are the self-portrait in the white hat, "Portrait of Mrs. Howard Josephs," "Portrait [14]," "Shaindel Kalish in the Dybbuk," and "Danseuse." The exquisite quality of tone and color in the little "Still Life [12]" is the more alluring by contrast with the blunt planes of color in Miss Barton's larger pictures.

COMMANDING WATER COLOR

"Italian Vintage" by Nina K. Griffin, one of the most effective water colors to be found in the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts current exhibition of water colors by Illinois artists in the Stevens third floor gallery. The exhibit will continue to April 15.

Miss Pettingell's Work Shows Influence of Claude Buck.

The Allerton gallery offers an exhibition by two young artists. Willard C. Johnson shows water color sketches of the Rockies and Patricia Ann Pettingell is showing oils, chiefly portraits with one or two still life compositions. Knowing nothing about it but judging by her work, one feels convinced that Claude Buck had a hand in her training somewhere. The beautiful patina which is a marked characteristic of Mr. Buck's portraits is suggested in Miss Pettingell's work. The youth of the exhibitors is not to be questioned.

The Association of Arts and Industries, 700 North Michigan avenue, has a most interesting exhibition of textiles and costumes from Guatemala collected by Ruth Reeves. Miss Reeves was sent to Guatemala to study the life and customs and to incorporate their motifs into designs for American manufacture. She succeeded admirably and it is fascinating to trace the various native pieces from which she received the inspiration for designs for materials to be manufactured in the United States. This is applying the science of industrial art in magnificent style. Her adaptations are revealing and beautiful.

Late Joseph Birren's Landscapes Form Retrospective Exhibit.

A retrospective exhibition of landscapes by Joseph Birren, whose death is still felt in Chicago, opened in the D'Arlier gallery, 639 North Michigan avenue, last Thursday to continue to April 1. The exhibition contains many beautiful tree studies painted in Mr. Birren's unique manner.

The Sheridan Avenue galleries, 4818 Sheridan road, are showing several interesting and valuable pieces in ivory and marble from the estate of Edgar S. Baruc. A porcelain group or two are particularly worth while.

The Chicago Art institute announces a series of popularized art lectures showing the life of the people through their arts rather than through their politics or their material possessions, to be given by Dudley Crafts Watson on Sunday afternoons, at 3:30 o'clock, in Fullerton hall. The lectures are free to members; a nominal charge of 25 cents is made to the public. Mr. Watson is using a particularly fine and beautiful selection of hand-colored slides for these travel art lectures. The lecture today will deal with Paris. Next Sunday Mr. Watson will discuss the art and life of Norway. The Sundays in April will be devoted to an especially popular series of illustrated talks, dealing with the sea, water color painters, and "Spring in Painting and Music." This is one of the most beautiful lecture courses the institute has ever offered.

Miss Helen Parker Offers Noon Series of Gallery Lectures.

The Florence Dibell Bartlett series of lectures on "Adventures in the Arts" offered every Thursday evening in Fullerton hall, Art institute, at 6:30, will be continued into the spring by Miss Helen Parker, the lecturer. The continued attendance on the part of the majority of the listeners is evidence of the popularity of the lectures. Next Thursday the subject will be "Three Great Spanish Painters"; April 2, "Art and Life in Spain"; April 9, "Degas and Toulouse-Lautrec." The public is invited free.

Miss Parker is offering another series of talks for busy people who have little time to spend in the Art institute, but who are interested in knowing more about the collections. Miss Parker offers a series of noon gallery talks on Wednesdays from 12:15 to 12:45. Each week a different gallery is visited and the lectures start and stop promptly. A small charge of 15 cents a lecture is asked, or ten lectures for 1 dollar. Increasing attendance shows that the talks are filling an actual need.

Catholic Woman's Club of L. A. Leaves Federation

CHARGING the General Federation of Women's clubs with "being un-American in forcing an issue which is contrary to the dictates of the conscience of hundreds of its members," the Catholic Woman's club of Los Angeles, Cal., has withdrawn from the federation. The club has a membership of about 450.

English Now Go on Camping Tours in Railway Coach

LONDON

Britain probably leads the world i the number and comfort of h youths' hostels, and no she is carrying the ide into yet another fi with the same motive.

Last year we went "camping" b means of bicycles, stopping at camp similar to auto camps. This year w go by railway camping coach.

Over 300 such coaches are fitted u to take campers into the countr leave them to their own devices du ing the day, and to "sleep" the again at night with facilities f breakfast. The spot is selected by th railway, but there is no derth o quiet backwaters in which to "park the camping coach. In other word it is NOT like sleeping in a statio yard!

The idea first was tried in 1933 b the London and North Eastern. Th London, Midland, and Scottish soo followed, and then the Great Wes ern. Last year 200 coaches were i use, and this year over 300 have bee made ready. Privacy, the most che ished characteristic of the Englis home, is preserved. The depths o rural England are at the door of you movable home, and the cost is withi the reach of all. During the day yo can read, write, walk, or cycle in pe fect freedom.

A new way to "tour Britain!"

A First Robin

By Eleanor Jewett.

The silence that was winter's power
Is broken by a robin's note;
He swings upon a neighbors tree
And music trickles from his throa

Gone are the days when leaden skies
Pressed down their seal upon our lips
Spring days are dawning blue and gol
Now on the hill a white lamb skips.

The cold that froze our laughter the
When snow and ice held all the lan
Has vanished with the robin's song—
How warm the sun upon my hand!

CORN CRIPPLE FOR MONTHS*

WALKS IN 3 DAYS!

Here's the true story of how Billie Buckley, Denver, Colo., removed CORN quickly, safely and completely with BLUE-JAY CORN PLASTERS

"For months I couldn't play with other boys and girls—but sat in a wheel chair like in this picture—all because I had a big corn that grew deep into my heel. We tried just about everything, but nothing seemed to help and I began to wonder if I'd ever have any fun again. Of course I got awfully blue—and it made my mother feel badly too. We were all ready to try an expensive operation when a friend of mother's told her about Blue-Jay. It sounded too good to be true—but we put a Blue-Jay pad on that night. Well, it seemed to work like magic. In 3 days we took the pad off and the whole corn lifted right out easy as anything, roots and all. Now I can play baseball or any other game as well as ever—and you can bet I'm one hundred per cent for Blue-Jay."

This is an extremely unusual case—but demonstrates beyond all doubt the superiority of Blue-Jay as treatment for even the most treacherous corns.*

WHY A CORN HURTS
A corn is shaped like a tack and pressure from the shoe forces the point against sensitive nerves that flash pain throughout the system. That's why a corn seems to "hurt all over."

HOW TO STOP THE PAIN
Center the gentle Blue-Jay medication (A) directly over the corn. Pad (B) is held securely in place with special Wet-Pruf adhesive strip (C). Agonizing pain ceases instantly. The pad is soft for greatest possible comfort . . . yet snug-fitting enough to be unnoticed under smart shoes.

HOW TO REMOVE THE CORN
After 3 days remove the Blue-Jay, soak foot in warm water, and you lift the corn right out.

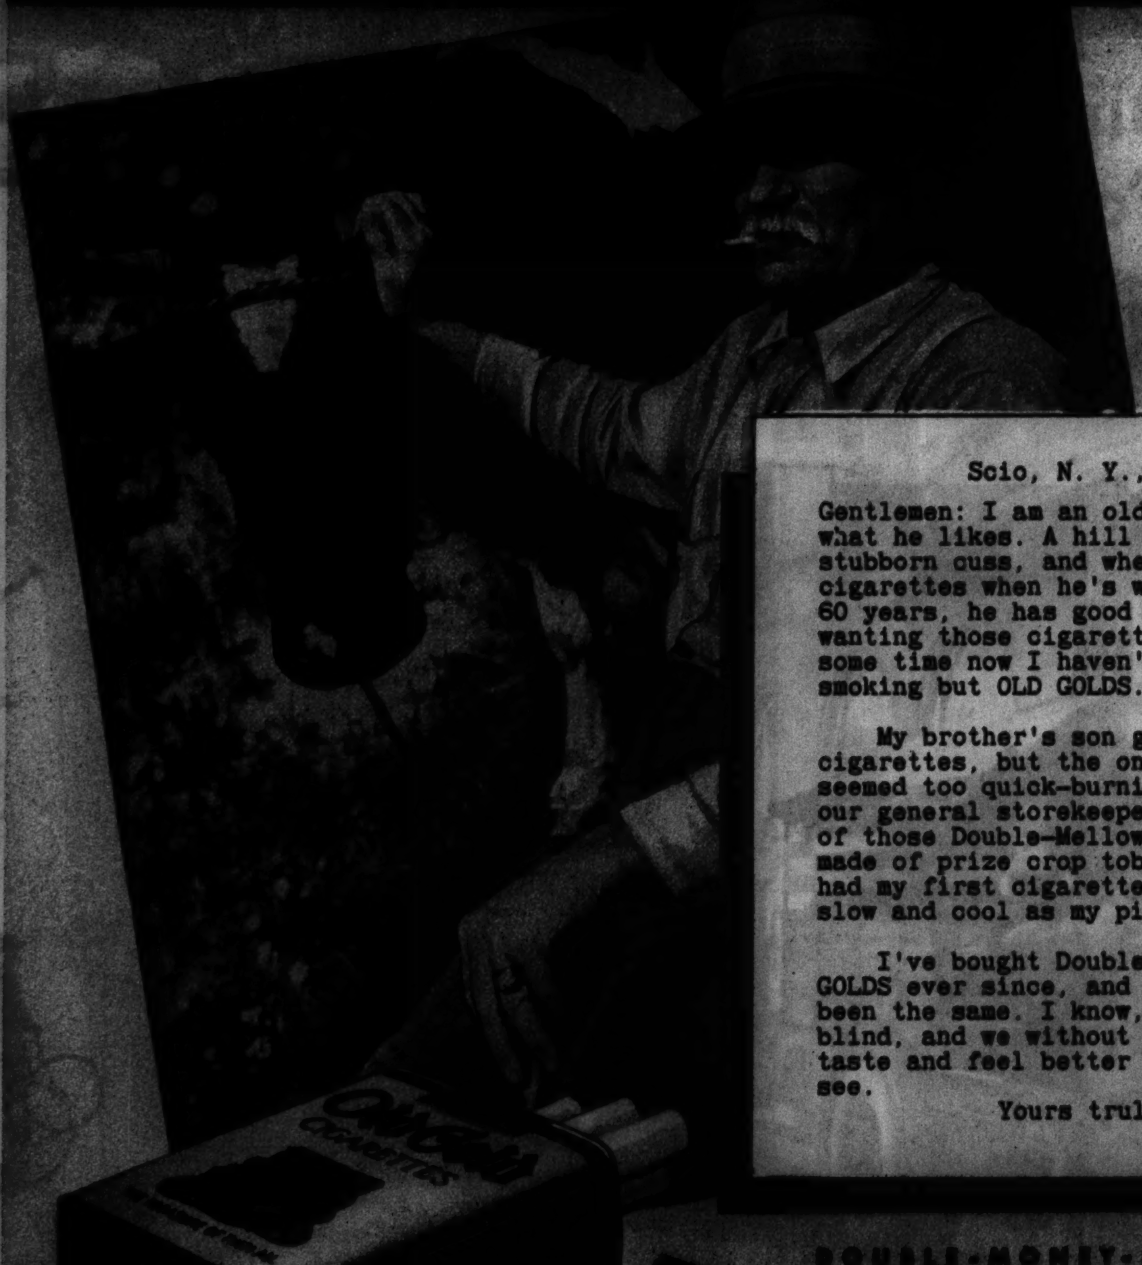
A FARMER WRITES AN "AD" ABOUT DOUBLE-MELLOW OLD GOLDS!



Snapshot of Jerry Hurley taken last Fall by his brother John. Jerry's farm is located on a mountainside, 8 miles from Wellsville, N. Y. (Post Office, Scio.)

Scio, N. Y., Nov. 16, 1935

Gentlemen: I am an old man who knows what he likes. A hill farmer is a stubborn cuss, and when he takes to cigarettes when he's well gone by 60 years, he has good reasons for wanting those cigarettes. And for some time now I haven't touched any smoking but OLD GOLDS.

My brother's son got me on cigarettes, but the ones he gave me seemed too quick-burning. One day our general storekeeper stood me one of those Double-Mellow OLD GOLDS, made of prize crop tobaccos. And I had my first cigarette that burnt as slow and cool as my pipe.

I've bought Double-Mellow OLD GOLDS ever since, and every pack has been the same. I know, because I'm blind, and we without eyes learn to taste and feel better than you who see.

Yours truly,
Jerry Hurley

WHAT DEXTROSE IS—AND WHAT IT MEANS

Dextrose is a sugar, the normal sugar of the human body. From Dextrose comes the energy we need to breath, to walk, to talk... yes, even to think. Dextrose banishes fatigue, balances the wear and repair of the body. In Dextrose is glowing, radiant warmth and food-energy. And of greatest importance, Dextrose is instantly digested—in fact, it is immediately absorbed by the bloodstream without need of digestive effort. Kre-mel is rich in Dextrose!

A PICTORIAL PARADE OF AMERICAN PLANES

FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK—TWO OF THE ARMY'S SINGLE SEAT FIGHTERS—The planes pictured here were designed and built before 1933, and consequently do not perform like newer equipment. The ship above is the Curtiss P-6-E, with a 650 horse power Conqueror engine. Top speed is 195 miles per hour. The wings are 31½ feet wide, fuselage is 22½ feet long. The landing gear is fixed.

THE BOEING P-12, one of 150 similar fighters purchased prior to 1932 by the air corps. The air cooled engine is a 500 horse power Wasp. The upper wing has a span of 30 feet, the fuselage is 20 feet long. Highly supercharged engines gave these ships performance of 195 miles per hour at 15,000 feet. . . . For convenience in mounting in a loose leaf folder, filing markers are printed at the left. . . . Other American airplanes will be pictured in approximate scale in forthcoming issues.
